

Giant Rail System to Be Proposed

Plan Calls for Largest Corporate Reorganization Ever

By Jay Perkins

Washington (AP) — Seven financially ailing northeastern railroads should be consolidated into one rail system in the largest corporate reorganization in history, the U.S. Railway Assn. (USRA) will recommend Monday.

Sources said the planning agency will call for the consolidation of slightly over 15,000 miles of track in 17 states into one quasi-government corporation called ConRail.

The remaining one-third of the track should be sold to private carriers, abandoned or subsidized by tax dollars, the association will recommend.

If approved by Congress, the association's plan will set up a rail system extending across America's manufacturing heartland from the East Coast to the Mississippi River.

National Impact

Although only 17 states will be affected directly, the impact of the shuffle will be felt across the country. The 17-state region contains 55% of the nation's manufacturing plants and much of these products are shipped by rail. In addition, the region is a major producer of coal and manufacturer of steel.

The plan will recommend that about 5,700 miles of little used track now owned by the seven railroads be abandoned or that train operations over those lines be subsidized by state and federal money. Those lines carry about 2% of all traffic moving over the seven railroads.

The proposal also will recommend that the remaining 2,000-plus miles of track be sold to private railroads to give the new consolidated railroad competition in all major markets.

The track to be sold is mostly either money-making or located where it would give the private railroads new routes into profitable markets.

Controversy Assured

The association's final system plan is sure to arouse controversy within Congress

— primarily because of the proposed widespread abandonments or subsidization of branch lines. Several congressmen already are on record as opposed to the USRA concept. Others have stated that they would prefer to see the government purchase the railroad rights of way, upgrade the track and lease the renovated lines back to private railroads.

There also has been discussion within the Ford administration of other ways to solve the financial problems of the northeastern railroads. The Justice Dept., for example, has stated it would like to see the railroads put up for auction and sold to the highest bidder in a controlled liquidation.

Transportation Secretary William Coleman Jr. also has expressed some enthusiasm for the controlled liquidation concept although he said last week the Ford administration will support the USRA plan if certain conditions are included.

The Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973, which set up USRA and started the reorganization process, calls for Congress to make a decision on the USRA proposal within 60 working days after the final proposal is submitted.

If the plan is rejected, the USRA, the Transportation Dept. and the Interstate Commerce Commission will be ordered to huddle and make necessary changes. Congress then will have 60 additional working days to consider the modified proposal.

Price Tag Unknown

USRA says the reorganization is easily the largest in history in terms of total assets, although it declines to put a final price tag on the takeover, since that price will be the subject of litigation.

A spokesman for the planning agency said the book value of the seven railroads is around $4.444 billion but notes the Penn Central — the largest of the seven carriers — claims the value of its properties as a working railroad is more than $7 billion.

The final value of the properties to be reorganized will be determined by a special reorganization court.

The previously largest corporate shuffle in American history — although there is some question whether it could be termed a reorganization — was in 1911 when the government broke up Standard Oil. The Library of Congress said the net value of property in the Standard Oil combination before the breakup was $660.5 million.

The railroads the association proposes to consolidate are the Penn Central, the Erie Lackawanna, the Reading, the Central of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley, the Lehigh and Hudson River and the Ann Arbor.

The Penn Central will form the backbone of the new ConRail system. Much of the Erie Lackawanna and the Reading will be sold to privately owned railroads but portions of both roads will be included in ConRail. All seven railroads currently are in reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

Rep. Peter Rodino

One Year Later Rodino: Why Me?

"In all this, Richard M. Nixon has acted in a manner contrary to his trust as President and subversive of constitutional government, to the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice and to the manifest injury of the people of the United States."

"Wherefore Richard M. Nixon, by such conduct, warrants impeachment and trial, and removal from office."

By Mike Feinsilber

Washington (UPI) — There is still bewilderment in his voice when he recalls what he was doing a year ago. "Why me?" he asks, in mocking memory, his hands thrown open. "My God, why Pete Rodino?"

Shortly after getting the assignment, Rep. Pete Rodino Jr. checked into the hospital for five days. He says he had to come to grips in his own mind with what he was undertaking.

No more opera for this opera lover. No more paddleball in the House gym for this untested new chairman from Newark, N.J., the Democratic politician-lawyer and son of an Italian immigrant.

The seniority system had thrust Rodino into the chairmanship of the House Judiciary Committee before impeachment of Richard Nixon had become a possibility. Now, suddenly, after the Saturday night massacre and the "firestorm" of public outrage, a constitutional coup d'etat was to be undertaken and the charge had to be led by Rodino, plucked from the clubby obscurity and warm leather benches of the House of Representatives.

"Why me?" Rodino still asked. His awesome responsibility was brought home, Rodino says, when Sen. John Stennis telephoned, saying he would like a word with him.

Stennis, chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, is one of the towering figures in Congress. Rodino says he volunteered to go to the senator's office, but no, Stennis insisted, the senator would come to the congressman.

Stennis' message, he says, went like this: There have been times of crisis before. It has been to the country's fortune that each crisis brought forth a great man to deal with it. Now, said Stennis, destiny was calling Rodino.

Rodino sinks further into his black leather desk chair, stirred by the memory.

Internal Pressures

Despite a White House offensive to discredit his committee, Rodino says the most intense pressures he felt were internal. As months of closed committee "briefings" dragged on, from February through July, impeachment firebrands demanded results. In the House, they asked if they had made a bad mistake in leaving matters to Rodino.

Only later, he says, did one of them, Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., no longer in Congress, come to him in admiration of his strategy. "Pete," Waldie said, "I was wrong, wrong, wrong, and you were right, right, right."

Two Mistakes

Rodino says he made two mistakes. Reporters hounded him asking when the inquiry would finally end and when the decisions on impeachment would be made. "April 30?" someone asked. "Yes, yes — April 30," Rodino replied, fleeing.

Then he went up to his office and closed the door and spoke to his administrative assistant, Francis O'Brien.

"Francis, I should never have committed myself to that." He had given ammunition to antagonists to be used as the inquiry dragged into July.

The other mistake, Rodino says, occurred early on, during a procedural vote by the committee on subpoena power. Republicans insisted on a voice in the issuance of subpoenas; Rodino wanted a freer hand.

He allowed the matter to go to a vote. All 21 Democrats voted with Rodino; all 17 Republicans voted against him — exactly the appearance of a partisan split Rodino

Ford Loses Veto Fight in Senate Over Health Bill

From News Wires

Washington — For the first time this year President Ford lost a veto fight in one of the two chambers of Congress as the Senate voted Saturday to override his veto of a $2.02-billion health services and nurses training bill.

Ford had vetoed the measure as too costly only hours before. The Senate voted 67 to 15 to override. Nebraska Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska voted against overriding. The tally was 12 votes more than the two-thirds majority required.

The vote sends the presidential veto to the House, which also must vote to override before the bill can be passed over the President's objections. House leaders were unavailable for comment on the Senate's override.

This year the House has failed to override vetoes on four key measures: a farm bill, an attempt to provide public service jobs, curbs on strip mining and a housing bill.

Quick Action

Congressional observers attributed the size of the Senate vote and the speed with which the Senate acted in part to the popularity of health measures and the relatively small amount of money in the bill.

In a short debate before voting, Democratic and Republican senators said the bill ties together essential national health and nursing services. They also noted that the bill was only an authorization and that the Senate Appropriations committee will have a chance to decrease the amount of money to be appropriated.

The bill is designed to expand community mental health centers and authorizes several new programs, including ones for the treatment of hypertension, rape prevention and control and the treatment of hemophilia. In addition, it would extend nurses training programs and calls for a one-year extension of the National Health Service Corps.

The programs were described as vitally needed for health care in the nation by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who voted to override. Kennedy said the bill was "fiscally sound."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said the bill was not a "raid on the treasury."

'Outlived Usefulness'

Ford said in his veto message the nursing school programs "have outlived their usefulness" because of a spurt in nursing degree programs around the country between 1970 and 1974.

He specifically pointed to $30 million for the treatment of hypertension, $17 million for rape prevention and control, $10 million for home health demonstration agencies, and $16 million for hemophilia treatment and blood separation centers.

Ford's veto was his 36th since he took office Aug. 9, 1974. His first came four days later when on Aug. 13 he rejected a bill to increase the pay of deputy U.S. Marshals.

Congress overrode four of his vetoes last year — on veterans benefits, freedom of information, vocational rehabilitation and railroad retirement benefits.

Appropriation Bill

The Senate also passed a bill Saturday appropriating $37.5 billion in funds for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and various agencies through Sept. 30, 1976. The vote was 73 to 7. The bill now goes back to the House for approval of several senate amendments.

The primary change the senate made would add $75 million for a homeowners relief fund to cover loans of up to $250 a month to unemployed homeowners who have received foreclosure notices. Total HUD funding would be $8.8 billion.

The measure, which is $8.7 billion more than the House voted earlier, also includes funds for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, Veterans Administration, National Science Foundation and the disaster relief programs. A House-Senate conference probably will be called to work out the differences.

Turkey Vote: Executive Distrust, Ethnic Pressure

By Peter Lisagor

(c) Chicago Daily News

Washington — The House action that led to Turkey's retaliatory move against U.S. military bases reflects a deepening distrust of executive decision-making in foreign policy and the growing strength of ethnic pressures in Congress.

Before Vietnam and Watergate eroded presidential authority, Congress usually was responsive to any Chief Executive who asked for support in what he defined to be in the "national interest."

But the House, led by pro-Greek members, ignored the entreaties of President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger lifting the embargo against Turkish arms aid was "essential to the vital national defense interests of the U.S.," as Ford put it.

Legislative leaders in both the House and Senate have been aware that younger, more activist members were less inclined to accept administration arguments at face value and more eager to assert a congressional role in foreign affairs.

Those favoring the embargo against Turkey even questioned the value of U.S. military installations in Turkey, despite the President's insistence they were vital, not only to American interests, but to those of NATO.

Ethnic Influence Grows

The influence of ethnic groups on U.S. policy has been traditional, but in recent years it, too, has grown measurably.

Administration officials blame the pro-Israeli lobby for the House International Relations Committee's rejection of a $350 million arms deal with Jordan last week. They say the measure would have been approved except for the pressure mounted by those who feared the deal would jeopardize Israel's security.

Americans of Greek origin, prompted by Turkey's invasion of Cyprus with U.S.-supplied arms, held a mass rally here last Saturday to protest the lifting of the embargo. And their influence obviously was felt.

Chairman Thomas Morgan, D-Pa., of the House International Relations Committee, who favored repeal of the embargo, said in his 30 years in Congress, he had "never seen the kind of pressure that was put on members, including myself." He asked "there was real pressure from the American Greeks."

Some members conceded the vote against Turkey also had an anti-Kissinger element in it. Kissinger is identified in many minds as a symbol of administration secretiveness and high-handedness in dealing with Congress.

Congressional sources insist that principle also was a factor, citing Turkey's use of weapons provided by the United States for aggressive purposes as a breach of the law under which aid is granted. But they agree that principle was mixed up with emotion in the House action.

Defiance and Shock

Turkey's retaliation was greeted with defiance and shock here. It was unexpectedly sudden and sweeping, according to officials, who were most concerned about the halt of intelligence operations in Turkey. Soviet military moves are monitored from installations in Turkey.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes said the Turkish action was "a brutal lesson" that demonstrated that "there is simply no realistic way for a legislative body to make major foreign policy

From News Wires

Warning of foreign policy disaster, the Senate's Democratic and Republican leaders pleaded with the House on Saturday to reconsider its vote cutting off arms shipments to Turkey.

Some senators argued the move is a threat rather than a boon to Greece because Turkey might commandeer

African Atrocities Attacked

Kampala, Uganda (UPI) — Tanzania Saturday attacked black African states, specifically Uganda, who criticize atrocities committed by white minority governments but not atrocities committed by black states.

The African nation said it was boycotting the Organization of African Unity (OAU) meeting here to protest "the murders and massacres which have been perpetrated by the Ugandan government."

In a statement made public in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, and passed on to delegates to the OAU foreign ministers' meeting, Tanzania said all Africans rightly protested oppression in South Africa and Rhodesia.

"But when massacres, oppression and torture are used against Africans in the independent states in Africa, there is no protest from anywhere in Africa," the statement said.

The Tanzanian attack threw a shadow over the OAU meeting, which is preparing for a summit of African leaders this week. Neither the government of President Idi Amin nor OAU officials would comment.

Zambia and Botswana also have boycotted the OAU meeting.

$40,000 Paid

About $40,000 was paid to win the release of two American students and a Dutch woman who were held in a jungle camp in Zaire by African guerrillas, Associated Press reported well-informed sources told them. Stephen Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., was released Friday and flew to Dar es Salaam. Carrie Hunter of Atherton, Calif., and Emilie Bergmann of Holland were released last month.

Knee Reader
Some people tell fortunes by reading palms. Toni Lockhart of San Diego, Calif., reads knees, left knees. The former legal secretary calls herself Gypsy Rose Knee and says she has pondered more than 2,000 knees in her brief career. "Knees are the most innocent part of the body. They are like babies," she said. "Knees are not calloused like the hand, not covered with hair like the head." She says left knees make better reading because it is in a direct line to the heart.

Thieu Visit?

The British Home Office is considering an application by former South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu to visit Britain for six months to see his son, who is in a London school. Officials declined to comment on a report Thieu would seek permanent political asylum in Britain. Thieu has lived in isolation in Taiwan since April 26.

Nixon News?

Former President Richard Nixon is negotiating the possibility of a televised memoir that would include discussion of Watergate, according to NBC News chief Richard Wald. "I want to find out what it's all about, if it's journalistically interesting. Just what would I be buying?" Wald said. "Do they want $1 million? Or 10¢? I don't know." CBS and ABC have turned down offers on the grounds anything Nixon would have to say about Watergate would be spot news.

Gas Shortage May Touch Residential

Washington (AP) — If the predictions in a government report prove true, sometime this winter Americans may find their gas stoves won't always light for cooking and gas furnaces won't always fire up for heating.

A report by the House Government Operations Committee says the nation could experience its worst natural gas shortage in history this winter. "For the first time curtailments might reach residential users," the report says.

The report is the latest in a series of forecasts from some segments of government that the natural gas shortage this winter will be even more severe than last when tens of thousands of workers lost their jobs because the fuel wasn't available for manufacturing needs.

At least one House subcommittee and the staff of another federal agency remain skeptical. They claim producers may be holding back supplies to exert pressures to drive up prices.

Underestimating?

In March, for instance, a staff report of the Federal Trade Commission recommended federal legal action against the nation's 11 major natural gas producers, claiming they were underestimating natural gas reserves in an attempt to influence "the price at which producers sell natural gas to interstate pipeline companies."

And the House commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations has been looking into whether the industry has been deliberately withholding gas by underestimating supplies and failing to produce adequately from existing wells.

Warnings of a nationwide crisis of emergency proportions are contained in the Government Operations report, which says the shortage for the year ending March 1976 will be 45% greater than the previous 12 months.

The report says the states of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, New Jersey and North Carolina will be hardest hit.

West Virginia, for instance, might see a drastic migration of its population and relocation of much of its industry.

In Kentucky, the report forecasts a 100% curtailment of the fuel to 135 companies that employ 30,000.

A 60% shortage is predicted for Ohio and the report quotes the governor as saying his state will be faced with an "unprecedented crisis."

Columbia Gas of New York State, the report says, will com-

Supply Lines

In all, 32 states depend on interstate natural gas for 90% of their gas supplies, and 19 states are totally dependent on the interstate supplies that come mainly from the Louisiana and Texas gulf coast.

Natural gas is consumed by 180 million Americans and comprises 40% of total domestic energy production.

Severe shortages of the fuel, Commerce Secretary Rogers C.

B. Morton said last month, would prevent a recovery from the recession and would "cause a significant downturn in our future living standards."

There are two schools of thought about why there will be a shortage. The first is that the U.S. is just plain running out of gas, that there is less and less to be discovered.

The second is government controls keep the price so low a producer has no economic incentive to risk money in a search for new fields.

Skateboard Making Zooming Comeback

By Robert L. Rose
(c) Chicago Daily News

Dana Point, Calif. — Skateboards are back, and California's got 'em. So has Florida. And Hawaii. And look out, everywhere, U.S.A. they're coming your way, the biggest and latest West Coast fad since the revival of the Hula Hoop.

"It's fantastic," Don Thomas, assistant publisher of Surfer Magazine, the surfer's bible, said, "It's much bigger than it was the last time around, 10 years ago."

So big in fact that Surfer, which turned out only four issues of its Skateboarder Magazine in the mid-'60s and dropped it, now has revived the publication and put it out just this month.

Polyurethane Wheels

The comeback started here just a little over a year ago when a young surfer, Frank Nasworthy, 24, started fooling around with the recently developed polyurethane wheels used in high quality regular skates. He put them on skateboards and handed them out to friends, after failing to interest manufacturers.

He called his wheels the Cadillac Wheel, and pretty soon he was disposing of them by the gross and a revived industry was born.

Bob Bahne of Bahne Skateboards began turning out a fiberglass board — like a surfboard — with the new wheels. At first, he sold about 100 a week.

"Now it's thousands a week," he said, declining to say just how many thousands.

In Florida, Dana Haffke of Roller Sport Inc. of Jacksonville said his company has gone from turning out 80,000 wheels a month to 20,000 a day and still is not keeping up with demand.

Not Cheap

And these new boards aren't cheap.

First class wheels go for anywhere up to $50. The price is usually around $30 to $35 and there are sales. Cheaper boards go for around $10 to $20.

In the old days the going price, if you bought a board instead of making one, was about $7.95 or less.

"The wheels were made out of very hard plastic, all kinds of junk, and the boards weren't flexible," says Bahne. "There really wasn't much you could do except go in a straight line. If you had to make a turn you had to do it very gingerly or you'd get yourself thrown off."

"But with urethane, which is really the big thing behind the new boom, the wheel grips the road — and it doesn't make all the noise the old ones did. As it warms up it grips even better and you can do a lot more, like slaloms. It's safer."

Tax Reform Probably Delayed Until '76

(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — The major tax reform package promised by the Democratic Congress seems certain to be delayed until next year, a presidential election year.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee has decided to produce a series of tax reform measures rather than one omnibus bill — but the first measure probably won't emerge from his panel until January.

Jail Terms

Jail terms may some day be based on a computer analysis of how people with similar backgrounds and criminal histories were sentenced and behaved after release. Known as prediction models, the concept is very complicated and controversial, but definitely on the horizon.

"Policy makers are going to have to face them," says one observer of the criminal justice system, "because research is going to come up with some good ones."

Profitable

Catching criminals can be profitable for the FBI. It says that in the last fiscal year fines, savings and recovered stolen property in FBI cases totaled almost $½ billion — an average of $1.11 for every $1 of direct funds appropriated to the bureau. FBI cases led to 15,750 convictions, including 1,300 organized crime figures. The bureau also found 32,403 fugitives it was looking for — Patricia Hearst not among them.

Consumer Delay

It looks as if the showdown between President Ford and Congress over a bill to create a consumer protection agency will be delayed until at least September.

The bill, reported by the House Government Operations Committee July 18, would have an ombudsman-type agency represent the public in various federal regulatory proceedings.

Ford argues the cost of the new agency is inflationary, saying departments and agencies themselves should do a better job of seeking out consumer views. Backers of the legislation, which has already passed the Senate, counter the agency would cut government costs by pointing out unnecessary programs or those which aren't working properly — besides saving consumers money.

The bill will surely pass the House but the question is, by how much? There's even some talk of delaying sending the bill to the White House until early next year, closer to election time, to make the President think twice before vetoing. The House has yet to override a Ford veto this session.

Gasoline Gradualism

Recognizing the character of what he'd really like, given his druthers, President Ford's compromise energy bill sent to Congress Friday makes more than a just meaningless gesture to opposition Democrats. The administration backed off its desire for totally uncontrolled crude oil prices. It is willing, too, to extend the time frame by which prices could slowly advance.

Neither Mr. Ford nor Congress wants the existing oil price control law to expire Aug. 31 without a replacement. If that happened, about 60% of the nation's domestically produced crude would leap immediately from the current price maximum of $5.25 per barrel to perhaps $13. Such an advance would, no doubt, act to curb usage, which is to be desired. But it might also introduce considerable instability in the market place.

It could even halt the nation's economic recovery dead in its tracks.

So this is no playful, innocent business in which the White House and Capitol Hill are engaged.

Mr. Ford's quest to reduce American dependence upon foreign oil sources is a proper one. There is reason to wonder, however, whether gradualism in gasoline prices will produce the desired conservation response. That could only have come with a stunning increase in gasoline taxes or rationing — tactics which Mr. Ford abhors.

Drivers tend to become accustomed to and accept gasoline prices which go up in small increments, just as citizens tolerate gradual erosions in their civil and constitutional rights — erosions which would be thunderously challenged if ordered in one swoop. Off recent history, one can say the price of gasoline must rise plenty for consumption to fall a little.

Therefore, a tough challenge to the international oil cartel doesn't appear part of America's contemporary strategy.

Why not? Does the nation have no choice but to let the cartel control domestic energy prices? Increase the cost of oil and coal prices rise accordingly. Need the United States stack its economic clout?

International oil students believe the U.S. could put telling leverage upon the cartel, if it wants to play the same sort of hardball. America could judiciously impose crude oil import quotas, pressuring weak cartel members, as stiff conservation directives simultaneously depress demand. There is a limit beyond which some cartel nations dare not go in reducing oil production.

Writing in the New Republic, Daniel Yefin says Washington can also be much harder upon American oil companies which act as docile extensions of cartel members. They meekly accept cartel prices and then stick it, without mercy, to home customers.

The United States daily consumes one-third of the world's oil product. Managers of a market that gigantic inherently have some economic weight in deciding what they buy, from whom and at what price.

Yet these sorts of disciplined considerations seem absent from Washington these days. The talk is mostly how to make politically least obnoxious inevitably higher prices for energy.

Nobody's Got a Secret

Lest anyone doubt the age of candor has engulfed American institutions, we offer three recent bits of evidence.

The first — disclosure of Henry Kissinger's garbage to the world — goes to show it's almost impossible to keep anything secret any more.

That being so, many people in public life are taking pains not to have any secrets. Exhibit one: a labor leader testifying before a Senate committee prefaced his remarks by announcing they were written by his assistant. Exhibit two: Congress is thinking of making the Congressional Record truthful.

The first two examples do not merit much heavy thinking, though it may be — as the readers of the secretary of state's trash can contend — that the garbage might be useful to someone trying to concoct a nefarious plot.

But reform of the Congressional Record would really confirm that a new era of openness has dawned in Washington. The Record has long deserved to be on the fiction shelves of libraries as well as in the reference room.

On Oct. 18, 1972, the Record contained a speech by Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana. As a matter of fact, Boggs had disappeared two days before in an Alaskan plane accident. He left the speech behind for inclusion in the Record at the session's end. And recently two hilarious and completely fictitious parodies appeared in the Record, credited to two congressmen who had absolutely nothing to do with them.

The problem is that the Congressional Record is not a record of what happens in Congress — though at times it is that, too — so much as a record of what members of Congress would like people to think happened in Congress.

This is because representatives and senators have the right to "revise and extend" their remarks on the floor. Consequently they can edit what they said so it reads better and even insert material that never saw the light of day or heard the sound of voice in the chambers.

In keeping with the times, Rep. William A. Steiger, Wisconsin Democrat, has secured 70 co-sponsors for a Truth-in-Record resolution. It would require material inserted later in the Record to be set in a different type face, limit extensions and revisions to correction of grammatical and typographical errors, and order that remarks and data be printed in the exact order delivered.

Steiger's resolution makes sense. While the citizen-in-the-street reads the Record about as often as he reads Proust, that publication is a source relied on by many followers of legislation, historians and students of government. If the Record claims to be THE record, it ought to be accurate. Even if candor weren't convulsing government at the moment, Steiger's proposal would deserve adoption.

MAX LERNER

Politicians Human

Washington — Poor Stanley Hathaway! He had scarcely been confirmed by the Senate as secretary of the interior, after a strenuous resistance against him, when he turned up sick and under psychiatric care at a hospital. Now he has resigned.

As usual in such cases the explanation given is depression due to overwork and exhaustion. What doctors always fail to add is the overwork and exhaustion usually result from an effort to escape depression, which is the underlying factor.

The remarkable fact is not that politicians experience depression, but that so few of them do — at least publicly. No vocation is wholly exempt, all the way from corporate executives to writers and painters.

But the politician either gets some continuing ego satisfactions which keep him going, or else the fires of hope — for moving up a recognized ladder of expanding office and power — are never wholly extinguished. For both reasons there are psychic rewards which seem to outweigh the grubby details, the covert deals, the half-lies and quarter-truths, the evasions, compromises, dishonesties, that have become the familiar stuff of the political vocation.

A British friend has written a long manuscript with the thesis that in the history of literature, art and religion the geniuses have generally been manic-depressives. He backs it up with copious evidence. He believes their deepest insights and most productive work come in the manic phase of the manic-depressive cycle, while the torments of the depressive phase may be seen as the price they pay for being so close to their unconscious.

It doesn't follow, of course, that everyone who is a manic-depressive is thereby a genius. And few politicians seem to qualify for any road to genius. The drive toward popularity keeps them close to the widespread stereotypes, and inhibits much depth of self-exploration.

Judging from press photographs and public appearance, politicians are in a constant manic phase, without the wild plunge into the depths of which artists are capable. The frozen grin, the vigorous pumping handshake, the breezy informality become built-in permanent features of the personality. Perhaps they wouldn't know what to do if they stopped running and grinning.

There are few suicides among heads of government, although the act is not unknown on lower levels, as with James Forrestal in the late '40s.

American Presidents have not wholly escaped their bouts of depression. George Washington had his black hours — and he had reason — during the despondent days of the military fortunes of the revolution. Thomas Jefferson had migraines which came at depressive low points in his life. Abraham Lincoln was a deeply introverted, melancholic figure who cracked his homely jokes to break his inner tensions.

There are instances closer to our time. Woodrow Wilson was a moody introvert who couldn't brook having his will crossed. Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover both became isolated in the White House, the former bottled up in his silences, the latter bewildered and cut off by social forces he couldn't understand.

FDR was billed as the "happy warrior," but the tensions of office — along with his physical ailment — left him with a deposit of brain damage in the later days. All the Kennedys have had the black, turbulent moods of the Irish imagination. Nixon went further than any of the other Presidents in turning inward with depressive, self-destructive rage.

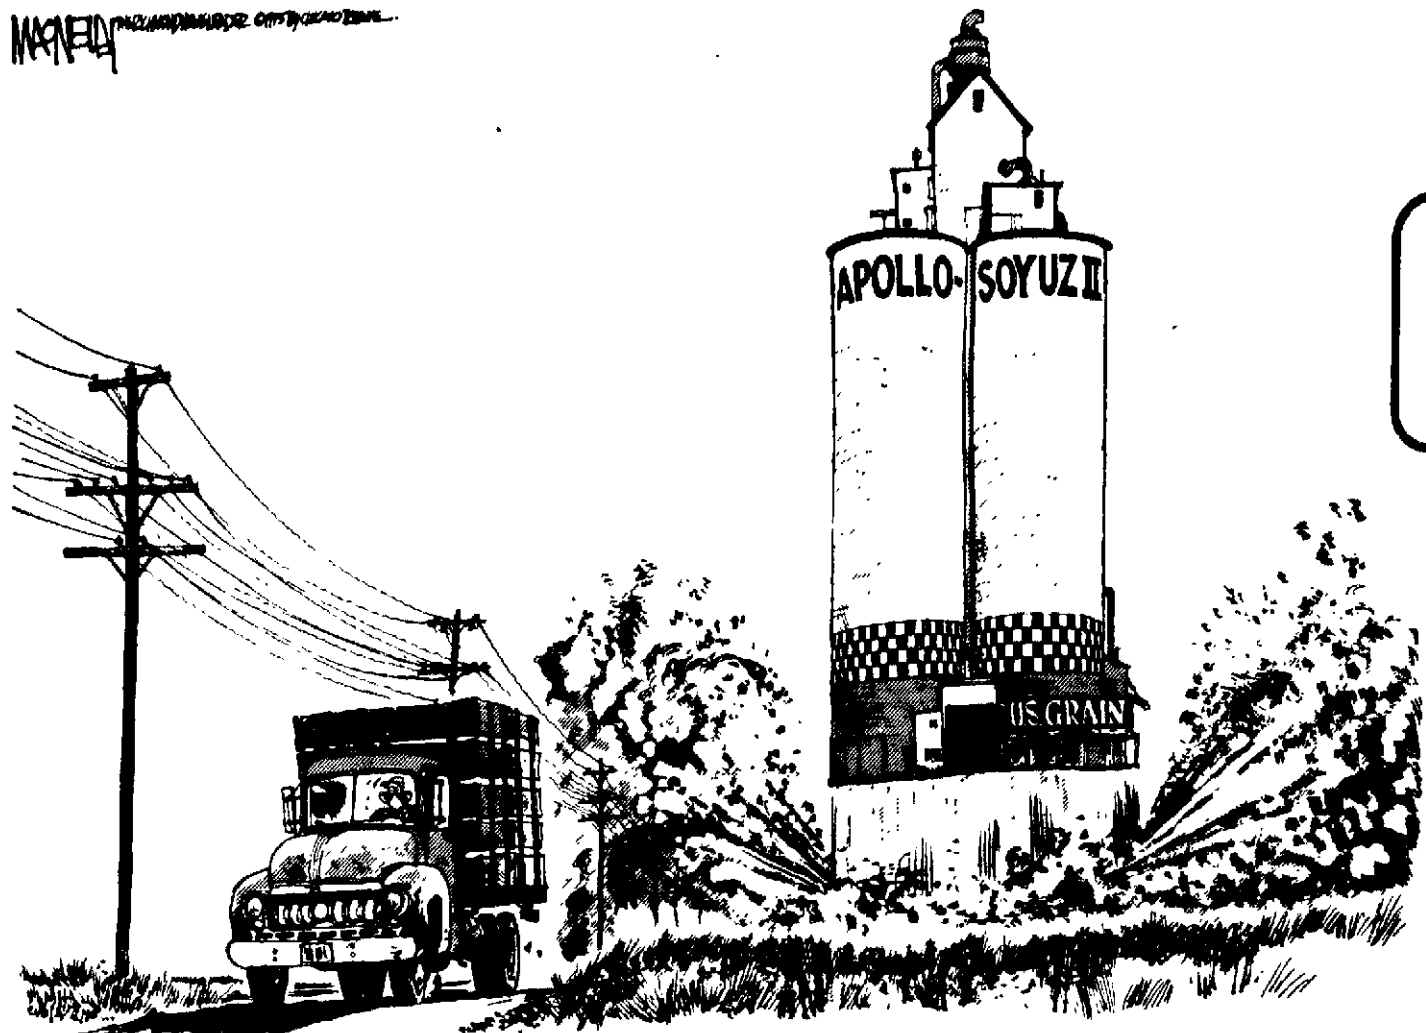

All of which means politicians are human beings, despite their need always to turn a genial face to their public. Sometimes, however, there is a steady built-in sense of balance which proves authentic. That was true of Harry Truman, despite his flare-ups of anger when his family was involved, and it is just as true of Gerald Ford, with all his differences from Truman in his political outlook.

I add two other public men who are not likely to suffer from depression.

One is Mayor Abraham Beame, because his New York troubles are too constant and massive to give him time to think about himself. The other is Hubert Humphrey who can't get depressed because of his steady, vital stream of thought and talk.

The Americanization of Mary Jane

By Lesley Oelsner

Washington — Criminal penalties for private possession of marijuana are beginning to fall — and thus as a practical matter, so are criminal sanctions for smoking marijuana, at least at home.

They are being toppled, in an often bitterly fought nationwide drive, by a combination of politics, practicality and a growing sense that the typical marijuana smoker simply is not a criminal.

In the last two months four states — Alaska, Maine, Colorado and California — have enacted laws that make possession of small amounts of marijuana in one's house a civil offense rather than a crime, punishable only by a small fine.

In one of those states, Alaska, the state supreme court then went a step further, ruling unanimously on May 27, that the right to privacy protected possession by adults of marijuana intended for personal use. "It appears that the use of marijuana, as it is presently used in the United States today, does not constitute a public health problem of any significant dimensions," the court said.

This week legislatures in two other jurisdictions — Ohio and the District of Columbia — will hold hearings on similar so-called "decriminalization" legislation involving private possession of small amounts of marijuana. In both cases prospects for enactment are considered strong.

In Minnesota, one house of the legislature has passed a similar law and the other house is expected to follow suit as soon as it reconvenes in January. In Hawaii, too, where the president of the state senate, John T. Ushijima, strongly favors abolition of criminal penalties, decriminalization is considered likely next session.

And in other places, prosecutors are simply deciding on their own not to enforce anti-marijuana laws. In Montgomery County, Maryland, State's Attorney Andrew L. Sonner announced June 26 his office would no longer prosecute "small" cases involving possession in the home.

In some areas, moreover, such as Alaska, hashish — a stronger though similar substance — is included in the "marijuana" covered by decriminalization laws.

All of this takes place in the face of decades of stringent anti-marijuana laws throughout the country — and in the face, too, of rapidly rising arrests for marijuana use or possession. Oregon enacted a decriminalization law in October 1973, reducing the penalty for possession of less than an ounce to $100, with a traffic-citation-like system rather than arrest. Until this year, though, it was the only state with such a law.

The new trend is still really only in the early stages and does not go as far as many reformers would like — removing all legal penalties for both possession and use, at least for adults. Legislatures in some states such as Illinois and South Carolina defeated or killed decriminalization bills this year, and in some areas, especially the South, resistance to change remains strong.

Also, three states actually tightened marijuana laws this year, albeit slightly, so that all strains of marijuana are included in the general prohibition. They are Nevada, Vermont and Wyoming. Yet the trend is undeniable and, apparently, certain to continue.

Legislatures in about half the states at least considered decriminalization bills this year, and in some areas the bills — or the concept behind them — picked up some strong support.

In Arizona and New Hampshire, for instance, while one house of each state's legislature defeated bills, the other house passed them. In New Jersey the attorney general, William Hyland, supports decriminalization of possession of small amounts for personal use; in Wisconsin, the state controlled substances board favors decriminalization and its chairman, Dr. Joseph Benforade, says the board plans to recommend to the governor that decriminalization legislation be introduced in January 1976.

In New York, Gov. Hugh Carey, while not making a major effort on marijuana law reform, has at least stated his support for it.

In the federal government two bills are pending, one calling for removal of all penalties and one providing for a civil fine for possession of small amounts, similar to those enacted in states such as Oregon.

Also, in a lengthy lawsuit brought by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), an administrative judge in the Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Administration has recently issued a decision that could lead to significant reform.

The judge, Lewis F. Parker, found the United States could, consistent with international treaty obligations, shift "cannabis" and "cannabis resin" — products that generally make up marijuana — from the most controlled list of drugs to a lesser list, and it could decontrol cannabis seeds and artificial cannabis altogether. He recommended the administrator ask the secretary of health, education and welfare to make a scientific and medical evaluation and a recommendation regarding the appropriate schedule of controlled drugs on which the materials should be placed.

The main potential impact of the ruling, according to Peter Meyers, counsel for NORML, in the medical area — reclassification of marijuana could lead to authorization of its use for medical purposes.

The administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, Henry S. Degen, is expected to decide this summer whether or not to accept Parker's recommendation.

The new decriminalization laws and the various bills under consideration have a common pattern. Private possession, generally at home, is a civil rather than criminal offense if the amount is small, one ounce some places, 100 grams (about three ounces) other places. A citation, similar to a traffic ticket, is given in place of an arrest and arrest record. The fine is small — a maximum of $100 or $200.

As a practical matter this means smoking at home won't be punished as a crime either, according to Meyers. Many states' old laws on marijuana prohibited possession but had no separate prohibition on use; also, various court rulings centered on the question of whether an example of "use" — passing marijuana around at a party, say — was enough to meet the "possession" ban, and not on whether use was itself a crime.

Oil Spokesmen Reply to Columnist Kraft, Parade Magazine

Gasoline Prices

Washington, D.C. — Joseph Kraft's column "Gasoline Price Increase Shows American System at Its Worst" (Sunday Journal and Star, July 6) presents an unfair and distorted picture of a situation clearly documented on the public record.

Kraft says he's ashamed "about the way the system has worked" (presumably the U.S. economic system). But he hasn't been paying attention to how the system as applied to the oil business has been distorted by price controls, allocations, entitlements and a long list of confusing government regulations.

Here is what he should have found out before he began to write:

- Gasoline prices fluctuate seasonally, with demand. In normal times, they have come down in winter like the price of bathing suits, motel rooms at beach resorts, air conditioners and sun tan lotion. They have gone back up in summer.

- This year, as since 1971, gasoline is price controlled. The Federal Energy Administration (FEA) keeps records on refiners' costs and lets price ceilings go up only enough to enable refiners to get back money they have already spent. Refining profit margins are not allowed to rise at all.

Sometimes demand has been slack. Gasoline has sold for less than the ceiling price. Some higher crude oil costs are not recovered. These unrecovered costs are "banked." FEA would tell Kraft, if he bothered to phone them, that oil refiners have accumulated more than a billion dollars of "banked" crude oil costs that they haven't been able to recover in the market place.

What that means, for example, is that last winter and spring motorists bought gasoline at prices that did not allow the refiners to recover the costs they were legally allowed to recover

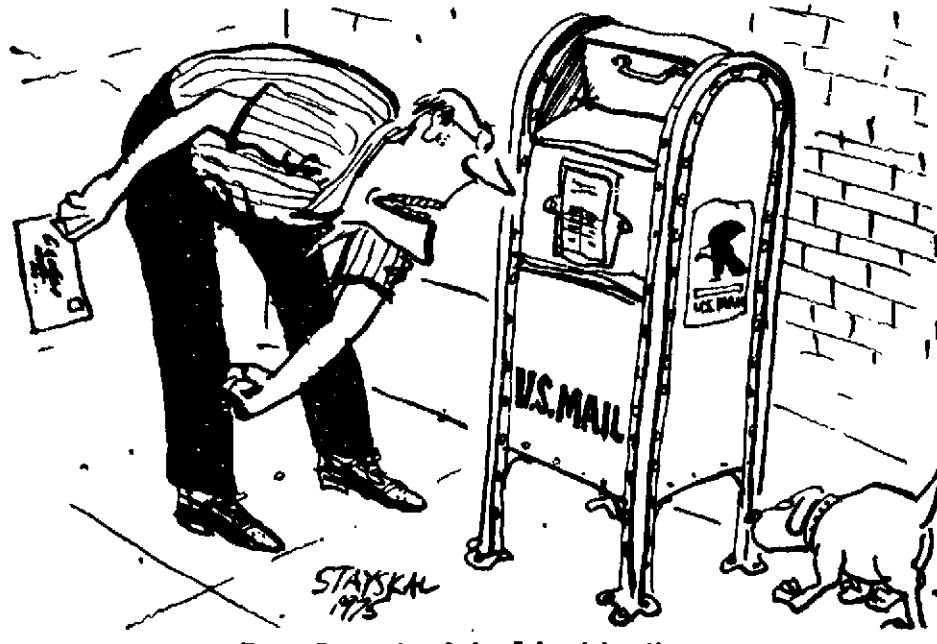

Unsigned letters are not printed. Letters are most effective if brief and signed with full name. Pen name or initials used only if writer's real name, address disclosed. under federal price control regulations.

When demand goes up in the summer, the "specials" end, just like the specials on air conditioners end when hot weather comes. But another thing happens, too. All increase in demand must be met with increased imports of higher priced foreign crude oil — since there isn't enough domestic oil to meet even off-season consumption levels.

The important point is: demand goes up, costs go up, prices go up. Refining profit margins stay the same.

"Rats! Just missed the July pickup!"

- FEA regulations say oil refiners can't recover other cost increases like labor, chemicals, pollution control and transportation until the month after they occur. The refiner must recover them in the next month or lose the opportunity to do so forever. If a refiner incurs costs in May equal to 1¢ a gallon on everything he hopes to sell during June, he will try to raise his price on June 1. If he does, and spreads the increase over 30 days, naturally the increase per gallon is 1¢. If he waits until mid-month, he must double his increase to 2¢ a gallon to come out even since there are only half as many days to spread it over.

For that very practical reason, under FEA regulations, price changes tend to be early in the month. Instead of finding out how this works, Kraft settled for writing "Public opinion was confused..."

- A final point: Kraft says "Greed took over." The fact is those costs are real dollars — dollars paid out for crude oil, wages, tariffs, steel, electric power, chemicals and all other things a refiner must buy to make gasoline. No dictionary says it's "greed" to want to get back money you've already paid out.

Leased, Not Owned

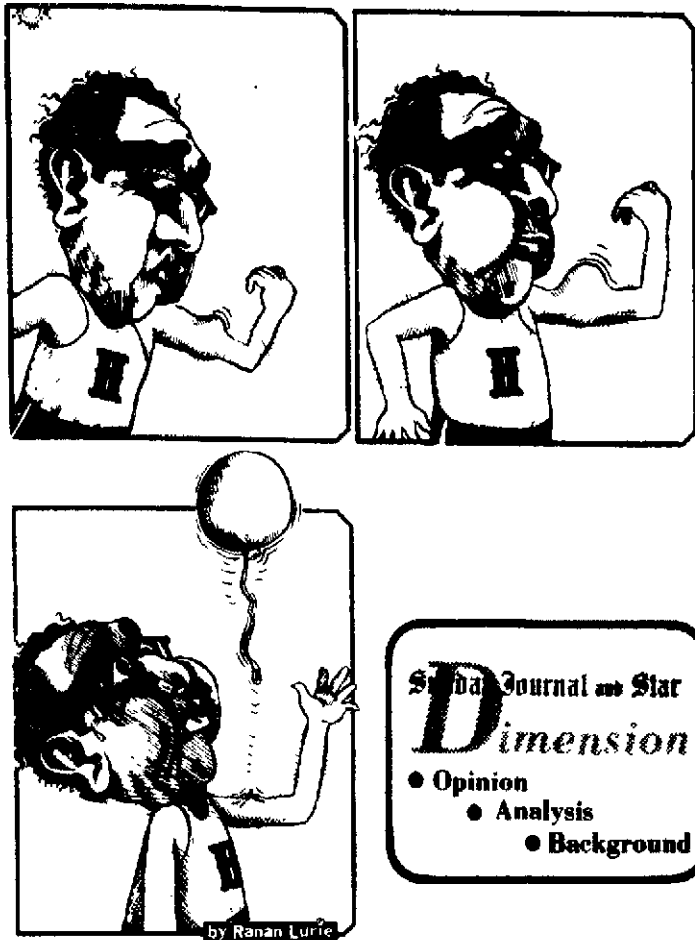

Shawnee Mission, Kan. — Because Parade Magazine does not provide space for rebuttals or corrections, I'm directing this to the Sunday Journal and Star. On June 29, Parade carried in its "Intelligence Report" section a misleading report entitled, "Who Owns the Land?"

In the case of the oil companies, Parade confused ownership with leasing. "Energy companies" were shown to own from 4.1 million (Union Oil) to 20.3 million acres of land (Standard Oil of Indiana — Amoco).

It was pointed out as a comparison New Jersey consists of but 4.8 million acres. Readers may have been left with the feeling these giant corporations — and others named in the story — own vast blocks of land from which they have ousted farmers and other individuals.

This is far from the actual case. For example, land owned by Amoco amounts to somewhat less than 270,000 acres. Land leased by the company for exploration and production — and remaining under the ownership of others — is about 25.6 million acres. As the story indicated, some of this land is offshore, under state and federal waters of the Gulf of Mexico. It, too, is leased, not owned.

Even on the leased land, only a fraction of the space is used for oil and gas production. Farming, recreation, lumbering, etc., continue without interruption. ROBERT T. UTLEY

Plied With Martinis, House Opts for Ouzo

By Mary McGrory

Washington — Lashings of bacon and eggs, a river of martinis and slathers of pressure and prestige were squandered in the White House fight to lift the arms embargo against Turkey. The House of Representatives ate and drank but finally said, no thanks, pass the ouzo.

All but a handful of members had been bidden to breakfast with Gerald Ford and instructed to come up with the hardware. The freshmen were asked en masse to come and lift a glass with Henry Kissinger, who told them they would lose our Turkish bases if they didn't do what he said.

It was the biggest campaign of Ford's presidency. One freshman, Max Baucus, D-Mont., had calls from both the secretary of defense and secretary of state the morning of the vote. But they couldn't assure him of movement in Cyprus negotiations, so he voted no later in the day. So did most other new members.

"There are no Turkish restaurants in my district," a colleague muttered to Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., as he changed from aye to nay.

The victorious captains, two Greek-Americans, both Rhodes Scholars who can count, John Brademas, D-Ind., and Paul Sarbanes, D-Mo., did not spring for so much as a prune Danish for the cause. They were dishing out high-level restrained argument and principle in foreign policy.

And when, for instance, Kissinger told the members the Greek government was "not unhappy" at the prospect of more arms for Turkey, they countered quickly with a contradicting statement from the Greek ambassador.

Kissinger figured so heavily in the debate that Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., was tempted to get up and say the secretary of state "was not the issue."

He was, however, Elliott Levitas, a new Democrat from Georgia, hurried Kissinger's high words about no ally being able to pressure us back at him.

Levitas had been to breakfast and besought the President to promise not to veto any arms embargo that might later be reimposed if the Turks misbehaved. He got no such assurance. Robert W. Edgar, D-Pa., had been to cocktails with Kissinger and was pleased to hear talk of compromise. Less than 12 hours later, behind his back, Edgar complained, a compromise that was no compromise at all had been worked out between the President and the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Brademas and Sarbanes said it was a victory for moral content in foreign policy and for the rule of law and "an enormous defeat for the President and an enormous defeat for Mr. Kissinger."

Whatever it finally turns out to be, the vote on Turkish arms certainly illustrates the limits of seasonal hospitality. It's no good serving bacon and eggs if you don't hold the votes. And Kissinger has been told he is not the only chef in the foreign policy kitchen.

As a freshman member, John La Falce, D-N.Y., told him over drinks at the State Department on July 8, "You can't kick us in the shins one day and expect to make love the next."

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

Last week's rains cooled off some of the wilting cropland in Nebraska, but the controversy boiling around the sculpture planned for I-80 rest stops stayed hot.

A few voices were raised editorially in defense of the project. "The entire sculpture project has raised a stir, people charging that the sculpture isn't Nebraskan enough . . . or it's not even art," the Seward County Independent editor wrote.

"True, it would have been a multitude of different designs," he continued. "True, it could have been something everyone would have liked better. True, it could have been something more easily recognizable: a pioneer, a buffalo or a football player."

But the editor said "Arrival", planned for the rest stop near Seward, is something new to the area and itself in the pioneering spirit.

"Seward County residents may be receiving an art appreciation lesson during this project," he wrote, "Let us hope they can be patient and willing to learn."

The Sidney Telegraph editor wrote that "Roadway Confluence" to be placed near Sidney, is an apt name for an appropriate piece of work.

"To celebrate transportation is to celebrate Sidney's origins, not to mention the industry that, second perhaps to wheat, is its lifeblood," he wrote.

The work by Hans Van de Bovenkamp will be more appreciated as art in the future, the Sidney writer prophesied. "Bovenkamp's design . . . strikes us as . . . appropriate for a national audience, future generations and the people of the Southern Panhandle," he concluded.

However, there were still those who pointed their sharpened pens in jest at the sculptures.

"Those sculptures proposed for I-80 probably should not be taken too seriously," the Norfolk Daily News editor wrote. "It was someone's idea about a way to keep commentators, editorialists and letter writers busy between legislative sessions."

The Omaha World-Herald put its editorial guns to work to defend, or at least to give a break, to state Sen. "Alexander Graham" John DeCamp.

DeCamp was again on the hook of many editorialists for his $2,500 phone bill charged to taxpayers for calls attributed to the Neligh lawmaker's credit card.

The Omaha writer said it may be true someone used the senator's telephone credit card, as DeCamp claimed. But even if the calls were all DeCamp's, the editor postulated, the cost is small in relation to what it takes to keep the legislature running.

"Perhaps DeCamp really can show results justifying the expense," he wrote, "On the other hand, perhaps he is a compulsive dialer who needs to be restrained."

U.S. Citizens Leaving Angola

Luanda, Angola (AP) — The United States consulate planned to evaluate the estimated 150 U.S. citizens in the Angolan capital — where rival African liberation groups are fighting for power — early today.

British and other West European nationals also were to be evacuated Sunday by a Royal Air Force aircraft.

A major fire started in the oil storage area near the besieged Sao Pedro do Barro fort Saturday evening. One of the giant storage tanks, apparently hit by a mortar shell, burst into flames.

Observers believe the stage is set for a battle for complete control of Luanda between armies of the Movement for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA — and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola — FNLA.

Both groups are seeking ascendancy when Portugal grants independence to the mineral-rich colony Nov. 11.

Throughout Saturday, fierce fighting was taking place around the fort, where FNLA troops have been besieged by MPLA forces, who claimed at least one direct mortar hit on the 16th century building.

Another battle was taking place about two miles east of the fort, but there was no indication the FNLA forces who captured the town of Caxito Friday had reached the capital yet.

MPLA troops for the first time refused to allow anyone on a hill near the industrial site which overlooks this battle area, saying it was "too dangerous."

Heavy fighting was reported elsewhere throughout the country.

FNLA officials confirmed that FNLA President Holden Roberto was personally leading advancing forces in the Caxito area, 40 miles north of Luanda, seeking to re-occupy positions they abandoned two weeks ago to the MPLA.

Acting FNLA Co-Premier and Interior Minister N'Gola Kabangu said at a news conference that the FNLA would not permit "a MPLA dominated regime backed by the Soviet Union."

China, which reportedly has given support to the non-Marxist FNLA, charged that "Soviet revisionists shipped a large quantity of heavy arms into Angola to stir up civil war." A commentary by the Chinese news agency Hsinhua, monitored in Tokyo, said the "criminal deeds" will unite the Angolan people against the "enemy."

June Tapes Made Difference

had struggled to avoid. "I regret that vote," he says. "I should have compromised. It would have been so easy."

In The Spotlight

Day after day behind closed doors, 38 congressmen heard evidence and tapes. Day after day, the pack of reporters waiting outside in the House Rayburn Office Building corridors expanded. A permanent television studio, with cameras and blinding lights, was installed in the entranceway.

Congressmen are not accustomed to intense public attention. Some of them were outspoken advocates of Nixon's hasty removal from office. It would have been abnormal to keep some from telling outside what they had heard inside. A fretting Rodino struggled to devise more and more elaborate ways to stop the "leaks."

The White House made an issue of it.

Moderates Wooed

The struggle inside the committee was for the hearts and minds of the moderate middle. Rodino ticks off their names. "Flowers, Thornton, Mann, Raulsback, Ham, Fish, Cohen."

The votes of Nixon's diehard Republican defenders and of the ardently pro-impeachment democrats were cast in concrete.

But the worst possible outcome, Rodino felt, would be another 21-17 party line vote. Even if the House went along, the Senate would not convict by the required two-thirds majority if impeachment became so partisan.

Before Rodino was the horrible precedent of 1868, the political impeachment of President Andrew Johnson.

The hero cast up by history in that instance was not the impeacher but the naysayer, the senator who by his single vote blocked conviction and saved Johnson from removal. A mindful Rodino wooed the moderates.

"We needed them," he says. "We had to show them we were really searching for the truth. If these people could come to the conclusion that the President had to be impeached, then the people at large would see it too, would see it wasn't just the liberals."

"These were moderate men. They were searching. And when they found what they were searching for, they would have the courage to say so."

No Smoking Gun

Rodino claims he personally kept an open mind throughout the inquiry on how he would vote, until the time for judgment had arrived, a week before the televised debate began.

There was no smoking gun. He reached his decision on "the totality."

'Specificity in Spades'

During the televised hearings, Rep. Charles Sandman, R-N.J., defending Nixon, demanded "specificity."

A simple parking ticket has to be specific," Sandman said.

But Rodino recalls that earlier, while the committee listened for months as special counsel John Doar led it through 38 volumes of assembled evidence, Sandman confided he had never seen a criminal case so heavily documented.

Says Rodino, "We gave him specificity in spades."

Casts It Out

Through it all, stones kept arriving for Rodino. Each day's mail brought little packages, each containing a small stone and a piece of paper bearing the biblical injunction, "He who is without sin, let him cast the first stone."

Rodino says he wasn't bothered by the stones. His receptionist, Mrs. Lillian Brooks, says several hundred must have arrived — enough to fill a wastepaper basket.

Every once in a while, she says, she still comes across one in a desk drawer. She casts it out.

Long Wait Paid Off

The committee conducted its first televised debate the night of July 24, 1974. On July 27, a Saturday, the committee further debated the issues heatedly throughout the afternoon. Then it recessed. Members walked up Pennsylvania Avenue in shirtsleeves in the hot sun, looking for sandwiches. They reassembled at nightfall and voted 27 to 11 to recommend the House impeach Nixon on grounds he had "prevented, obstructed and impeded the administration of justice." All 21 Democrats and six of the 17 Republicans voted for the article.

On July 29, Article II was adopted by a vote of 28 to 10. All the Democrats and seven Republicans voted for it. The article charged Nixon had violated citizens' constitutional rights and impaired "the conduct of lawful inquiries."

On July 30, Article III, charging Nixon had sought to block the inquiry by disobeying lawful subpoenas, was adopted, 21 to 17. Two southern Democrats opposed the article; two Republicans favored it.

Tape Made Difference

After the committee acted, it seemed certain the House would impeach. But conviction in the Senate was by no means certain. The bitterness of the committee proceedings was just a foretaste of the ordeal that could be awaiting the nation.

Then, of course, came the smoking gun that Nixon's defenders had insisted upon. In compliance with a unanimous Supreme Court order, Nixon surrendered a tape recording made June 23, 1972, six days after the Watergate break-in. In that conversation, he sanctioned using the Central Intelligence Agency in an attempt to thwart the FBI investigation of the break-in.

One by one, the 10 Republicans of the committee who had voted against each of the impeachment articles announced they would feel compelled to vote to impeach on the House floor. Then Nixon resigned.

No Longer The Same

There has been an election since then, and the Judiciary Committee is no longer the same. Rodino still chairs its deliberations over more mundane matters: antitrust and immigration, repeal of fair trade laws, criminal code revision and voting rights.

The voters were particularly harsh on the Republican members in November. Five were defeated for reelection, one retired, one ran for another office and lost. The panel now consists of 34 members, nine of whom were not members during the impeachment proceeding.

Decency So Rare?

Rodino has been in a great demand as a speaker. On his office walls are framed news magazine covers bearing his picture.

He says he does not think of impeachment as his life's accomplishment; it was too negative an achievement for that.

Everywhere he goes, Rodino says, people grab his hand and congratulate him. "You were so decent," they always say.

He says he is dismayed that decency in politicians is thought to be so rare.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Civilian politicians and some moderates in the military expressed fears Saturday of a wave of purges and arrests after a three-man military junta took charge of Portugal.

The Armed Forces Movement — AFM — the officers' organization that seized control after ousting the long-time rightist dictatorship 15 months ago, gave unprecedented authority Friday to the collective leadership of Premier Vasco Goncalves, President Francisco da Costa Gomes and national security head Otelio Saraiva de Carvalho.

The 240-member AFM issued a stern warning to dissidents both within and outside its ranks.

The centrist Popular Democrat party, the nation's second largest political group, immediately declared that the power shift was illegal and denounced it as "usurping of constitutional power."

Carvalho was in Cuba visiting Prime Minister Fidel Castro and the two appeared on nationwide television there Saturday as Castro declared: "The Portuguese revolutionary movement can rely on our firmest support in whatever circumstance."

Castro, in the ceremonies commemorating the 22nd anniversary of the start of his revolution, told Carvalho "we are brothers in the struggle" against capitalism and fascism. Carvalho agreed, praising Cuba as an example "of the true independence" which he said was the goal of the Portuguese army's uprising in April 1974.

Five AFM members, reportedly opposed to the power switch and Portugal's leftward course in favor of the Soviet-line Communist party, stayed away from the meeting endorsing the junta. Portuguese newspapers, under Communist domination, called them "the five dissidents."

They included Foreign Minister Maj. Ernest Melo Antunes, one of the architects of the original AFM program which promised a parliamentary democracy and free press. All five had been members of the Revolutionary Council, the 30-man body of officers that was Portugal's top authority before being downgraded to an advisory body.

The AFM said it named the three-general junta because of a problem of "revolutionary discipline" and implied it had shown up "in the very heart of the Armed Forces Movement."

The junta was expected to come down hard on civilian dissidence since the Socialist party, the nation's biggest, and the centrist Popular Democrats, the second largest, quit Goncalves' government protesting that it was turning into a leftist dictatorship.

Socialist leader Mario Soares, who has called for Goncalves' ouster, said in an interview with two French broadcasting stations that the creation of the junta may be inconsistent with a previous agreement between the army and political parties stating that the Revolutionary Council was the country's supreme political authority.

"We shall have to wait and see," Soares said.

There were fears of weekend violence as Roman Catholics scheduled a Sunday rally in the northern conservative city of Braganca and the Popular Democrats planned a demonstration on the island of Madeira.

Goncalves has emerged as the possible strong man of the triumvirate.

European Security Conference

'The Final Document' Great Oddity

By Henry Keys

Washington (UPI) — The document President Ford and 34 other national leaders will sign at the Helsinki Summit this week is one of the great oddities of history, noteworthy more for what it isn't than for what it is.

It is neither a treaty nor an agreement, since it has no binding legal force on any of the signatory nations.

And it doesn't even have a name. The State Dept. calls it, for the record, "the final document."

Opponents claim it locks in concrete the post World War II boundaries and divisions of Europe and gives Western approval to Soviet domination of territory Moscow took by force.

The key provision — Moscow's prize objective in the whole document — says the signatories "regard as inviolable . . . the frontiers in all states of Europe."

The western allies did achieve a provision permitting boundaries to be changed by "peaceful" means — a concession to the West Germans' hopes of unifying their nation.

Brought Together

The 100-page document does bring together 35 diverse countries in declared support of many high-sounding principles of political behavior.

Essentially, as President Ford argues, it is a moralistic document in which the signatories promise to respect the sovereign equality of states, settle disputes peacefully, and not interfere in the affairs of other countries.

The major Western gain is a pledge that the nations — including the Soviet bloc states — will respect such human rights as freedom of thought, conscience, and religion. It also calls for cooperation in economic, scientific, technological and environmental matters.

Moscow first proposed the conference on security and cooperation in Europe more than 20 years ago as an alternative to a World War II peace treaty and a convenient way to ratify the division of Europe created by what came to be called "The Iron Curtain."

But not until 1969 did NATO cautiously agree there might be some purpose in such a conference — especially since the Soviets made it a condition for separate negotiations on mutual reduction of forces in Europe.

Voted as Equals

The conference that produced the Helsinki document began in July 1973.

The 35 countries ranged in size from the U.S. and the Soviet Union to tiny Malta. All participated and voted as equals.

Banks Convicted Of 1973 Assault

Custer, S.D. (AP) — American Indian Movement Leader Dennis Banks was found guilty of rioting and assault Saturday night in connection with a disturbance at the Custer County Courthouse on Feb. 6, 1973.

Banks was acquitted on three other charges stemming from the melee between demonstrators and police.

Banks, 43, showed no emotion when the verdicts were read by the foreman of a nine-woman, three-man jury.

He was convicted of rioting while armed with a dangerous weapon, specifically a riot stick, and assault with a dangerous weapon without intent to kill.

The Indian leader was found innocent on two counts of third-degree burglary and one count of second-degree arson.

Several persons were injured during the club swinging brawl between law enforcement officers and protestors during the demonstration at the courthouse.

The Custer Chamber of Commerce building was burned and two other buildings were damaged by fire during the fight.

Banks was the fifth person to be charged in connection with the disturbance. Four others were convicted of various crimes in earlier trials.

Cox Survey: South Favors Ford Over Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of 94 Southern Republican leaders shows that President Ford is widely favored over former California Gov. Ronald Reagan in the South for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination, Cox Newspapers reported Saturday.

The Cox account said a series of interviews accompanying the poll depicted a "dramatic shift" of support away from Reagan since spring amid growing support for Ford among southern Republican conservatives.

The survey of key southern GOP officials — including senators, House members, governors, state chairmen and national committeemen — showed 59 per cent backing Ford for the nomination, 25 per cent for Reagan and 16 per cent either uncommitted or undecided.

At the same time, the survey indicated "widespread antipathy" to keeping Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller on the GOP ticket in 1976.

"While virtually all southern GOP leaders favor doubling Rockefeller, no clear consensus emerged on a substitute running mate," the Cox story said.

On Wednesday, Howard H. "Bo" Callaway, head of Ford's campaign committee, said Rockefeller is "the No. 1 problem" "confronting Republican chances in the South. "You and I both know that if Rockefeller took himself out, it would help with the nomination" of Ford, Callaway told a group of reporters.

However, the Cox survey results on Ford's own support in the South appear to contrast with Callaway's assessment that largely because of opposition to Rockefeller, Reagan would start out ahead of Ford in "any Southern state."

Does Crime Rate Compare To Police Force Size?

By James P. Sterba
(c) New York Times

Albuquerque, N.M. — During the 10-day police strike that ended here Monday, striking policemen daily predicted a crime wave.

While the city may never know exactly how over-all crime during the strike compared with pre-strike levels — record keeping was minimized during the strike — to many the city seemed as peaceful as usual. And to some it seemed that crime had even declined.

Bookings at the local jails were down sharply, but nobody knew if this was because there were fewer crimes or there were simply fewer policemen on duty to arrest criminals. Minor problems were often not reported to the police, at their request.

Feared Criminals

If there was less crime, the reason remained obscure. But Mayor Harry E. Kinney and some veteran policemen said that criminals feared armed citizens protecting themselves more than they feared the police.

"Hoods have no rights without police protection," said Capt. Lane Vance during the strike.

Traffic accidents did increase, and long-term investigations were tabled while non-striking detectives manned patrol cars.

But state legislators are certain to question the assertion — the more police the better — when city officials go to Santa Fe to ask for more police department money.

The notion that more police mean less crime is already under challenge in other cities, like New York where 3,000 police were dismissed recently. A Kansas City study found recently that numbers of police on the street had little bearing on the crime rate.

Highest Rate

When Albuquerque turned up two years ago in FBI statistics as having the highest crime rate per capita in the nation, city officials denounced the figures as untrue and unfair hired another 100 policemen, bringing the city's force to more than 500 officers.

With 360,000 citizens to protect, Albuquerque's police force is still undermanned, according to national standards. But some veteran policemen here think the strike showed police work expands with the number of employees around to perform it.

During the strike, only about 100 supervisors and non-striking patrolmen were on duty compared with the normal 500 or so. The non-striking police concentrated on serious crimes such as rape and armed robbery. Traffic radar networks were abandoned and far fewer traffic citations were issued, depriving the city of some of its income.

The outcome of the strike could have an impact on labor negotiations in other cities around the country where police work stoppages have become more frequent.

Police here sought a 12% pay raise, plus other benefits. The city, claiming it was broke, offered an 8% increase and a benefit package. The policemen voted more than two to one to accept it.

Buffalo Burglary Reported From Italy

Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI) — Police received a call early Saturday from a man in Rome, Italy. He wanted to report a burglary in Buffalo.

According to police, the international saga started when a man pounded on the door of the Buffalo Belting and Weaving Co. about 4 a.m. an elderly guard inside became frightened. The man shouted something to the guard, but since the guard spoke only Italian, he didn't understand a word.

The man then pushed the guard aside and went into the building.

"The guard got a little nervous. He's only been in America for a year," said patrolman John Bohon of the 13th precinct. "He didn't know who to call so he telephoned his uncle in Italy."

The guard told the uncle what was happening. The uncle who speaks English, fearing for the guard's safety, called the Buffalo police. It was considered a "burglary in progress."

By the time police arrived, more than 1½ hours later, the unidentified man who had started the whole thing was gone.

Police said he apparently just wanted to use the bathroom.

Crime Cities' No. 1 Problem

Princeton, N.J. — When asked to name their community's top problem, residents of the nation's largest cities name crime ahead of everything else, even unemployment and the high cost of living.

Dramatizing the change in urban worries, a 1949 Gallup survey of residents in cities of 500,000 or more found that poor housing, traffic congestion, unsanitary conditions, high taxes, corrupt politics, all rated ahead of crime. Only 4% named crime as their city's worst problem.

The prominence given crime is not limited to the views of residents of the largest cities. Even in medium and small cities, crime is seen as the No. 1 community problem. In small towns and rural areas, however, crime is superseded by other troubles.

Although non-whites have been particularly hard hit by the economy, they are nearly twice as likely as whites to say crime is the greatest difficulty facing their city or community. Similarly, persons in lower income groups are more inclined to name crime than are persons in upper income groups.

Following is the question asked:

"What do you regard as your community's (your city's) worst problem?"

Ethiopia Nationalizes Urban Land

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (UPI) — The military rulers of Ethiopia nationalized urban land holdings Saturday in their drive to convert the nation from a semi-feudal monarchy into a socialist state.

The provisional military government, which deposed Emperor Haile Selassie last September, said each family could own one house and 500 square yards of land. All other urban property comes under government jurisdiction said a government statement.

It said the move was designed to eliminate the power and influence of landlords owning vast amounts of property.

Earlier this year the military government nationalized rural land holdings with the aim of setting up agricultural collectives. It also nationalized banks, insurance companies, many private businesses holdings and established a single political party to guide the country to socialism.

After Aug. 7 no person, family or organization will be able to earn rent on urban land or houses.

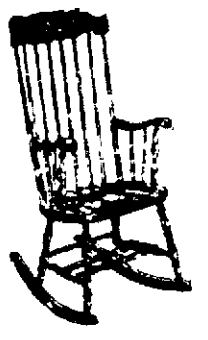

Urban cooperative dwellings, soon to be established, were excepted from the regulations.

Although places of worship are not affected, urban houses owned by religious, educational, medical or "similar organizations" will be taken over, with compensation.

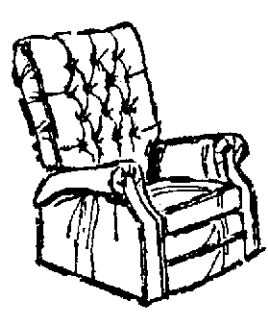

"The status of urban land and houses belonging to diplomatic and consular missions and international organizations shall be determined in the future," the statement said.

NU Wants 20% More From Taxes

By Jana Miller

The University of Nebraska will need a $15 million increase in state tax money for its operations in 1976-77, NU President D.B. Varner says.

And he received support Saturday when the Board of Regents agreed to ask the 1976 Legislature for the 20% increase sought by Varner.

The increase will boost the university's share of state tax money from $74 million to about $90 million.

'Serious Problems'

"There remain serious fiscal problems on all campuses and, frankly, we do not believe we can operate the university with effectiveness for less than this kind of increase," Varner said in a six-page report presented to the regents Saturday.

"The libraries need to be stronger. We need to have stronger support for our faculty. We need better equipment for our instructional and research laboratories. And we need very much to bring the salary levels for our faculty to a stronger competitive position," Varner said.

Varner's report, establishing guidelines for the preparation of the 1976-77 budget, was approved by the regents.

Specific budget figures will be presented to the regents at their Sept. 6 meeting in Omaha. And the proposed budget will be presented to the Legislature early next year.

In his report, Varner said NU could make a strong case for a substantially larger increase in tax dollars, but he said "the constraints of reality" call for the 20% ceiling.

Realistic Request

He said the guidelines were realistic and attainable, adding that "no one feels totally comfortable with every detail."

One detail that drew criticism from the regents was Varner's recommendation that no new programs be projected for 1976-77. "It's a terrible situation to be in if we decide in advance that we aren't going to try anything new," Regent Robert Simmons of Scottsbluff told Varner. Some new programs, Simmons said, might be better than some old ones.

Program Review

Varner, saying the criticism was reasonable, explained that university officials continually review and weed out programs.

Faculty salaries should be brought in line with salaries paid at Iowa State, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado, Varner said.

In order to do so, Chancellor James Zumberge said the regents could be looking at a 12% faculty salary increase on the Lincoln campus. That would include a 6.3% salary hike and a 6% cost of living raise.

"If that's true," Zumberge said, "salary increments could eat up a large proportion of the 20% limit."

Judicial Determination

Earlier in the Saturday meeting in Regents Hall on the UNL East Campus, the regents decided to go to the courts for a judicial determination of the board's rights and responsibilities.

Regent Robert Koefoot of Grand Island introduced a resolution authorizing the board's attorneys to seek a declaratory judgment on the board's relationship to the Legislature and other state agencies.

Warren Johnson, the board's attorney, said there are serious legal questions about the state's ability to direct the regents' actions regarding employee practices, construction contracts, building plans, purchases, expenditures and bequests.

Regent Kermit Hansen of Omaha said he would like the courts to interpret the difference between direction and control, adding that some state acts regarding the university appear to border on control.

Two 'No' Votes

Regent Robert Raun of Minden said the legal action was not taken to antagonize or irritate any state officials, but was intended merely "to clear the air."

Koefoot's motion, meanwhile, was opposed by Regents James Moylan of Omaha and Robert Prokop of Wilber.

In other action, the regents approved a long list of faculty appointments Saturday, including the appointment of Adam Breckenridge to the position of vice chancellor of academic affairs. The appointment becomes effective Aug. 1.

Breckenridge, serving as acting vice chancellor during the past year, will take over the position vacated by Virginia Trotter, now assistant education secretary in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Appointments

Other appointments approved Saturday. Carl Leopold, dean of the Graduate College and assistant vice president for research.

Lee Lucas, dean and director of the Cooperative Extension Service.

John Woodward, associate dean of the College of Home Economics and assistant director of the UNL Agricultural Experiment Station.

Robert Emile, professor of strings and theory at UNL, succeeding Emanuel Wisniewski who retired as professor and conductor of the University Symphony.

Thomas Bowen, administrator of the UNL Health Center. William Caldwell, assistant director of Cooperative Extension for 4-H and Youth Development at UNL.

Helen Buckley began popping corn 50 years ago in her father's popcorn wagon (below). She's still peddling popcorn from her

Stromsburg's Popcorn Princess Got Town, Citizens Hopping, Too

By Joel Thorson

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Stromsburg — Helen Buckley, Stromsburg's popcorn princess for the last 50 years, couldn't retire if she wanted to. The birds in her backyard and the townspeople of Stromsburg wouldn't stand for it.

Miss Buckley, 82, took over her ailing father's old-fashioned popcorn wagon in 1924. Four years later she traded the wagon for a little frame building, "Helen's Bungalow Shop," which took root on a street corner across from the town square.

From that vantage point, the sprightly, self-reliant Miss Buckley has been dispensing corn and conversation, sprinkled respectively with salt and sincerity, ever since.

Miss Buckley feeds her leftover popcorn to the birds just outside her back door. "They let me know if they don't get any, too," she says. "Especially the bluejays."

Unpopular Move

A similar squawk was raised recently when Helen's Bungalow was moved across the street on to the square to accommodate a sidewalk paving project. Told that the move was temporary, Miss Buckley was upset when the city council later informed her she'd have to stay put because her former location was unsafe.

The incident was revealing. It showed Miss Buckley how many friends-in-need she could count among Stromsburg's unfeathered residents. And it showed how highly Stromsburg folks revere their traditions. An institution in her own right rivaling the annual Stromsburg Swede Fest, Miss Buckley fought city hall and won.

The town square, although a good location for a business standpoint, was hotter in summer and less protected from snow and wind in winter than her traditional spot. She wrote out in a letter to the editor of the Stromsburg Headlight, "The Council in 1928 said I could have my shop any place on the streets of Stromsburg."

'Madder' n Hornets

A groundswell of support developed behind the popular popcorn provider. "The people of this town sure stuck up for me, I'll tell you," she said. "They were just madder 'n hornets at the council."

Last Wednesday, Miss Buckley was moved back to the street corner with the assurance that she could stay there as long as she wished.

Unsafe? Maybe, but "that doesn't worry me one bit," said Miss Buckley. "I've always depended on God. As long as He wants me to live, I guess I'll live."

The last surviving member of a family of five children, Miss Buckley still occupies the house in which she was born, a white frame structure on Main Street built by her father.

Her family roots are as much a cornerstone of Stromsburg tradition as her popcorn bungalow. Her great-uncle Louis Hedstrom founded the town in 1867.

Her father Andrew, whose Swedish immigrant parents changed the family name from Backlund to Buckley, was Stromsburg's first barber. He planted most of the trees growing in the town square, Miss Buckley said, and donated the ground for the Covenant Church. Another uncle, John Buckley, gave the town what is now Buckley Park.

Friendly Chat

But the 82-year-old popcorn entrepreneur is loved for reasons which have nothing to do with family ties. Hardly anybody who passes the bungalow on Saturday fails to stop for a friendly visit.

Perhaps they recall how she befriended a poor family during the Depression and "filled 'em up with corn," for years, or that she paid needy boys 2¢ for every 10¢ bag of popcorn they could hawk on the streets.

One of those boys, who grew up to be a successful salesman in Tucson, Ariz., later wrote Miss Buckley a letter thanking her for teaching him how to sell.

Things were different in the old days, of course. The business district hummed, especially on Wednesday night when the shops were open, and on Saturday night when everyone came into town for entertainment. Miss Buckley helped keep things popping with her gasoline-fired corn popper.

Now, Miss Buckley said, hardly anyone comes downtown. She used to open her stand at 1 p.m. seven days a week and keep popping as late as midnight. Now she opens Saturday afternoons only, and closes at about 9:30 p.m.

A onetime avid musician, Miss Buckley studied violin at the University in Lincoln, played in churches and movie theaters all over the area and taught lessons for 25 years. She never married, she said, because she was "too interested in violin."

Arthritis now prevents her from enjoying her violin. But neither sore hands nor the painful kidney ailment which incapacitated her last winter could make Stromsburg's popcorn lady give up popping corn for good.

As soon as she was able, Miss Buckley was catching rides downtown to her bungalow to resume her 50-year-old routine. And now that she's feeling better, she plans to start walking again, with the help of a grocery cart to wheel her supplies.

A town's gratitude for 50 years of crunchy goodness is just too rewarding to give up. "Oh, I've gotten a lot of compliments on my popcorn," she said. The secret of good popcorn? Her answer could apply just as well as Helen Buckley's generous, optimistic personality as to her corn: "I scoop from the top and they don't get that unpopped kernel," she said.

Sex No Barrier In Studying Math

New York (UPI) — Teachers who do not believe girls are as good in math as boys deprive them of many opportunities to enter medical and other scientific and technical fields, reports the National Enquirer.

Almost half of the teachers recently sampled in a University of California study felt boys did better in mathematics; none felt girls did better — "although in no case did we find any statistically significant sex differences."

Police Policy Gives Officers Local Traffic Ticket Immunity

By Warren Weber

Lincoln police officers don't issue traffic tickets to fellow policemen and this practice has existed in the department for years.

Acting Police Chief Dale Adams says officers who violate traffic laws are punished by the Police Dept. and that internal discipline often is more severe than the fine officers would pay if they were given traffic tickets and went through the Municipal Court system.

Adams says the unwritten police practice is based on the assumption that if an officer testified against another officer in court it could lead to internal police problems.

For example, one officer might be reluctant to testify against a friend.

Or it could create a situation in which the officer given a traffic citation would try to get even with the policeman who wrote it.

No Points Assessed

The net effect of the department's internal discipline approach is that the police force is removed from Nebraska's driver's license point system.

Under that system, points are assessed against a driver for various traffic violations and the accumulation of 12 points in any two year period results in revocation of a person's driver's license for a year.

And since tickets aren't issued to officers in Lincoln, they aren't faced with the possibility of an increase in auto insurance rates as a result of traffic convictions.

From another standpoint, the practice permits the Police Dept. to treat its members differently from the way it treats the public on the question of traffic violations.

In defense of the practice, Adams says any officer who accumulates a history of traffic violations is dismissed from the force.

Few Violations

He says there are few instances in which officers, either on or off duty, are accused of traffic violations.

"We expect more out of our officers than we do the public," he says.

The punishment handed down for traffic infractions ranges from a verbal reprimand to time off without pay or being forced to work without pay on a day off.

Adams says his personal belief on the question of internal discipline is that he would rather be criticized for being too severe than for being lenient.

Officers are supposed to inform their supervisors when a fellow policeman is stopped for a traffic violation or involved in an auto accident.

Some Not Reported

He readily admits, however, there most likely are instances in which one officer stops another and doesn't report it.

When a report is made that an officer violated the law, the department handles the matter and determines what discipline, if any, is warranted.

Sometimes citizens complain to the department that an officer has broken a traffic law and those reports are checked out, Adams says.

The internal discipline approach is used in all instances involving a traffic violation by an officer whether the officer is on duty or not.

Adams says the internal discipline approach is not found in any written police policies or mentioned in police cadet classes.

One of Those Things

It's one of those things that officers learn about from other officers, he said.

He says most police departments have some kind of system for handling discipline and points out that a Lincoln officer can appeal any discipline decision to the City Personnel Board.

The acting chief says he plans to ask the city attorney's office and Mayor Helen Bosalis to review and comment on the way the department handles traffic violations by its officers.

He adds, however, that he would prefer to continue with the existing practice.

Lincoln High's Library, Music Rooms Drying Out After Surprise Drenching

Books on edge crowd Lincoln High auditorium aisles. The drying-out process received the personal attention of Principal Bill Bogar.

Some unexpected activity is taking place in Lincoln High School's library program — all because of last weekend's big windy downpour and the trailing Tuesday and Thursday baby blows.

About 500 books of the school's 15,000-volume collection are drying out on the auditorium floor and aisles and are being assessed for damage. Also, some acoustical ceiling in the music rooms must be replaced and plaster chunks are missing. Other evidence of the drenching can be seen in many locations, said Principal William Bogar.

Bogar said all this apparently would have happened with or without current work to replace the leaky main, one project in Lincoln High's $1.9 million remodeling plan.

Plastic placed on top of the fourth floor where concrete had been poured could have stood up under about a half inch of water but not three inches, Bogar said.

By the time workers were back on the job, the water had seeped two floors — from fourth to the second.

Bogar has never been confronted by this kind of watery problem, but the leaking roof has been creating its own for some years, he said. The school was built in 1915.

Librarian Ruth Siefkes already is replacing current periodicals. When students report in early September, Bogar said, everything will be shipshape.

Nelson Construction Co., general contractor, will cover costs of restoring areas, said Bogar. He said it could be some time before total damage amounts are known.

Clay Center at Awkward Stage; Growth Far From Blundering

By Dean Terrill

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Clay Center — Some would call this community a boom town. Dale Thomas thinks it is better characterized as "a city in its awkward stage of growth."

The Clay County seat boasts some 40 new homes, mostly occupied by scientists from the nearby U.S. Meat Animal Research Center. A population of about 1,100 reflects a hike of 15% since 1970, and there's every promise of an even sharper upturn.

Yet it would take some real searching to find a plainer town square. With three or four stand-out exceptions, the business district could pass for a Depression days movie set.

Community leaders such as Thomas, the postmaster who also heads the Clay Center Development Corporation, admit they can't fully explain the incongruity.

Businesses Swamped
"We wish we could get more going on Main Street, but we're confident it will come," said the onetime hatcheryman. "Existing stores are doing real well despite the competition from nearby Hastings. The Boyd Lumber Yard and the oldest business in town, Hertel Hardware, are examples which say they're just about swamped."

With approximately 175 employees at the meat research center, that facility is the main catalyst of the town's growth to date and anticipated continuance.

A nucleus of some 20 Ph.D.'s are now assigned to the site, according to Thomas, and 60 to 80 more are due eventually.

At least 12 make their homes in Clay Center, plus "a few dozen other personnel with bachelors or masters degrees." The town also claims several soil and crop research scientists.

Supreme Court to Answer Question

Must Safekeeping in Jail Be Really Safe?

By Don Beman, UPI

When a person who is intoxicated is arrested, not on a charge but for "safekeeping," just how much care must his jailors use in seeing that nothing happens to him while confined?

That's the question now before the Nebraska Supreme Court in a case appealed from the Douglas County District Court.

Curtis Puts Blame on Senate For Hathaway's Resignation

Sen. Carl Curtis blamed intense criticism in the Senate for the resignation of Secretary of the Interior Stanley Hathaway Friday.

Hathaway, a native Nebraskan, resigned for what were termed physical and mental health reasons.

'Ruthless Attacks'

"I believe the ruthless attacks on (former Wyoming) Gov. Hathaway during his confirmation hearings was an important factor in bringing about his health problems," Curtis said.

"I believe the Senate is to blame for permitting extremists to use senatorial committees for assassination purposes," said the Nebraska senator, who supported Hathaway in Senate debate. "Nebraska has lost a friend."

Lincoln Congressman Charles Thone, a University of Nebraska Law College friend of Hathaway, agreed that Nebraska had lost a strong advocate in Washington.

with Hathaway's resignation, but he would not speculate on the reasons.

Hathaway came under criticism from environmental groups for his alleged pro-coal mining stand as governor of Wyoming. Environmentalists also criticized the Nebraska native for some of his decisions during the five weeks he headed the Interior Dept.

Like Hickel

Thone said one of the ironies of the criticism is that Hathaway would have proved to be a friend of environmental groups much as former Interior Secretary Walter Hickel had been.

"In my book, he is one hell of a man," Thone said. "He would have pleasantly surprised some of his current critics and gone down as one of the great secretaries of the interior."

Curtis and Thone said Hathaway's resignation was a loss for Nebraska and surrounding states because of the impact the post has on western states.

"A great deal of the jurisdiction of the Interior Dept. involves matters vital to Nebraska," said Curtis. He noted that the Bureau of Reclamation is most important throughout the region with impact on water and land projects.

Other Interior Dept. agencies include the National Parks Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, fish and wildlife activities and the Bureau of Mines.

Another Westerner

Curtis and Thone said they would work to ensure that another person was found from the plains or western states to fill the post.

Bob Lowry of Cairo, president of the Mid-State Reclamation project, said his board supported the Hathaway nomination and deeply regretted his resignation.

"He was a midwesterner through and through, born and raised in Nebraska and governor of Wyoming," he was one of our people," he said.

Although the latter moved its headquarters to Hastings, many of its workers still live in Clay Center.

Even the impressive gain in housing requires a second look in this community. A substantial number of the new residences, have been built between existing houses rather than in conventional clusters.

The Development Corporation, able to attract only limited interest from outside builders, has erected and sold 19 houses and two four-plexes. In the process nine old houses were razed, providing dual benefits.

Valuation Up

With most of the new houses in the $30,000-$40,000 price range, the town's valuation has increased at least 50%. The broadened base naturally helps fund such public improvements as a recently completed street paving project.

Adding another measure of encouragement for the town's future was the attracting of a husband-wife doctor team from Vietnam. They will practice in a clinic vacated by Clay Center's only physician several years ago.

Physically, a new grain elevator is the most commanding mark of progress, through three or four other businesses have opened or changed hands recently. Among those casting their lot with the town was Allen Ostiek, 30, who gave up a St. Louis auditing position in 1972 to take over The Clay County Leader.

"This has to be a town with an outstanding future," said the editor, youngest of a well-known newspaper clan with its nucleus at Lawrence.

"We probably have more new residents for our size than any other town in the state," he said. "We know we're lacking from a retail standpoint, but that will come. Give us time and everything will fall into place."

Two Nebraska Bankers Want Russians to Deal in Midwest

Omaha (AP) — Now that Americans have linked with a Russian craft in space and another round of big wheat sales to the Soviet Union have been announced, two Omaha bankers are trying to interest the Russians in Nebraska.

The two, F. Donald Lewis and Michael Yanney of the Omaha National Bank, dined in New York recently with Russian financial planners.

"We were trying to figure out ways to bring Russian money closer to Nebraska and the Midwest," said Lewis, vice president and manager of ONB's international department.

Lewis said too much Russian money for U.S. agricultural exports is going to cities like New York, Memphis, Chicago and Minneapolis, all headquarters for major grain companies.

"The major companies have too much of a monopoly. What we would like to see is Russian buyers dealing directly with Nebraska sellers," Lewis said.

To do this, Lewis said, Nebraska farmers and elevator operators may have to go to London, a major center in the world's grain trade, and to Moscow to contact Russian decision makers.

In addition to the New York talks, Lewis and Yanney have also conferred with another group of Russians in Washington, and Lewis' goal is to move the discussions to Moscow.

Bank Leaders

Lewis and Yanney both feel that American banks could become the leaders in alerting American farmers and investors to the advantages of foreign development.

"Once negotiations are started between our customers and foreign decision makers, the bank would ease out of the picture," said Lewis. "If we can enrich our community, our bank will gain."

Lewis is impressed with the way the Russians do business and their knowledge of the marketing strengths and weaknesses of the United States.

"They do their homework," he said. "They also know about such things as our grain scandals. They've known about them for years."

"The Russians consider it just part of the cost of doing business."

In addition to American grain, Lewis thinks the future will bring a strong overseas market for American farm know-how and capital.

NU Specialist Sees No Big Price Hike

By United Press International

A University of Nebraska marketing specialist said Saturday if no additional U.S. grain tonnage is sold to Russia there should be no resulting producer or consumer price increases.

In fact, said Dr. Michael Turner in an interview, if the Russian sales stop at the present 10 million ton commitment, farm prices may even slack off a little and the nation should wind up the year with fortified grain reserves.

Doubled Reserves

"From what we know at the present time," Turner said, referring to record crop expectations, "our reserves should in fact double without any further sales."

With that in mind, the marketing specialist said in his opinion Russian grain sales should stop at present levels in order to protect the domestic outlook.

"I feel 10 million tons is about as far as we should go," he said. Noting last year started out as a big grain crop but wound up on the short side due to drought conditions.

He said the same thing could happen again next year and create problems if reserves are short.

He said the reason he feels farm prices could stay the same or even decline without further Russian sales is that "the market has overreacted to the sales already made."

However, Turner said, if the 10 million tons already sold is joined by the four to five million additional tons being considered, wheat, for example, could increase 50¢ a bushel at the farm level.

Not Much Impact

But the impact on the consumer of that kind of an increase, Turner said, shouldn't be all that much, and, in some cases, none at all that could be traced directly to foreign sale market conditions.

After all, he said, in a 53¢ loaf of bread there is only 2¢ worth of wheat. However, he added, just because of inflationary factors "we know the price is probably going to increase."

In Washington, Agriculture Dept. officials say additional sales could well boost food prices, although substantial increases aren't considered likely.

Asst. Secretary Richard Bell also said the government has "made it plain" it doesn't want any more Russian sales until those August crop estimates are in.

Grainman Defends U.S. Wheat Sale

McCook (UPI) — A southwest Nebraska grain elevator operator said Saturday he hopes the Soviet Union increases its grain purchases from the United States by five million tons this year and predicted an increase in prices that would benefit the nation's economy.

Wayne Allen, 58, operator and part owner of the Perry Grain Co., said an increase in Russian grain purchases from 10 million tons to 15 million tons would help solve the United States' overproduction problem and would be "more beneficial to the economy as a whole than any kind of a detriment."

Higher Costs

He said the storage costs resulting from overproduction and lack of export sales would be "far more than any increase in food prices."

Allen, who has raised wheat in western Nebraska for 40 years, said grain prices have increased as a result of Russia's initial purchase and were up again on Friday because of U.S. Agriculture Dept. comments on a possible four to five million-ton increase in United States grain sales to the Soviets.

He said consumer prices also should increase, but the consumer should be more aware of the benefits they are receiving from the Russian trade, benefits that far outweigh any small increase in food prices.

"After all, a 50¢-a-bushel increase at the farm level shouldn't increase bread prices more than a half a cent a loaf," he said.

Farmers' Fate

Despite a possible rise in food prices, Allen said the economic fate of the American farmer influences the nation.

"The welfare and economic benefits to the labor force of the United States depends on the economic welfare of the farmer," he said. Exports benefit the balance of trade, provides relief to the taxpayer and helps create jobs for the labor industry, he said.

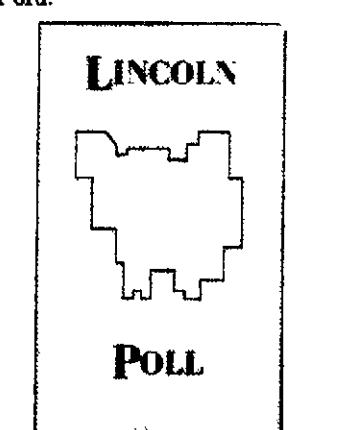

However, Allen said he would not expect the jump in consumer or farm prices that occurred following the Soviet grain sales in 1972.

"At the time of the original Russian sale (in 1972), the world market price of wheat was $1.78 a bushel," he said. "And that went clear up to $5.85 a bushel."

Ford Gains Strength in Lincoln

© SRI Community Response, Inc. 1975

The President may not be a Mustang or a maverick, but Lincolinites appear to like their Ford.

Lincolinites gave President Gerald Ford a 71% approval rating in a random poll taken for The Sunday Journal and Star. Only 22% of the 210 persons questioned voiced disapproval of Ford's handling of the presidency.

Gaining Strength

The poll tends to show that Ford is gaining strength in the Capital City. The President has gained 9 percentage points since a similar sample was taken in November 1974.

In that poll taken shortly after

Ford's Lincoln visit, Lincolinites gave him 62% approval rating.

His gain came primarily from the 15% uncommitted in the previous sample.

Only 7% of those questioned expressed no opinion in the poll taken in mid-July.

Increasing confidence in the economy and the institution of the presidency appeared to be a key to Ford's growing popularity in Lincoln.

Although the administration's action in rescuing the captured freighter from the Cambodian Communists was given as a reason for support by some, most answers were less specific.

Mediocre

"He isn't really doing a lot, but he is the kind of mediocre President we need," responded one of those who gave Ford a stamp of approval.

Others expressed a weariness over the turmoil of Watergate and based their approval on Ford's ability to move the nation past those convulsive events of 1973 and 1974.

Increasing concern about the price of gasoline appears to be the major soft spot in the President's support. Several respondents who gave Ford a high ranking expressed fear on the oil situation.

The energy crisis and the state of the economy were among the prime reasons cited by those disapproving of Ford's handling of the job he was thrust into when ex-president Richard Nixon resigned last August.

Some who vented opposition continued to tie Ford to his predecessor.

60% of Demos

However, even 60% of the Democrats questioned approved of the Ford presidency. Republicans and independents were even more supportive.

In a reversal of previous trend, the younger respondents gave a much higher ratio of approval to the President than did those over 45 years old.

One of the President's perceived strong points is apparently his orchestrated Trumanesque image, with 29% of those questioned praising Ford's openness and honesty.

Democrats and those with low incomes and residents in northwest Lincoln gave Ford the lowest ratings.

The poll was conducted by SRI Community Response, Inc., of Lincoln. The questions asked and the tabulated responses follow:

Washington Perspective

By Andy Montgomery

There's Fog on the Water

Washington — The only thing clear about Section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972 is the fog.

Section 404 authorizes the U.S. Corps of Engineers to issue permits for the discharge of dredged or fill material into the "waters of the United States."

Despite attempts by the Corps and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to clarify the permit impact on agriculture, the congressmen who wrote the law in the first place are still very much in the dark.

They're hung up over the extent of the corps' authority to regulate dredged or fill material, a question which could pretty well resolve itself if they only could determine what is meant by "navigable waters of the United States" and "waters of the United States."

The corps thought it knew once upon a time: Responsibility for issuance of permits for the disposal of dredged and fill materials into "navigable waters of the United States," that is, waterways generally utilized for transportation of goods and services in interstate commerce. Other waters were outside their purview.

Now it's not too sure how to define either and would like the Congress, which is just as confused, to help it out of its dilemma. EPA, on the other hand, has no such doubts: They're one and the same.

'Waters Of U.S.'

EPA assistant administrator Alvin L. Alm, at a recent House hearing, declared that Congress, in the 1972 law, redefined "navigable waters" to mean "waters of the United States."

"In short," he said, "for the purposes of achieving our water quality objectives, the physical reach of the water, and not the extent to which it literally can be navigated or has been navigated, was the clear congressional intent and a fundamental element of the comprehensive water pollution control effort."

What is also becoming uncomfortably evident is that a stalemate is developing between those congressional forces seeking less federal and more state control and those who want more federal and less state involvement.

Akin to that is the division between those maintaining more legislation is necessary to clarify the intent of Congress and those who say no additional legislation is required because everything is already perfectly clear.

Proponents of decentralizing federal jurisdiction and additional perfecting legislation include Nebraskans Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Virginia Smith.

Those espousing more federal strings and no further legislation include powerhouses like Democrats John D. Dingell of Michigan and Richard Ottingers of New York.

Nothing Done

The corps' backdown on its interpretation that permits would be required for most farming and ranching operations and its intentions to "phase-in" permit coverage over several years have done nothing to alleviate the concerns. Nor has its assurances that states will be allowed to play a more significant role in permit denial or issuance helped dampen the fears.

If anything, these only have strengthened the determination of the Dingells and Ottingers to block additional legislation, especially any handing the states more authority.

Dingell, for example, argues that "Section 404 placed the responsibility for administering the dredge and fill permit program on the corps and does not authorize the corps to delegate the program to the states."

Ottinger insists that "the delegation to the states of the permit program, as so eagerly desired by the corps, is unworkable because so many states have inadequate statutes on their own books, or inadequate governmental divisions to enforce those laws or the Federal law."

Just as determined, although the odds are against them at the moment, are those like the Nebraskans who feel Congress should spell out a clear definition for the activities intended or not intended to be covered by permit authority. They know that what a federal agency dictates one day can be undone the next.

Renovation Still On Council Agenda

During the City Council's night meeting Monday city lawmakers will again discuss a proposal for the city to participate in plans to renovate the old Federal Building and former City Hall Building as the city's official Bicentennial project.

The estimated cost of converting the Federal Building into a performing arts center and the site for some city government offices plus restoration of the adjacent old City Hall building is over $4 million.

The University of Nebraska and the Lincoln Foundation also have been asked to participate in the project by the Lincoln Bicentennial Commission.

Other items on the Council's 7:30 p.m. Monday agenda include:

Officers Of SPF Elected

Officers of the Nebraska and the National Specific Pathogen Free (SPF) swine accrediting agencies were elected at the two groups' respective meetings during the annual George A. Young Conference on advances in swine repopulation in Lincoln.

Dick Sorensen of Wayne was named to head the Nebraska SPF Agency, the largest organization among the 21 states enrolled. Serving with Sorensen will be Max Gemar, Sutton, vice president; Gerald Royal, Palmyra, treasurer; and Tom Socha, Lincoln, secretary-manager.

Continuing on the board of directors will be Lloyd Eberle, Bradshaw, and Brian Riddell, Oakland; while Jim Volk of Battle Creek was elected a new director.

Willard Waldo of DeWitt will continue as Nebraska's representative to the national organization.

In other action at the Nebraska meeting, SPF producers voted to increase the weighing fee for boars and gilts from $1 to $2, so that more money can be raised for advertising.

New officers for the National SPF Agency are: Don Heinrich, Noblesville, Ind., president; Kent Frerichs, Wilmont, S.D., vice president, and Merle Cox, Conrad, Ia., executive secretary.

SPF producers raise swine that must meet certain health requirements and performance testing standards. The Nebraska SPF program began in 1958 and now has 80 herds enrolled.

RR Repairs Briefly Close U.S. 77

U.S. 77 south of Nebraska Highway 2 near the Nebraska Penal Complex will be closed from 6 a.m. Tuesday until 6 p.m. Wednesday, the City Traffic Engineering Dept. reported Friday.

The Burlington Northern tracks that cross U.S. 77 will be repaired, at that time, officials said.

Persons with business south of Nebraska Highway 2 can detour down 27th St. to Old Cheney Road and then back north on U.S. 77, officials said.

School Boundary Revisions Readied

Lincoln School District administration and school board will catch up this year on a housekeeping detail put aside for some time — necessary revisions to school admission boundaries.

Supt. John Prashch was out of town but assistant Dean Tebo said this weekend that the package of boundary line changes probably won't be effective until this time next year.

"It's been at least five years since we made such an assessment," said Tebo, administrative assistant on student services for Lincoln.

He said the package of 15 or more change proposals does not include any major revision to date. It does include a policy for non-district students from Lancaster County attending Lincoln schools under special school district contracts.

Some schools have reached capacity enrolments, such as East and Southeast High Schools. For this reason, students on future service contracts may find fewer school areas from which to select.

Tebo said county students or any others outside their school areas now would be permitted to remain in the specific schools to complete their work, once the new boundaries are adopted.

Number of Center Pivot Irrigation Systems

Pivot Irrigation Boom Sweeps Northern Nebraska Counties

By Dominick Costello

Farm Editor

The rapid development of irrigation via the center pivot system and deep wells is creating a mini-boom and a lot of concern in what was long known as the ranching areas of Holt, Antelope, Rock, Cherry, Brown and Madison counties of northern Nebraska.

The facts of prosperity are apparent in the financial statements of banks, production credit associations and the list of building permits in the communities in the area.

The increase in loan volume, in bank deposits and jobs is offset somewhat by concern that the water supply won't last and that the environment is being damaged.

The Ainsworth irrigation unit which uses surface water in its center pivot systems, by pumping into the pivot from ponds filled from irrigation canals, has provided an opportunity to see what would happen if irrigation continues to expand via pumps and the proposed Norden dam project.

Land Values Up

The 33,960-acre Ainsworth District has sharply increased land values from $100 to $200 an acre to an average of $600 to $800 providing a base for loans for expansion of farming operations and equipment.

One other benefit is that because of seepage the underground water table in the area has risen by as much as 10 feet since the project began providing for additional irrigation from wells.

The Ainsworth project alone has 14 employees but that just scratches the surface of new jobs created in the area because of irrigation.

Bill Willeford, an irrigation dealer at Neligh said "I am sure there are at least 100 jobs in this town that are directly attributable to irrigation and we are getting a new well driller here so it will increase some more this summer."

Clyde Burdick, Ainsworth mayor reports "seven new churches, a new hospital and an average of one new business in the community each year since irrigation began here."

Building Increases

Burdick uses the number of building permits issued as a barometer of the irrigation economy.

"In 1955 there were 34 permits with a total value of $145,350. In 1965, when the district started pumping water, we had 57 permits valued at $290,525. In 1972 we hit a peak of 81 permits valued at $523,751. The 1974 permit value reached $1.4 million," he said.

"The buildings being put up today are larger and better than those in 1955. Increased building costs are a part of it but increased costs alone can't account for the difference. The growth has been dramatic," he said.

Data collected from two Ainsworth banks show a sharp increase in financial activity. One bank had loans of $1,406,585 in 1962. By 1972 the loan rate had increased to $6,458,330. Deposits had climbed from $3,891,516 to $12,781,315.

The second bank which had a loan rate of $733,000 in 1962 increased its loans to $2,886,000 in 10 years. Deposits increased from $1.9 million to $6.5 million.

Burdick noted that there were 23,800 head of cattle in feedlots in the area in 1970. Virtually none were fed there in the pre-irrigation era.

High Yields

Irrigated corn in Brown County in 1973 yielded 120 bushels compared to 40 bushels on dryland. More importantly, the irrigated crop is dependable where dryland crops are dependent on weather.

"What happens is that when you have a crop everyone else does, the price is low. When you don't have a crop, nobody has one so the whole community suffers," said Allen Christenson, vice president of the Production Credit Association at O'Neill.

"Irrigation takes the heart-break out of farming in this area," he added.

Christenson noted that while much of the economic benefit of irrigation goes to the non-farmer there is a stability and dependability of income for farmers from irrigation.

"They may not make a large profit but it is a dependable profit, the kind that is attractive to lenders, the kind that increases their net worth each year. It brings an end to the boom and bust way of farming," he said.

Christenson says the agricultural service industry still hasn't caught up with the sudden change in agricultural production in the area. "We see a lot of fertilizer sales and seed sales but we are still trucking our grain out of the area.

Elevators Needed

"We need to get some grain elevators built along the railroad. The difference between rail and truck rates could spell the difference between profit and loss in the years ahead," he said.

Glenn Williams of Norfolk, farm management specialist, has noted other changes in the community since irrigation began to develop.

"One of the first changes you see is at the local implement dealer. He may be selling irrigation equipment but he also moves from small tractors, used in putting up hay, to large tractors for putting in row crops," he said.

The trucking industry is helped by increased grain hauling and sales of fertilizer, chemicals and seed go up sharply, Williams said.

A hog industry also has developed on many of the ranches that are becoming farms because of irrigation.

"You don't notice it because there are no huge hog feedlots like cattle. It is much more a small farmer operation but we see it on the books here in the Production Credit Assn. office. This means sales of a lot of feed, development of feed milling facilities and sales of hog feeding and watering equipment," Christenson said.

Williams, who has made a business of developing land for center pivot irrigation, points to increased production of corn under irrigation as increasing Nebraska's role in feeding the world. "This country really didn't produce much food from its overgrazed pasture. We can produce as much as 200 bushels of corn per acre compared to enough grass to feed one cow on 10 acres before," he points out.

While businessmen see the economic advantages of irrigation, there are those who have opposed further development of center pivot irrigation in the Sandhills area.

Opponents say there are damages such as:

- Blowing sand from bare spots in fields.
- The possibility of a declining water table.
- Fertilizer and chemical pollution of ground water.
- Danger to passing motorists whose vision can be inhibited by spray from the center pivots.

Several irrigators have been warned by local sheriffs and county attorneys to halt the sprinkling of local roads. The end gun of the big pivots can be adjusted to stop spraying when the unit passes a specific spot in a field. However, such gadgets are an added expense and require frequent adjustment.

Irrigators feel this is a form of harassment by non-irrigators rather than a legitimate complaint about their activities.

Oakland Woman Dies in Mishap

Traffic Fatalities 1975 1974
Nebraska 188 213
Lancaster County 11 11
Lincoln 8 8

Oakland (AP) — An elderly woman was killed early Saturday in a two-car accident about five miles west and two miles north of here.
 State Trooper E. C. Volkmer, who investigated the mishap, said the two cars collided at the intersection of two unmarked county roads.
 The trooper identified the victim as Mrs. Emma E. Lindgren, 92, of rural Oakland. She was a passenger in a car being driven by her daughter, Mrs. Florence E. Olson, 68, with whom she lived.
 The driver of the second car was identified as a rural Oakland man, Leslie H. Nelson, 54.

Equal Power

Bangkok, Thailand (AP) — The Thai parliament, in an effort to reduce military and police powers, voted Friday to give civilian administrators equal power with police in criminal investigations.

Irrigation

"I can show you dozens of sand blowouts that were fixed by center pivot irrigation. It takes good management but it can be done," Williams said.
 "You have to get a good growth of crop residue going to protect the soil. Once it is there you actually have a better ground cover than most of the pasture areas had prior to center pivot irrigation," Williams said.
 Williams advocates the establishment of trees and wildlife areas in the corners of the square fields that the circular irrigation systems don't reach. "With the corn for feed it actually should support more deer than the pastures do," he said.
 "Irrigators are not out to despoil the land. We want to improve its ability to produce food. After all, we have kids we want to leave this land to. We don't want to ruin it for them anymore than the ecologists do," he said.

Progressing

Washington (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger visited William O. Douglas at a New York medical institute Thursday, and commented he thought the justice, 76, was making progress in recovery from a stroke.

Attractive Exterior On Smaller House

By Andy Long, AP
More and more two-bedroom houses are making their appearance on the housing market.
They range in size from 1000 square feet of living space to about 1600. To design a house of this size requires a bit of architectural ingenuity.
Obviously, corners must be cut somewhere and maximum use must be made of every available inch of space. The big problem is where and how to condense the habitable area so that a small family's needs can be adequately met.
Smaller Kitchens
Realtors tell us that, while some families insist on large kitchens, there is an increasing willingness to accept smaller food preparation centers so that other living areas of the houses can be larger.
For those who feel this way, this latest House of the Week fills the bill. By designing a pullman-type kitchen, yet leaving sufficient space for an adjoining dinette, architect William Churgotus has produced an appealing small house — 1079 square feet — with plenty of room for good living.
It has an attractive exterior that leans toward the contemporary yet has enough traditional features to make it suitable for any location.
Low pitch sweeping roof lines are combined with the ribbon windows, and the overhanging arbor that extends past part of the front of the house to the planting box makes this design something special.
Paved Patio
The long expanse of the living room-den area (28' long), due to the location of the door and the oversized awning-type windows, allows the rear paved patio to become part of the house. The area designated as the den can be either a formal dining room or a family room.
The unusual location of the living room corner brick fireplace reduces construction costs by making use of the same chimney for the heating unit.
A full complement of counter-top, hanging cabinets, built-in range, oven, dishwasher and refrigerator are efficiently arranged on both walls of the compact kitchen.
The bedroom wing is isolated from the center of activity. Each of the two bedrooms has cross ventilation by means of high awning-type windows that permit use of wall space below, closet space and a linen closet in the hall.
Convenient to these bedrooms and to the rest of the house is the complete tiled bathroom with glass-enclosed tub.
Outdoor Closet
A good-sized outdoor closet is to the rear of the carport for storing outdoor furniture, garden tools, garage supplies, etc. The carport could easily be enclosed in areas which require more car protection.
Although this is a basementless design, the house can be built with a full or partial cellar by building a stairway down from the bedroom hall, using a portion of the foyer closet.
This family size pleasing small ranch is equipped with all the essentials, yet it economizes on space to keep the costs down.

Do-it-yourselfers Decorating With Inexpensive Art Projects

By Steve Ellingson
Special Writer
The demand for do-it-yourself art projects is greater than ever, particularly for wallhangings. Folks just seem to want to put more of themselves into their home decorating. And why not!
If you're hunting for an artistic idea for your home or cottage, try the marine scene shown by NBC actress Susan Flannery. The picture is easily made from our full-size pattern.
The fish, seaweed, etc. are cut from scraps of thin hardboard and then mounted on a white panel background in such a way as to give a three-dimensional effect. Suggested colors are given but you may alter these as your imagination dictates. Colored glass pebbles (available at all hobby shops) and sequins glued to the fish may enhance the picture. Gold glitter was used to give highlights to the seaweed. The frame is made of inexpensive moulding available from any lumber dealer.
To obtain full-size pattern No. 416 send $1.25 (includes postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to

DON'T HELP REALTOR SELL

One of the best ways to move your house off the market in a hurry is to keep out of it when it is being shown! You should first tell the Realtor® everything he should know about the house, especially unique features, and then let him do the selling.
If you must be around when the house is being shown, greet the prospect graciously, take the children and the pets and retire.
This may sound like uncharitable advice but, believe me, it's sound. The REALTOR® is a skilled negotiator; he has the experience and know-how to bring a buyer to an acceptable price without showing the emotional involvement which could put the seller at a disadvantage.
There are times when personality conflicts between buyer and seller have eliminated bargaining effectiveness and even lost sales. Not often — but it can and has happened. Why take the chance?

Let's face it. Kentucky bluegrass lawns are expensive, time-consuming and troublesome. Moreover, in a time of shortages, they drain vital energy that might be used for more important purposes.

For example, lush bluegrass lawns require a lot of water and it takes energy to pump water. In addition, regular fertilization is needed to grow any good bluegrass lawn and making fertilizers also requires a lot of energy.

Are there any satisfactory alternatives to bluegrass for eastern Nebraska lawns?

Qualified Yes
The answer is a qualified

"yes" but before discussing these alternatives, ponder several facts.

First, part of the difficulty with bluegrass is that it is used so extensively. Its natural enemies have all kinds of turf on which to feed and, for this reason, they multiply rapidly.

Were any other grass to be planted as widely as blue grass, it, too, would develop enemies that would eventually become as deadly as those of the blue grasses.

The obvious answer to this problem is diversification — planting a variety of grasses throughout the area and using grass mixes instead of reliance upon a single kind.

50-50 Mix
For example, a 50-50 mix of buffalo grass and blue grama shows considerable promise at present. Both grasses are tough and develop into lawns that require much less care than bluegrass. Buffalo grass will grow in heavy soils and blue grama will tolerate light, sandy soils.

Another alternative to bluegrass is Tall Fescue Kentucky 31. This grass makes a presentable lawn, but some reseeding is required each spring because under some conditions, it tends to partial winter-kill. Zoysia is an excellent hot weather grass. It actually loves heat, but like all other organisms, it, too, has faults.

For example, it turns green late in spring and becomes dormant with the first frost of autumn. This means that the lawn is straw-colored for a long time.

Some homeowners have solved this problem by applying a green colorant that makes the grass look as if it were growing throughout the year. This works fine if heavy traffic does not cross the dormant zoysia. No dormant grass can take unlimited traffic.

An Alternative
Manhattan rye is another alternative to bluegrass. It has become very popular in recent years and develops a lush lawn that has many advantages over blue grass. But it, too, has a fault. It occasionally develops rust.

If the area in which you're considering a new lawn will not require regular mowing, you might consider a mixture of brome, timothy and orchard grass.

Planted together these three grasses make it look as if Mother Nature herself had done the job. They will give a truly natural look to any area.

To summarize, no grass is perfect. Many of those mentioned above develop broader, sometimes coarser, blades than Kentucky blue grass. But they certainly do have marked advantages that should be carefully considered by anyone who is thinking of a new lawn.

Ninth Annual Neihardt Day

Set in Bancroft

Bancroft (UPI) — A readers' theater presentation based on John G. Neihardt's autobiography will highlight the ninth annual Neihardt Day Aug. 3.

The program will begin at 2:45 p.m. in the Neihardt Foundation's prayer garden here. It is directed by Bill Roundney and will be performed in honor of Nebraska's late poet laureate by the Seward Community Theater.

Music will be provided by the Cuming Choraleers of West Point, directed by Larry Furstenau, and by Wayne State College students. Dr. Lyle E. Seymour, president of Wayne State College, will discuss "Neihardt as Educator."

Neihardt's official biographer, Dr. Lucille Aly of the University of Oregon, and Christopher Sergal, president of Dramatic Publishing Co. of West Point, Conn., will be special guests.

certificate to UPS authorizing the service.

The authorization did not, however, lift a restriction against the movement of packages that originate or are delivered within an area encompassed by the southern third of Nebraska, all of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, the western half of Missouri and the western edge of Arkansas.

This region is regarded by state and national regulators as having local carriers who provide adequate service.

The ICC order allows UPS to provide interstate service for Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada and Utah.

The 48-state service was scheduled to begin in mid-July but was delayed by the appeal of a Utah carrier to the ICC.

On Monday the ICC rejected the requested delay.

A Stock Buster:

Study Says They're Still Best Investment

By Robert Metz
(c) 1975 N.Y. Times Service
New York — About a decade ago, the University of Chicago published the results of a stock market study covering 40 years. The study indicated that stocks had yielded an average 9.3% annual return on a compounded basis between 1926 and 1965.
Before the work was published, there had been surprisingly little analysis of stock market performance on a long-term basis, and the study had a considerable impact on investor thinking. Inevitably, investors began to measure their own results in stocks against the indicated 9.3% yield.
Now, at a time when many have been questioning whether future yields will equal those of the past, an updating of the stock study is being put into final form.
The new study goes further than the old, comparing stock yields with those of fixed-interest securities. Among other conclusions, the study indicates that stocks still offer the best prospects for satisfactory investment results.

Bear Market Impact
The new work was compiled by Roger Ibbotson and Rex Sinquefeld. Ibbotson, who is 32 years old, ran the University of Chicago's bond portfolio before he became an assistant professor at the university's Graduate School of Business. Sinquefeld,

POCKETBOOKS
30, is a vice president at the American National Bank in Chicago.
In updating the earlier study, the two men found that between 1926 and the end of 1974, the annual return on stocks averaged 8.5%, down from the performance rate of the earlier study, thus indicating the impact of the five-year bear market on the stock market's long-term performance.

On the other hand, bonds yielded just 3.6% annually over the same period. Treasury bills barely equaled the inflation rate for the period.

New CPA Role: Keeping Business Honest?

By Gene Kelly
Chicago — "The CPA is being pressured to become the arbiter of American business; in the broadest sense, to keep people honest. Most of us are not all that eager to take on this role."
This comment stood out at the end of a financial writers' seminar, partly because it was the last thing said. But mostly because it was the most candid quote all day. It had the added impact of coming from Wallace E. Olson, president of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), the seminar sponsor.
Olson said he and other CPAs find it hard not to be defensive these days. Accusations have been leveled against accountants and lawyers in several recent major cases involving financial fraud.
Civil suits have been filed against law and accounting firms asserting that they are liable for damages growing from the swindles.
The public and press, Olson said, are asking whether accountants are objective enough, whether they are too close to clients. "It can't be too much of an adversary relationship," he said.
"The users of financial statements want reasonable assurance of their reliability. So do we," he said. "We certainly don't want the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to establish auditing standards."

Foreign Investments
In U.S. Trailing 1974's
A survey by New York's Conference Board, a nonprofit business research organization, finds that foreign concerns announced 79 new investments in U.S. manufacturing during the first half of 1975.
This is sharply below the comparable 1974 figure of 133 announcements. Dollar amounts aren't available in the survey, but Conference Board analysts are reasonably certain that these also trail the year-earlier level.
A Conference Board analyst attributes the slowdown mainly to two developments — a deepening of the recession in many foreign countries, and the fact that share prices of many U.S. corporations have risen sharply in the past six months or so.
This rise tends to make a foreign purchase of a U.S. company considerably costlier than last year.

Auditor's Responsibility
Increasingly accountants are being asked what an auditor's responsibility is when he uncovers management corruption, fraud or an illegal act.
"The auditor has an obligation to blow the whistle," said Thomas Holton, chairman of the AICPA committee on SEC regulations. First by contacting the company's lawyer and officers.
Should the SEC be contacted and stockholders be told about bribe attempts and political slush funds?
Holton says the SEC "is now saying that the average shareholder wants to know about fraud . . . if it's a 'material' fact. At this time, the SEC has been unwilling to define this further, because that implies there are illegal acts it doesn't care about."
If such disclosures or a negative opinion being issued on a firm's financial statements leads to the firing of the accountant, the disagreement must now be reported to the SEC and must be revealed in stockholder proxy statements, Holton said.
The AICPA is taking a positive stance about the possibility that courts will extend the liability — and responsibility — of the auditor.
Says Olson: "We recognize the need to expand services. An auditor can't examine every transaction. But computers allow us to more efficiently manipulate and examine large masses of information."

Why Is Food Costing More?

The wheat heat has returned. Now that the sale of millions of tons of American wheat to Russia is making news again, some writers are seeing all kinds of high-level implications. Or at the very least, another cycle of inflationary impact on U.S. supermarket prices.
For example, Alan Abelson, managing editor of Barron's, the Dow Jones newspaper, has written that he sees direct linkage between wheat, space travel and diplomacy:
"Peace in space, goodwill to nauts? The rendezvous last week of Apollo and Soyuz demonstrated graphically that the way to get people together, no matter how disparate their ideological views, is to shoot them out several hundred miles into the celestial wastes."
"Our modest proposal, then, is to forthwith launch Premier Rabin and President Sadat into orbit as the surest means of securing an Israeli-Egyptian agreement. Greece and Turkey would be next in line, to be followed by, oh, the antagonists of your choice."
"Perhaps at the start, we'd best send Henry Kissinger up, in case some space-shuttle diplomacy proves necessary."
"The Russians again have shown, of course, their unquestioned skill at removing people from this earth. Lamentably, they continue to come up a little short in some other areas."
"Like growing wheat. Lucky for them, we suppose, that the greedy capitalists in such benighted places as Kansas and Iowa still have a green thumb. Otherwise, Soviet stomachs would growl and who knows what heads might roll?"
"Our own hunch, incidentally, is that certain inexplicable instances of the Kremlin's tractability — last time on Vietnam, currently on the Middle East — can be traced to its need for our grain. Or, can detente withstand the first good Siberian harvest?"
Foreign Strings
Although Abelson is adept at injecting tongue-in-cheek thrusts into most subjects that he tackles, Eliot Janeway, financial columnist and author, is dead serious when he charges that American ag exports are being given away, and this is why you're paying more for groceries.
Writing in Mainliner magazine, Janeway says:
"Americans are concerned with the rapidly escalating price of food. Most of us are absolutely amazed at the way grocery prices have gone up in the past decade, and wonder what's wrong with the American system when it permits such inflation."
He admits that the problem is not simple, but feels that the explanation becomes clearer "if have brought this question back into focus. One observer says the Siberian harvest is linked directly to detente.

we look beyond our borders — and realize that the cost of food in this country is not being controlled within the United States. Instead, it is our foreign policy that has had a disastrous effect on food prices . . .
"There's only one part of the American economy structured into the rest of the world: agriculture.
Raffle Tickets
"Two-thirds of our agricultural output depends on exports . . . the only agricultural exports we still have in this country are the exports we can't give away — and, frankly, we've given away the store!"
Janeway then laid out his reasoning:
"If we begin by recognizing that America is buying raffle tickets on the way Russia runs its government domestically — and plays its hand against us — we'll clear our minds of the misconception that pure and simple economic or market factors are bouncing us around."
"I recently visited with Gov. Jim Exon of Nebraska, probably the most influential new personality in American agriculture."
"I told him that if any American operator had just done to our wheat, corn and soybean markets what the Russians have done in this manipulation of the market, the Federal Trade Commission would have put him out of business in a week."
"His reply sums up the situation: 'Yes, all we have done is say, 'thank you.'"
"The Russians know that there's no way to run Russia without primary dependence on American agriculture. Moreover, they know that if American farm products on which they are critically dependent are no longer available, the Russians are between the devil and the deep."
Janeway next jumps back two years to American headlines.
"First, the Russians booked a record wheat order from America. Then, they cancelled it."
Price Supports
"What the Russians have done is gamble on the futures market. They know that our Chicago Board of Trade follows the rest of the economy, and they look good buying back cheaper commitments that they walked out on at higher prices.

"Now what does this have to do with the price of groceries? Everything."
"If you think that American farmers are going to go out and plant and borrow to plant on the scale needed to ensure us stability in the marketplace in the next three years, you've got another think coming."
"You're going to see a hold-back on the part of farmers, a refusal to commit without insurance — call it a price support, if you want — unless they can make an honest dollar for their investment. In today's economy, with the Russians wielding such power, they can't."
Turning to other continents Janeway says Americans should take a look at other events:
"First is our sale of corn to Japan."
"Let's suppose that Japan, instead of being a bunch of islands with mountains, happened to have our corn belt. Have you any idea how much expensive, boxed, frozen chicken we would be eating?"
"Japan wouldn't be selling us Japanese corn or soybeans, like what we sell to them. We would be eating fabricated, processed Japanese foods made, shipped and insured by the Japanese."
"Take a look at sugar. If the oil shortage is the big phony of this decade, what is the sugar shortage?"
Exports Cheaper?
The best example of how American foreign affairs have been mismanaged, Janeway says, is the devaluation of the dollar.
"The theory on which we did it was that it would make our exports cheaper."
"But, what were our exports? Stuff that the world would have bought more of even if it had been marked up! Food stuffs are the best example."
"Devaluation is supposed to make our imports cost more. We did it — and that brought on the oil gouge."
"If we had played our hand realistically, American could have it made — because we would give ourselves the first crack at cheap raw materials. We would also give American farmers and manufacturers a proprietary export market. Instead, we have put the cattle, poultry, dairy and fish economies through the wringer."
"If we put our policy sights on the proposition that we have been subsidizing a cheap diet for the rest of the world — including our enemies, competitors and creditors — at the same time we are increasing the cost of food in this country, we can understand just how contradictory our foreign and food policies are today."

Bricklin: Detroit in Rut

By Edward S. Lechtzin
Detroit (UPI) — Malcolm Bricklin hardly considers himself in competition with Detroit's auto giants. He's built 2,100 cars in the past year to their nearly 9 million.
But if Detroit executives would take a few cues from him, they might not find themselves in such a mess, says the 36-year-old automaker whose name graces a sporty, gull-winged safety car.
With few exceptions, the reaction in Detroit to the gasoline crisis and the need for new products has been lackluster, says Bricklin, and the results are evident in the present sales slump.
American Motors is the lone exception Bricklin will allow, saying what the small company has done with its new Pacer is to build "an American small car, not just a copy." What General Motors, Ford and Chrysler are planning to offer to satisfy the small car demand, says Bricklin, will be "me-too" copies of foreign designs.
If Detroit doesn't change and simply copies the success of the foreign automakers, it could find itself in even deeper trouble as the price of gasoline rises, he said.
Bricklin is the first man to put his own name on a new car since Henry J. Kaiser tried it in the years right after World War II and failed. He builds the cars at his St. Johns, N.H., assembly plant and is turning out 450 to 500 a month with a backlog he claims is up to 40,000 cars.
He once thought of doing it with a small, low-cost, high-efficiency model but soon realized the economics of the problem.
According to Bricklin's figuring, a well-designed $2,000 car could be built, but only by a company that has the capacity to build a half-million a year with an investment of a couple hundred million dollars and 20,000 to 30,000 people.
"But any car that won't get 30 miles per gallon in the next two years just won't be acceptable to the American people. We'll have one that will, but it won't be a small car."
"The reason the foreign guys are making small cars is that's all they could make for their own countries," he explains. "They didn't do anything different, but Detroit is guilty of not recognizing that the present cars have to change and that they can build better smaller cars."

Malcolm Bricklin, 36, the first man to successfully put his name on a car since Henry J. Kaiser, lounges against one of his sporty, gull-winged cars.

Big Loss Suffered by Stocks

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market suffered its worst loss in nearly eight months last week when investors were jolted by a resurgence of inflation and rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 28.32 points to 834.09, its worst weekly loss since it plunged 41.06 points to a 12-year low of 577.60 in the week ending Dec. 6, 1974. It was the fourth consecutive weekly loss for the closely followed average, which appears headed for its first losing month of the year.

Other averages had similar results. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 3.91 to 89.29 and the NYSE common stock index lost 2.20 to 47.87. Declines routed advances, 1,612 to 260, among the 2,020 issues crossing the tape.

Volume slipped to 93,158,210 shares — an 18.63 million a day average — from 113,786,320 — 22.76 million a day — last week. Turnover during the same week a year ago totaled 58,801,730 shares.

The market, already churning, went into a tailspin Tuesday when the Labor Department reported the cost of living rose at a 9.6 per cent annual rate in June. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said the report was a "warning that the menace of inflation is still very much with us."

A large number of banks raised their prime rate to 7 1/2 per cent from the prevailing 7 1/4 per cent level Friday after Burns told the House Banking Committee the Fed had tightened credit recently to moderate a surging growth in the nation's money supply, which he said could revive inflation.

Right after Burns testified Thursday, the Fed reported the nation's money supply — which grew at a 14.5 per cent rate in May and June — spurred $1.9 billion in the latest reporting week, and Wall Street groaned.

Burns said he is determined to slow that growth rate to the 5 to 7 1/2 per cent level the Fed had proposed three months ago. The Fed has not adopted a higher interest rate stance, Burns said, but would maintain a moderate monetary policy.

Wall Street feared a prolonged credit tightening and higher interest rates, which would make stocks less attractive than better yielding short-term money instruments. The stock market's sharp advance the first half of this year almost paralleled a rapid decline in interest rates.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, triggered a brief rally Wednesday by predicting the Gross National Product would show a gain in the third quarter. He noted durable goods orders rose 0.9 per cent in June, the third consecutive increase, another indication the economy was recovering.

But he helped kill the rally by forecasting a sharp rise in July's Wholesale Price Index. Burns made a similar prediction and said this "is going to make us all unhappy."

Steers, Heifers Lower

Omaha (UPI) — Trade in the cattle alleys last week took on the air of caution on the Omaha market, the Omaha Livestock Foundation said.

Early rounds found cattle on the decline but midweek receipts continued light, which helped offset downward pressure. Demand through the week centered on heavier weights for choice grades.

However, that picture was clouded at times as the overall finish last week was not attractive.

Fed steers finished the week 50c to 1.50 lower. Steers under 500 lb. in the good and low choice grade took the most decline.

Heifers finished 1.00 to 1.75 lower with weights below 850 lb. taking the most decline.

Steer top for week was $4.00 paid for a load of choice with a few prime included weighing 1,182 lb. at midweek, a load of the same grade cleared at $3.75.

Heifer top for the week was $4.50 with other top heifers at $4.00-$4.50. Choice heifers at $4.00-$4.50. Lighter choice heifers at $3.00-$4.00. Cash at $4.00-$4.50.

Cows finished 1.00-1.50 higher. Utility and commercial cows sold from 20.00-23.00 with a few of the more desirable kinds to $25-$30.

Trade in hog alleys continued to be influenced partially by light receipts at Omaha and around the circuit. Off market movement was also light, which produced the competitive periods at Omaha.

Barrows and gilts finished the week 50-75, instances of 1.00 higher for hogs over 260 lb. which were in short supply.

Butcher top for the week was $8.50. The bulk of the 200-325 lb. hogs cashed at $5.75-$8.75.

Sows finished the week 1.00-1.50 higher.

NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE®

Bicentennial Items Can Be Put on Display

Residents of Lancaster County who have been making various articles in honor of America's Bicentennial celebration will have an opportunity to exhibit them at the Lancaster County Fair.

The County Fair, held in the 4-H Building at the State Fairgrounds, runs Aug. 20-22.

Mrs. Jerome Warner, Waverly, Lancaster County Bicentennial chairman, urged residents of the area who have Bicentennial art, handiwork and craft items to contact her about displaying the articles.

Items which may be exhibited include quilts, embroidery, needlepoint, macrame, and woven, knitted or crocheted needlework, pottery, sculpture, ceramics, woodcarving, metalwork, paintings, drawings, baked goods, costumed dolls.

The items must be created by the individuals or organizations offering them for exhibition. They must follow a Bicentennial theme.

"This is not a competition. No premiums will be given," Mrs. Warner said.

Mrs. Warner said that if sufficient interest is shown, there may be an exhibit of Collector's Items relative to Nebraska's pioneer heritage.

The deadline for offering exhibits is Aug. 15.

Wheat Group Awards Six From UNL

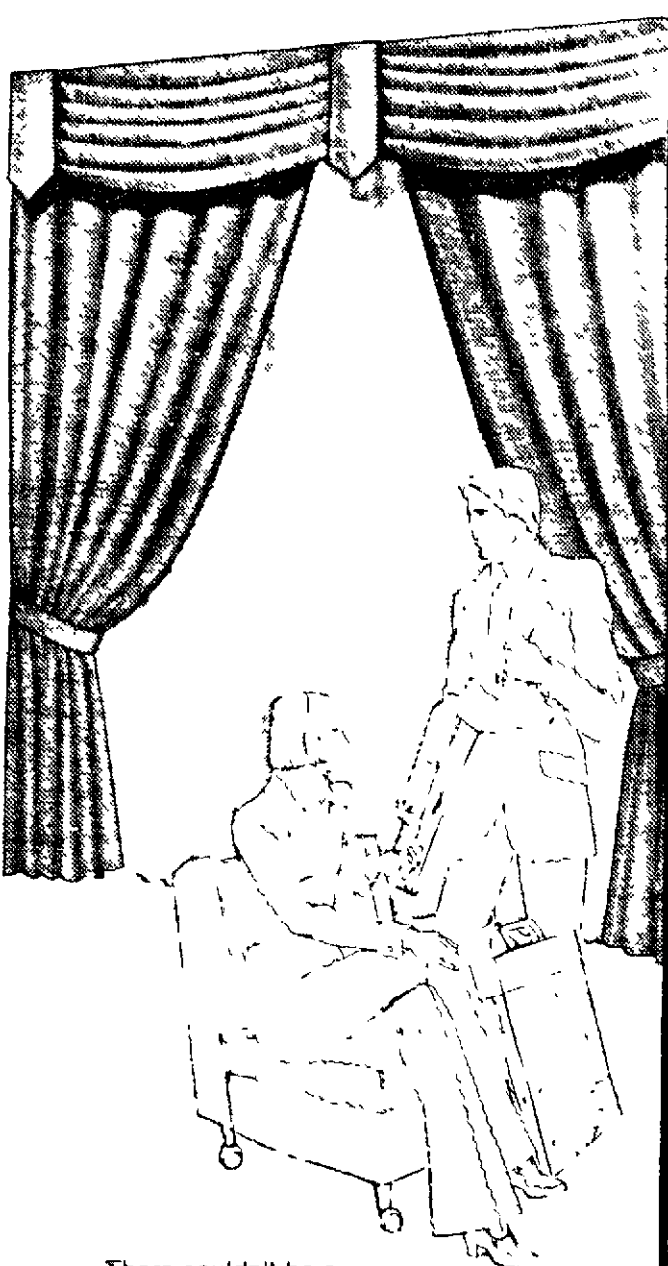

Six University of Nebraska-Lincoln junior and senior students were awarded $300 research grants by the Nebraska Wheat Advisory Committee.

Winners are Julie Bergmeier of DeWitt, Gale Lorens, of Stratton, Audrey Ann Schropfer of Ohioa; William Siefert of Bennet, John Scharf of Curtis; and Dennis Andrews of Holbrook.

The students will work on projects related to the production or nutritional aspects of wheat and wheat products.

City Kids Find Fun-Filled Camp Kitaki Ripe for Sharing

Lincoln youths ride horseback through woods near Camp Kitaki.

By Debbie Murphy

It's a happy place. Every meal opens and closes with a hand-clapping, foot-stomping song about such things as sinking ships and wienie men.

Even the "traumatic" first-time experiences of climbing onto the back of a big horse or jumping on a minibike can't dim the smiles.

The children's enthusiasm at the YMCA's Camp Kitaki near Louisville is contagious. Counselors speak in glowing terms of the antics of the latest batch of campers, even when the experiences aren't exactly the kind the 9-15 year olds would write home about.

Camp is a time of firsts — the first time for riding horses or minibikes, for swimming or just living away from home for a week with a bunch of kids who start out as strangers and end up as friends.

An Opportunity

Camp Kitaki is also a big first for a group of Lincoln children from underprivileged backgrounds. Through funds from the Lincoln Action Program, 150 children from deprived homes are able to attend the week-long camp sessions throughout the summer.

According to YMCA camp coordinator Harlan Johnson, camp gives the children an experience they can't get from their home life, either because they come from single-parent or low-income families or because they have had juvenile delinquency problems.

"You can really see a change come over these scholarship kids," adds Johnson. He said one child stole candy from the camp store the first night of camp. "By the end of the week, the same kid found a $5 bill and searched the camp over until he found the right owner and even apologized during camp chapel for some of the things he had done," Johnson said.

"I don't know how long camp will change their behavior. They'll go back to the same home environment. But if we can give them something special to remember, then we'll have done our job," he said.

About 25-30 of the approximately 100 campers each week at camp Kitaki are classified as underprivileged. But there's nothing like sharing experiences to erase that difference.

All Democratic

Camp Kitaki director Bob Furman said at the camp everything is democratic. Campers are assigned cabins and the residents of each cabin, a unit, vote on what they want to do the next day, with a little help from the cabin's counselor.

The underprivileged children, called scholarship campers, also receive $3 credit to spend at camp.

By the week's end, campers chatter away as if they had lived at the camp most of their lives. Even shy children are coaxed into group activities and find they can contribute to the group.

Pride is a big factor for everyone. Six girls found they could ride minibikes better in two days time than some of the boys and boasted of doing "fancy" figure eights and ramp riding. All is done after many safety lessons and under the careful supervision of one of the adult camp "specialists."

A special relationship grows very fast between camper and counselor. It shows best when kids stop their activities and rush to tell of new achievements.

Johnson said, "You look in the eyes of these kids and you don't see any of them with that faraway look, thinking about their dog at home or their sister or their room. They're just enjoying being here."

Grand Island Chiropractor

Heeren: Acupuncture Not Just Hoodwinking

By Tom Cook

Grand Island — After a year of practicing a form of acupuncture, Grand Island chiropractor D. L. Heeren is convinced there is value in the theories of that oriental health treatment.

Many of his patients have no doubt about the success of the ancient technique so new to the Western world.

Heeren thinks it is time a state board is created to license and regulate acupuncturists — before it becomes the private practice of back-alley hoodwinkers.

Heeren fears if acupuncture is outlawed people desperate for relief of pain or disease may go to unscrupulous practitioners, much as desperate women sought coat-hanger abortions before abortions became legal.

Acupuncture is a Latin word meaning needle puncture, but in his practice Heeren uses an instrument called a Teshing Needle which does not pierce the skin.

Meridian Theories

Heeren, who has practiced chiropractic in Grand Island 10 years, said he follows the meridian theories of acupuncture. This method involves treatment on those points of the body which affect other parts through flow of energy. That energy is the Chinese life forces of Yen and Yang and is based on the belief that one pressure point can affect other points in the body.

Most of those pressure points are slightly below the surface of the skin and can be stimulated with the Teshing Needle. According to Heeren, injuries may result from seeking deeper points or using piercing needles.

Many malpractice suits have resulted from practitioners trying to reach deeper points, he said.

Heeren said he has watched the spread of acupuncture in this country and at first thought it was just a "kick which in some cases maybe helped chiropractors more than the patients."

And in some cases, Heeren has found acupuncture actually may increase the pain or symptoms of a patient.

No Charlatan

"I'm still a chiropractor using this as an adjunct to administer to a patient's health," he said. "I don't want to be labeled a charlatan."

Heeren said he can usually tell within 10 minutes if acupuncture will be effective on a patient.

The State Chiropractic Board reacted negatively when he approached them on the possibility of using meridian therapy, according to Heeren.

He said they felt the knowledge of the oriental science was not sufficient to warrant its use. But since he did not pierce the skin in his treatment, they allowed him to proceed.

"Granted, we're just setting out and we only have a smattering of knowledge and it really hurts us," he said.

But Heeren feels the U.S. "health establishment" has been dragging its feet in developing acupuncture.

"The biggest problem is getting enough federal or state money for research grants," he said. "I would like to see the state support a local institution to research the subject."

"(It acupuncture) works. The public has a right to this service, and a need to be protected from abuse," he said.

Many of Heeren's patients testify to the success of meridian therapy.

Chiropractor D. L. Heeren in his Grand Island office.

Harry Lyhne, 70, of Loup City suffered a stroke in March 1970. He said he spent five years going to various doctors who "just told me to walk."

"After two weeks treatment (from Heeren) I was walking better and experiencing less pain," he said.

Lyhne describes the sensation of the Teshing Needle, or "tire tester" as he calls it, "like electricity going through some spots on your body."

Bob Fickes, 28, a Grand Island teacher, had a back problem other chiropractors had treated for years. Heeren had treated it for two years before he began using acupuncture.

Fickes said that not only has the meridian treatments nearly ended his back pain, but have also helped him cut down on smoking.

There is a danger in acupuncture that treating symptoms can hide a serious, treatable physical problem, Heeren said. But a responsible acupuncturist can use acupuncture to help diagnose the cause of a physical problem that may be impossible to detect through accepted medical tests, he added.

Heeren said he has attended seminars on acupuncture in Kansas City and Minneapolis and has studied through correspondence with the New York Institute of Chiropractic. He plans to apply for a license from the New York institute.

Several other chiropractors in the state have expressed interest in acupuncture, according to Heeren. One of them is Dr. M. R. Baldwin of Beatrice.

"I think that it has some benefit but will never be widely accepted unless there is a complete revision of the health care theory," Dr. Baldwin said.

Baldwin said he has tried acupuncture in a few cases and has seen some positive results.

"Some form of temporary licensing board for all professions should be investigated," Dr. Baldwin said.

Heeren feels acupuncture belongs to "all professions equally," but "we have the profession most logically to be the natural inheritor of this, since it was first practiced in conjunction with the spinal techniques we have used for years."

State Pondering Acupuncture Law

It is not in the interest of public health to put the practice of acupuncture into the "back alley or local motel," according to Rex Higley, director of the State Health Dept.'s Bureau of Examining Boards.

"There has not been a look-the-other-way attitude by this department on establishing a policy on acupuncture," Higley said.

"But we don't believe it is wise to establish a policy until more knowledge is available," he said. "It should not be performed by nonlicensed personnel."

Higley said his department has been awaiting information from the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Dept. and the national medical community before changing their position on acupuncture.

That policy now basically limits the use of needle piercing acupuncture to duly licensed physicians and falls under the practice of medicine and surgery, he said.

Higley said he will have to find out more about the nonpiercing Teshing Needle used by chiropractor D.L. Heeren of Grand Island before making a statement on its use.

"If we find there is an extensive use of this treatment, it becomes imperative for regulations based on knowledge," he said.

If the state decides there is a need to regulate and license acupuncture, Higley said, the two questions that must be answered are who is qualified to practice it and what regulations are necessary to prevent fraudulent use of the oriental science.

One of the most neglected and forgotten items in decorating is the door.

It should be one of the first things on your list. Doors are a very important part of the decor. Doors, like people, lend much character to the home, and when you stop and think about it, they are one of the first things a visitor sees.

When sight seeing, in Europe, or even here at home, look at the visible character that the old ornate and lovely doors lend to the rest of the architecture. Then, try to imagine these same buildings with the unimaginative entrances we are using today.

The big trend now is the hollow-core door with its flat surface and dull personality. But don't despair, there is hope for even these doors. In fact, they are the easiest to add your own character to.

Moldings

For uninteresting outside doors, why not add some decorative moldings. Use them all around the outside of the door; or in two — even four — oblong designs. There also are ornate corner pieces that can be purchased at most lumber yards. Just these applied to the corners of your door add a touch of elegance.

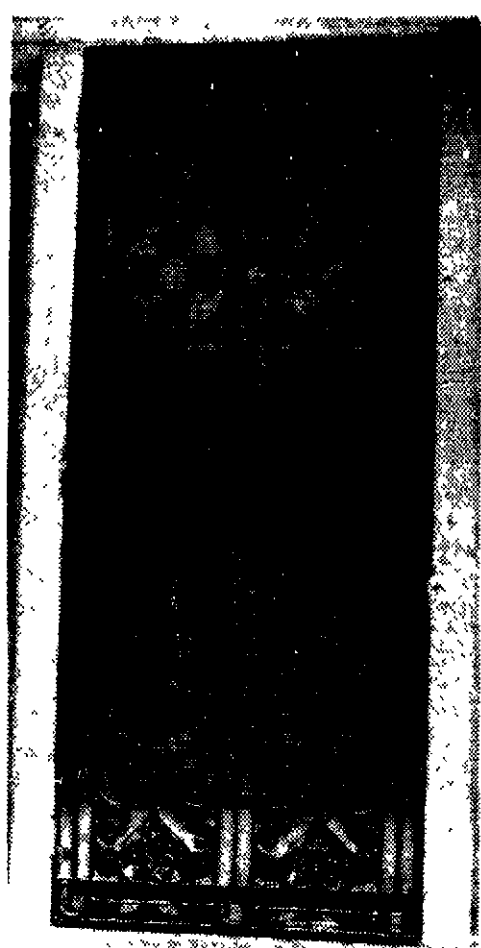

Not many people feel that you can do much to change a screen door. Not true. For my home, I took two wrought iron sunbursts that I bought in Mexico and incorporated them into a new screen door. I simply took them to a welder-friend who promptly anchored them into a frame, which I backed with regular screening. The cost was minimal, but the effect was elegant.

The inside of the door also can take on a new look with relative ease, using big brass knobs and other imaginative hardware. For a child's room, how about using something bright and cheery? Maybe stripes, such as rainbow colors, painted across the middle. And there's absolutely nothing to keep you from continuing the geometric design onto adjoining walls.

Striped Door

For a boy's room, try something as simple as red, white and blue stripes across the door — again, extending it across the walls. To get lines as straight as possible, use masking tape and let each color strip dry before applying the adjacent color.

For that total look in a bedroom, try a fabric that you've used for your drapes and spread. Or if you happen to have soft fabric walls, there is nothing better to complete the scene than a fabric covered door. To add an even softer effect, put padding beneath the fabric before putting it on the door.

For a dazzling bedroom, cover one wall in mirrors and extend the mirrors on over to cover the door. But what good is a dazzling door without a crystal knob? Even though they may be hard to find, it's worth the effort to complete the perfect touch.

Wallpaper, Too

I also have used wallpaper to cover doors. To give this a finished look, I like to apply narrow molding to the edge of the door and paint it in an accent color to match the paper.

One of the most elegant and effective rooms I ever remember seeing, was done in a blue, red, and orange Oriental silk print. This paper also was used on the door and bordered in white bamboo molding. The rest of the room also was trimmed in white.

Since your doors are the focal point of action in your home, why not make them the focal point of interest and beauty? Here's a new decorating opportunity that's knocking. So open up and go all out!

Myrtle Geier Wegner pioneered in ecumenical activities and in efforts to achieve social betterment. She received her master's degree in Social and Religious Work from Columbia University, New York, in 1920, and her interests reached out from her home and community to her state and nation.

The wife of a Lincoln pediatrician, Dr. E. S. Wegner, she served as president of the Lancaster County Medical Auxiliary and the Nebraska State Medical Auxiliary.

Myrtle Wegner was devoted to her church. She was a Sunday school teacher for 50 years, and Sunday school superintendent and vacation church school superintendent. She was state treasurer of the Women's Missionary Society of the Evangelical United Brethren Church and of the "Branch" comprised of Nebraska and neighboring states.

Her Christian commitment led her to active participation in ecumenical ventures. She encouraged the interdenominational observance of World Day of Prayer. She helped organize Church Women United in Lincoln and served as its president during the 1930s. For three years she was president of Church Women United of Nebraska and strengthened the young organization in its struggle to become a channel of meaningful ecumenical cooperation. She also served on the National Board of Church Women United.

She was a leader in organizing the Lincoln Council of Churches, forerunner of the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches, and served on the boards of Goodwill Industries, Malone Community Center, and YWCA.

Her family — husband and daughter — also included a son born to African missionaries, who was proud to call her "Mom." His mother died when he was 10 days old and he grew to manhood in the Wegner home.

Myrtle Geier Wegner, wife, mother, church and civic leader, died in 1974 at the age of 81.

Answer: I sympathize with East's four spade opening after an original pass by West. After the four spade opening, West must pass again since he cannot be sure of the nature of East's gambling bid. This leaves only two alternatives. Either West should open one club or East should open one or two spades. I favor an opening with the West hand and always open hands with three quick tricks. Work Men

Ralph Garner's Job and Hobby Helping Retarded

By Bess Jenkins

Ralph Garner smiles as if he has a big secret every time he goes by the University of Nebraska downtown campus. He does.

Only he and one other Lincoln citizen know that a respected NU worker is mentally retarded. Not a lot. But enough to be labeled in earlier years. Especially before the young man became Ralph's vocational rehabilitation client when he returned to Lincoln from Beatrice State Home.

This individual has been employed on campus and in another downtown big business more than 10 years.

Records Destroyed

That means all his rehabilitation records are destroyed as required after 10 years on a caseload list.

He has no known family but is living a normal life, thanks to folks like Ralph and the other person — his guardian.

"We had a difficult time getting him to leave the first job after years of employment because of his loyalty, but they were not paying him adequately," said Ralph.

The gray-haired, ruddy faced Garner, nearing 65 and retirement Dec. 31, was the first rehabilitation counselor in Nebraska to work with the mentally retarded at Beatrice.

The job was to get clients trained to their potential job holding, then help them find a job in the competitive market so they could live, earn and pay taxes at home just like any other Nebraskan.

That was in 1957, he says, adding he must have worked with some 2,000 young men and women since. That doesn't mean all cases are closed yet. Most run four or five years. But successful stories, yes. Nearly 300 wrapped up in all those years.

Just as Normal

Ralph isn't kidding when he says the mentally retarded are just as normal as the average citizen in many respects. But he always kept some nonretarded clients in his caseload to give him a better daily perspective on all handicapped persons helped.

"I learned that two retarded individuals may have the same low IQs, but that didn't mean one could do what the other does," he says. For example, one could read and write but not the other.

He remembers how other experts in allied fields have helped him prove that some retarded weren't really that way.

Other disabilities, such as epilepsy, made them appear retarded until the basic problems received attention. Ralph helped form the Lincoln Epilepsy Council.

Parents of the retarded get mad at counselors and others trying to help their offspring, but why shouldn't they? asks Ralph. Normal children's parents do, too.

Garner's accompanying photograph by Randy Hampton couldn't be taken with one favorite successful story. The client's boss said it would make the other "handicapped" workers jealous if they saw the worker's photograph in the paper but not theirs, too.

All this makes it easier to understand why Ralph may not have had time to miss not having a family of his own.

A Job and a Hobby

"Helping the young retarded adult has been my job and my hobby all these years," he said. He and his teacher wife, Helen, have been married 33 years.

They grew up around Nebraska Wesleyan where they met as students. They helped plan Pioneer House where they have been occupants since the downtown residential project opened.

If Ralph and the rest of Nebraska are proud of the worldwide reputation that the state's community-based programs for the retarded enjoy, he believes it is due to many, many people.

"I hope Ralph Garner has made a small contribution," he said. "I know many, many other hundreds have, not just a few."

In another five to 10 years, Ralph looks for the word "retarded" to have disappeared. He believes folks will talk about "learning disabilities" instead. And saying: "Well, let's see what can be done about your child's problem."

There would not have been space left to talk about the Garner work if one recited all his background and awards of recognition for his work with the retarded since mid-50s.

A Few Hours

But there are some honors that can't go by without mentioning, he says. These are the Mel McArter Award from the Rehabilitation Association of Nebraska, being named a fellow in the American Association for Mental Deficiency and appointment to its national executive board.

Since getting his "walking papers" six months ago for this Dec. 31 from Cecil Stanley (who also had to retire at 65 as state education director), Ralph is trying to ease off, thanks to his boss, Garry Cartwright.

He is spending these months developing a manual on in-service training for counselors employed to work with the retarded. There has been none.

"It was Garry's predecessor, Fred Novak, who gave me the great break in 1957 to start working with Beatrice retarded so they could come home," says Ralph.

It's a good feeling, he added, knowing you've been a pioneer, as you step out of the picture. But never worry. You haven't heard the last of Ralph Garner — not when it comes to helping the retarded. A person might as well tell him to stop breathing.

Labels Would Help

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing because I am burned up. You printed a letter recently about an old patient in a nursing home who had a new nightgown stolen. She also was missing a bottle of cologne. From the way you answered that woman's letter it sounded as if you, too, were sure the employees in the home were stealing from the patients.

I have worked in institutions where there was a good bit of "stealing" and it was always the employees who were blamed. But I can't tell you how many times it was discovered that a senile patient had walked into someone else's room and helped himself to fresh flowers, candy, robes and even greeting cards that caught his eye.

If the families of patients would label everything, there would be little question as to where it belonged.

Insulted

Ann Landers

Dear In: Thank you for the clue-in. Your letter makes sense and I thank you for presenting "the other side."

Guests Make Bible School Topnotch

By Anita Fussell
Daily vacation Bible schools blossom all summer long in Nebraska, popping up week after week like prairie flowers following a refreshing rain.

What would mothers do without them? Or kids?

Traditional Bible schools run for two weeks at most churches during the morning hours.

But there are plenty of variations:

schools for the whole family, held at night; backyard schools guided by church-trained young people for neighborhood children; schools specializing in puppet shows or creative drama.

One of the best organized and most unusual Bible schools happened this year in and around Southview Lutheran Church, 5511 So. 27th St.

Heart in Teat
While the school's 16 classes, nursery through sixth grade, ~~the~~ the church, the heart of the school, the past, but in Philadelphia, Pa.

The Roman Catholic lay organization, named in honor of Father Junipero Serra, works to recruit members of the church for the priesthood or religious life.

Six years ago, the Foundation Board of Serra International was reactivated to increase financial support of the organization's projects.

Since then, church officials estimate Serra programs have touched more than 500,000 people directly and indirectly exposed over one million people to the challenge of church-related vocations.

Hammersky is immediate past secretary of the foundation, has been president of the local club, served as governor of District #9, and was treasurer of Serra International Board of Trustees.

Visitors the first week represented Jesus' first followers, explained Karen Goldenstein, assistant director. They included a dulcimer maker, a pottery craftsman, a bread maker and even two Galilean fishermen, looking suspiciously like Mrs. Goldenstein and Bible school director Norma May.

Language of Deaf
Modern followers of Jesus arrived at The Gathering Place during the second week: a minister, a doctor, a detective and a local television personality.

One follower, a member of Capitol City Christian Church, taught the children to sign "Jesus Loves Me" in the language of the deaf.

The day Randy Hampton took his camera to school, a Palestinian mother taught the children how to make flat bread.

But one youngster insisted the visitor had to be a modern mother in spite of her flowing, Middle East dress. Why? Her supplies obviously came from the local supermarket.

All Donated
Planning for the school, which registered 155 students, began in March, said Mrs. Goldenstein. Four workshops were held at Southview Church and one at St. Andrew's Church.

This year's director, Mrs. Norma May, has statistical proof that parents are grateful for all the hard work put into the school by teachers and staff.

Along with 28 quarts of fruit drink, "we used 33 dozen homemade cookies a day," she said, "all of them donated by parents."

Lincolnite on Lay Catholic Board

Albert C. Hammersky, a Lincoln architect, was elected to the Foundation Board of Trustees of Serra International at its 33rd convention, held this year in Philadelphia, Pa.

New Minister

The Rev. James Frerichs will be installed today at 7:30 p.m. as pastor of Evangelical United Lutheran Church, 5945 Fremont.

Pastor Frerichs comes to Lincoln from Gothenburg where he was minister of Zion Lutheran Church.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Frerichs Jr. of Omaha, he is married to the former Beth Thompson of Staten Island, New York. The Frerichses have a son, Brent, 2.

"And the Blind Shall See" here Monday night at 8 in Weller Auditorium, Concordia College.

The play is based on events occurring during the ministry of Christ. Twenty marionettes, built to a scale of one-third life size, portray the action on a large, open stage.

Eighteen hand and rod puppets on a side stage enact some of the parables of Jesus.

The group was established in 1966 to present religious theatre on the puppet stage as was done in the churches during the Middle Ages.

Verna and Roland Sylvester, creators of the show, are alumni of Concordia College.

Rumanians Said Arrested For Religion

Glendale, Calif. — Rumanian police have arrested people in fourteen communities for possessing Bibles and for praying privately in their homes.

So charged a religious organization here, the Christian Missions to the Communist World, which has been smuggling Bibles behind the Iron Curtain for the past seven years. The organization said it got its information directly from the Rumanian underground church.

Dr. Richard Wurmband, general director of the organization, who for 14 years was held in Rumanian jails for teaching the Christian faith, has protested the arrests to the Rumanian ambassador to the United States.

NU Ticket Policy Unchanged

By Jana Miller

There won't be any changes in the distribution of complimentary tickets to University of Nebraska football games this fall, the Board of Regents was told Saturday.

But a formal plan regarding complimentary football tickets should be ready for implementation in the fall of 1976.

Regent Robert Prokop of Wilber reported Saturday on the special regents committee set up to look into the controversial ticket issue.

After a couple unsuccessful tries, the regents narrowly approved Prokop's report and authorized his committee to continue to study the issue.

Prokop told fellow regents that the committee hadn't had time to thoroughly review the "vast amount" of information available regarding the distribution of complimentary tickets to public officials, news media executives and athletic promoters.

But, he said, he should have recommendations ready in four months that could be implemented in the 1976-77 academic year.

Preliminary Study

Preliminary study, Prokop said, shows that Nebraska's complimentary ticket practices are "not far out of line" with other Big Eight Conference schools.

During the 1974 University football season, the University passed out 2,042 season tickets to home games in Memorial Stadium according to Dick Fleming of UNL's information office. The stadium seats about 76,000.

Each regent was eligible to receive two season tickets in the press box and 10 season tickets in the stadium. Last fall, 106 season tickets were distributed to regents and former regents.

In Prokop's report, he recommended that the three student regents receive the same number of tickets this fall as the eight voting regents, but that their tickets be in the student section. Otherwise, he suggested no changes in procedures for this fall.

Recommendation

He did recommend, however, that the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha receive 2,800 tickets for its faculty and staff this fall, rather than the 3,700 requested. Those tickets, are not complimentary.

Prokop's report was approved by the regents on a close vote after an earlier 4-4 deadlock almost killed the issue. In the second vote, Regent Robert Koefoot of Grand Island, changed his mind, saying Prokop's report was a good start.

Earlier, Koefoot had said that the regents' concern regarding the tickets infringing on administrative responsibilities. He also questioned the scope of the study, asking why it didn't involve complimentary tickets to other University events.

The regents who are unsalaried, meanwhile, asked their attorneys to determine if complimentary tickets to any University event, including football games, represent compensation.

If so, Regent Kermit Hansen of Omaha, said the regents should be prepared to pay for the tickets they receive.

Cordial Prince Zips to Easy Win

By Mark Gordon

T V Smith received a pleasant surprise with Cordial Prince.

"He's shown his ability in the past, but I didn't know about this short distance. If the speed up front backs up, he has a chance to come at them," said Cordial Prince's trainer following his charger's five-length victory Saturday in the $4,000 State Fair Handicap at the State Fairgrounds.

"I really thought Roman Zipper and Friar Shuck were the two horses to beat in the race, but you always think you have a chance to win," he explained. "He was by far the best today."

He certainly was.

Held off the early set by the Kemling Bros. Inc.'s Roman Zipper and Hickory Hill Stable's Irish, Cordial Prince responded under Tom Greer rounding the far turn.

Roman Zipper Early Leader

That was after Roman Zipper, the 4-5 favorite, had opened a four-length lead down the backstretch of the 6-furlong chase that attracted seven 3-year-old colts and geldings. But Roman Zipper was beginning to fade, obviously feeling the top-weight of 126 pounds.

Roman Zipper led by three lengths entering the stretch, but the fast-closing Cordial Prince collared him early in the stretch run and drew away to his convincing triumph in 1:14. That was Saturday's fastest 6-furlong race.

"When we went into the far turn, I didn't have one horse beat," noted Greer. "I was way back, but he figured to be there with all the speed in the race. But I thought I had a lot of horse left. He hadn't even run yet."

Smith, who brought a 12-horse stable to Lincoln for the first time in his training career, said he was not concerned over the fast early pace.

"I'm more worried about a slow pace than a fast pace with a come-from-behind horse like Cordial Prince," he said. "You never really worry about the speed up front setting too fast of a pace."

Cordial Prince Rebounds

Although Cordial Prince ran a poor ninth in the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha just four weeks ago, Smith was still confident about Cordial Prince.

"He had a legitimate excuse that day. It was the hottest it had been all year and there wasn't a breath of air at all. But when he ran fourth in the President's Cup (a $50,000-added race in Omaha on July 12), we were real pleased. He has a good future."

Smith said he will run Cordial Prince in the Lincoln Derby, a mile chase for 3-year-olds at the State Fairgrounds on Aug. 9.

Will the added distance help Cordial Prince?

"It won't hurt him," he said. "It might help him. I don't think distance will ever hurt this horse. He's never won going a mile, but he's always had the desire to go that far."

Terry Barnes, meanwhile, said that Roman Zipper just was unable to handle the track.

"He couldn't handle the track at all today and the weight sure didn't help him either. He's still a class horse and a lot better than he showed today."

Still, Barnes was at his best in saving the show after Roman Zipper obviously was tiring.

As the 5-2 second-choice of the crowd of 7,693 Cordial Prince returned $7.20, $5.40 and $2.80. Irish, ridden by Jim Bazer, placed for $19.40 and $5.00 while Roman Zipper, 1 1/2-lengths behind Irish, showed for $2.40.

The win for Cordial Prince was his second with two seconds and three thirds in 10 outings this year. The $2,400 winner's share boosted his year's earnings to $15,322 for the Kansas City Racing Stable.

For the second straight week, the Saturday mutual handle established a one-day Lincoln mark.

The $507,933 handle not only snapped last week's previous record of $496,987 but it was the first time the Fairgrounds has ever handled more than $500,000.

Two other mutual records were also set. The daily double handle of $52,688 shattered the previous mark of $51,310 set on Aug. 10 last year.

The ninth-race exacta handle of $51,558 topped the former record of $51,288 set on Aug. 10, 1974.

Bill Stallings was the only rider with two wins. He tallied aboard Joan Brandvik's Larrijo ($4.60) in the sixth race and on Doreen Klein's Kenya A. ($22.40) in the ninth race.

Klein's Final Round of 66 Wins Men's State Amateur

By Virgil Parker

Alliance - Scottsbluff's Mike Klein capped a week-long display of sensational golf with a closing 66 here Saturday to capture the 1975 Nebraska State Men's Amateur Championship.

The 20-year-old Nebraska Western JC grad waltzed to a eight-stroke victory over runnerup Rennie Sasse of Lincoln after shooting four straight rounds in the 60s for a 271 total.

"Though the records aren't complete for the very early years," Nebraska Amateur Golf Association executive secretary Del Ryder observed, "I'm sure that's the lowest total ever recorded and the first time anybody has ever been under 70 for every round."

Klein opened with a course record 67 Wednesday, then added a pair of 69s before his final 66.

His last-round effort didn't better the course record, however, since Sasse posted a seven-under 65 on Friday.

Lincoln's Dan Bahensky the only ex-

July 27, 1975 Lincoln, Neb. 1D champion in the field (he won the title in '72 and claimed the state match play crown earlier this summer), finished third after threatening to establish a new course standard.

Bahensky was eight under par after 15 holes before hooking his next tee shot out of bounds. He double-bogeyed No. 16, had a bogey on the 17th and still had a finishing round of 67 and a 282 total, three shots back of Sasse.

Klein, with seven birdies through 17 holes, needed just a closing par to equal Sasse's record 65, but missed a three-foot

Greens Good

"I scuffed two or three shots but made good recoveries every time," he recalled. "I've been hitting the ball real well. I didn't know if I could shoot all four rounds in the 60s, but after the first day I thought I might even have a round of 61 or 62. The greens were super. They putted very true."

Klein, who was born in Lincoln and lived in the Capital City until he was six, (His father Howard was state circulation manager for the Journal-Star newspapers for 10 years), is headed to Houston University on a golf scholarship.

"I finished fifth in a field of 220 at the National Junior College tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., this spring," the 5-9, 160-pounder said. "After that the Houston coach offered me the scholarship."

Klein, who also lettered in football and basketball at Scottsbluff High, called the week's tourney "the biggest thing I've ever won", but felt his fine showing in the national JC tourney was an equal thrill.

Klein has never played a round of golf in either Lincoln or Omaha. "I'm looking forward to the state match play at Hillcrest in Lincoln next year and defending this title at Capehart in Bellevue," he said.

Only One Lesson

The Scottsbluff youngster recalls having had but one formal golf lesson in his life. "My dad really taught me. He's a six handicapper now and he used to be really good."

Bahensky observed that "the people in the eastern part of the state may not have heard much about Mike in the past, but everyone will sure know about him now."

Bahensky says he wasn't thinking course record, even when he was eight under par

"When I first started out I thought I might be able to shake him (Klein) up with a good start. I got three under right away and looked around and he was also three under and about to go four. So, I was just trying for second place until that bad tee shot did me in."

"I thought six under would win this tournament," Bahensky added. "I got down there (after a two-over 74 on his first round), and it wasn't even close."

Far Off Pace

A second successive 65 wouldn't have been good enough for Sasse, who started the final round two shots off the pace.

"I was trying too hard at the beginning," said Sasse, who earlier this month won the Lincoln City championship.

"When I couldn't get a birdie through the first seven holes, I thought I still had a chance if I could burn up the back side. Then I really started pressing and wound up with bogeys on Nos. 8 and 9. It was all over then."

Sasse recovered with two birdies on the back and a closing round of even par 72.

Jim Brownfield of Cozad, who briefly shared the course record after equalling Klein's 67 the first day, also had a closing 72 to finish fourth.

Hertzel's Clutch

By Chuck Sinclair

Through four at bats, Lincoln Northeast Judds Brothers left fielder Tom Hertzel made connections with the ball, but it never got out of the infield for a hit.

In the bottom of the 10th inning Saturday night at Sherman Field during the Cornhusker League junior legion championship game against Columbus, Hertzel made his weakest connection of the night.

But the ball rolled slowly down the third baseline, and much like the action of a squeeze play, Mitch Stoner scored before Columbus pitcher Don Determan could get his hands on the ball to make the play, giving Judds a 5-4 title triumph.

Actually the ball hit by Hertzel was turning four as it bounded down the third baseline. But when Determan saw Stoner speed by him on the way home, Determan mistakenly picked the ball up before it had a chance to go foul.

String Broken

The extra inning loss for Columbus broke a two game string of extra inning wins. In its last two outings, Columbus defeated North Platte 7-1 in 13 innings and Hastings 2-1 in 12 to give them the western division title and the right to meet Judds for the league laurels.

The same two teams will meet for the fourth time of the season when state legion district play begins at Hastings Thursday. Judds owns a two-game-to-one advantage.

Judds coach Bill Fagler was obviously pleased with the championship, but said there's something he wants more.

"I think I'd rather have the win against them Thursday night instead of tonight if I could," Fagler said. "If I really had a choice, I think I'd just as soon have them both."

Fagler was a little surprised by the result of Hertzel's at bat in the bottom of the 10th.

"He took a full cut at the pitch," Fagler said, "and just hit a slow roller towards third."

The Northeast Lincoln entry probably shouldn't have found itself in extra innings for the first time this season, in the first place.

Behind starting pitcher Dale Mahlman, undefeated on the year at 7-0, Judds built a 3-2 advantage in the first inning and then held onto that through three innings when Fagler pulled Mahlman out of the game.

Mr. USA Nod Goes to Odom

Floyd Odom of Longview, Texas was the easy winner of the Junior Mr. U.S.A. championships at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel Saturday afternoon.

Odom won four of the five judging subdivisions

Hit Lifts Judds

In the seventh, pinch hitter Larry Gunther led off with a triple and scored when Dave Steiner drilled a single and Jeff Schumacher singled to open the eighth, advanced to second on a sacrifice and scored on an error by Judds shortstop Tom Lawrence.

Shelton, who found himself saved from serious trouble in the sixth when a double play ended a bases loaded rally, was never in trouble after the eighth, retiring the next six batters.

Runner Stranded

Judds got a baserunner in the bottom of the ninth when catcher Doug Votava walked, but a strikeout and a grounder back to Determan left him stranded

Golf Budget Questioned

By Bart Becker

City Councilman Dick Baker's reservoir of enthusiasm for the City Park & Recreation Dept. golf budget is drying up because the amount of water used to keep the courses green isn't decreasing.

The 1975-76 budget requests $14,000 to pay the water bill at each of the three municipal courses: Pioneer, Holmes and Mahoney, which is still being developed. The request for Ager Memorial junior course is $5,000. That represents a doubling of funds at each course except Mahoney, which had $10,000 in its water wallet last year.

At a budget meeting Baker asked Park & Recreation director Don Smith if the golf courses could get by on less water since "we're asking the homeowner to cut back."

Cut-Back

Baker, who said he hasn't played golf in three years, accepted that response but later reiterated, "I would hope he'd cut back."

The rationale given for asking that the water budget be doubled is that the new city water rates will increase the golf courses' bills that much even if water usage doesn't increase.

Public Utilities director Lee Blocker affirmed the golf courses use such amounts of water that "I think it would be likely" the water bills could double.

The Public Utilities Dept. says it doesn't have any statistics on how many gallons of water have been used to water Lincoln's public golf courses.

Therefore, no records are available to show a comparison between present and past water usage.

"I'd say we have always encouraged city departments to be conservative and careful in their usage," he said.

There is no formal city policy on water conservation, nor has mayor Helen Boosalis aimed any informal directive at the subject.

"I urge that we practice conservation measures throughout the city," she said. "The department needs water to maintain the courses. I don't see how they could water less."

Watered Every Night

The golf courses get a considerable drenching each night. Ed Cole, maintenance chief at Holmes course, said greens and tees are soaked every night. In addition, nine to 11 fairways are watered nightly.

Cole said the sprinklers run from about 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. That's adequate under normal conditions, he said. But when it's windy and hot, as it was through the first half of July, "they dry out pretty good."

Pioneer course gets a similar sprinkling. Frank Rosenlof, who heads the Pioneer course maintenance crew, says the greens are watered every night and fairways about twice a week.

Rosenlof said the faucets are opened about sundown and turned off around 6 a.m.

Golf pros Bob Schuchart at Holmes and Tim Nelson at Pioneer say about 300 golfers a day play each city course. Last year at Holmes, for instance, 48,000 rounds were played.

Golfers pay weekday green fees of $2.50 for nine holes and $3.50 for 18 holes. Weekend fees are $4 for 18 holes.

Park & Recreation director Smith said all money collected from fees goes to the golf fund for "improvements, salaries and operation of the courses."

The total golf course budget request was for $396,324.

KSU Fans Give Over $100,000

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — More than 100 Kansas State University supporters pledged or contributed $101,990 to the athletic program over the next three years at a gathering at the football complex Saturday.

That sum, of which $78,440 can be applied immediately to unpaid bills, still is short of the department's deficit of $365,000.

Both Athletic Director Ernie Barrett and KSU President Duane Acker agreed it was "a giant stride in the right direction."

Acker said "It's apparent that alumni and friends have a lot of confidence in our coaching staff and athletes."

Barrett said, "The response was tremendous in view of the short notice everyone received about the meeting. We had great representation from over the state and with continued effort from all areas, I'm confident we can overcome the problems."

Saturday's fund raising affair climaxed nearly two weeks of efforts by officials to improve the department's financial crisis. Last Thursday, KSU's intercollegiate athletic council approved a $185,000 cut in the 1975-76 budget.

Nicklaus, Brewer Default Ousts Nastase

Joe Bizard, Que. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus and Gay Brewer played par 70 golf Saturday to remain deadlocked at four-under-par after three rounds of the $200,000 Canadian open, a shot ahead of Tom Weiskopf, who shared the first-round lead with Nicklaus.

Nicklaus had a stroke advantage throughout most of the round over the Royal Montreal Golf Club, but fell back into a tie with Brewer when he missed a short putt at the par four, 434-yard 18th, after missing the green to the right with his approach shot.

He parred the short par-three 17th and the par-four, 448-yard 18th to match Brewer's 206 over the 6,628-yard layout on Ile Bizard, 25 miles northeast of Montreal. Nicklaus played the front nine in one-under-par 44, getting his only birdie at the 391-yard, par-four eighth hole.

On the back nine, he had two more birdies, but added three bogeys including the one at 16. Brewer, the gray-haired, 43-year-old who has not won a tournament since he took this event in 1972, played each nine in even par. He had two birdies and two bogeys.

Weiskopf, who matched Nicklaus' course record 65 in the first round in the 72-hole event Thursday—but soared to a 74 in the second round—had a scrambling 68 to put him at 207.

Mann Soars With 66

HORSHAM, Pa. (UPI) — Carol Mann, a former U.S. Open champion, tied the course record with a seven-under-par 66 Saturday and boosted her lead after 36 holes to five strokes in the George Washington Ladies Golf Classic at Hidden Springs Country Club.

Miss Mann, who earned $47,720 last year, now stands with a 36-hole total of 12-under-par 134 after opening with a 68. The final 18 holes of the $40,000 54-hole tournament will be played Sunday.

Default Ousts Nastase

Washington (UPI) — An infuriated Cliff Richey stomped off the court to protest the antics of the Nastase Saturday, then returned to win the match by default when the controversial Romanian continued his stalling tactics in the quarterfinals of the Washington Star International Tennis Tournament.

Richey had won the first set 7-6 and was at match point against Nastase when the latter was called for a foot fault.

Third-seeded Nastase kicked off his shoe in the direction of the line judge and then spent three minutes berating

Super Stocker Vavra Finds Finishing Counts

By Ken Hambleton
Finishing a race is important, too. Just ask Stu Vavra. Vavra, a super stock car driver, who holds down second place in the point standings at Midwest Speedway hasn't won an A Feature race this season. But an amazing record of finishing every race except one, due to a flat tire, vaulted and maintained second place for Vavra behind leader Kent Tucker, for the past four weeks. Racing with a new 1975 Chevelle Vavra has also earned top ten spots in the point standings at Hastings, and Doniphan. Vavra, of Milligan, ran for the first time at Red Cloud last Friday and won the B trophy.

rather drop a position to finish a race. "We try to avoid accidents, because it's a new car and we work on the car about 30 hours a week just getting it ready for the weekend racing," said Vavra, a mechanic in his home town of Milligan. "I've been racing since about 1959, when I started in the coupes at Capitol Beach in Lincoln," said Vavra, "And one thing I've noticed that the competition and speed keeps getting better." "But we're out for a good time and not to blow the doors off the other guy," Vavra noted. No Unnecessary Chances "I try not to take any unnecessary chances even though I have to start at the back of the pack," Vavra said. "But I feel we're very competitive."

Vavra's Chevelle currently is running on a 427 cubic inch Chevrolet engine, but the Milligan driver noted he would be putting in a new 484 c. i. engine soon. "Tucker (Midwest point leader Kent) has an advantage over most of the other drivers at Midwest because he's running on a bigger engine," Vavra said. "But we'll hopefully take that advantage away, with this new engine." "That doesn't mean you'll see me flying into the first turn on the first lap, trying to make up starting in the back of the pack," Vavra said, "Like I said before I try not to take any unnecessary chances." Tucker maintained his hold on first place in the point standings by winning the feature race last week. Randy McDonald of Phillips finished second and jumped to sixth place in the standings.

A True Rarity
He was leading the B Feature for 10 laps when an ignition wire broke and dropped him from the race. A rarity. "Finishing races and finishing consistently is very important to me as a driver," said Vavra, "I'd

Point Potential In South Line

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

The odds are almost prohibitive, but interior linemen all wish, hope and dream about it — scoring a touchdown. It happened to a couple of interior linemen for the South Shrine Bowl football team, which reports to its training camp site Sunday at Doane College in Crete.

Kelvin Roehrs, the twice Lincoln Southeast all-state middle guard, intercepted a pass and returned it for a touchdown against Beatrice as a junior.

Pete Hohnstein, Hastings' all-state defensive tackle, accomplished his scoring feat against Roehrs' ex-Southeast teammates when he recovered a blocked punt in the end zone last fall. At least four other athletes listed on the South line roster have scored touchdowns. Of them, Brian Horn scored the one with the greatest significance.

Catch Won Metro

The Omaha Westside end, one of seven players on the South team earning a Nebraska football scholarship, caught the winning touchdown pass in the fourth quarter when Westside upset Creighton Prep in the 1973 Metro Conference playoff in 1973.

Two other South ends, Lincoln Southeast's Randy Foster and Centennial's Tim Pozehl, are no strangers to a football stadium's end zone.

Foster, the state's leading Class A pass receiver last fall,

Pete Hohnstein
Blocked Punt Touchdown

ranks a one-handed touchdown snag from quarterback Tim Hager against Ralston as his top prep athletic thrill.

Pozehl was the state's featured Player of the Week during his junior season when he caught a last-second touchdown pass in a 7-0 upset win over Aurora.

It came following a mixup on an attempted field goal attempt. The resulting victory gave Centennial its first top 10 football rating in the history of the school.

Scored Against East

McCook's Dave Hager, listed by Shrine coaches at guard, is still another South lineman experiencing the thrill of scoring a touchdown. When he was a sophomore, he scored McCook's only touchdown against Lincoln East on a 16-yard run.

A pair of South interior linemen also achieved state wrestling championships. Omaha South middle guard Oudious Lee was Class A heavyweight champion and Rebel teammate Dan Desmond of Cambridge, a guard, won the Class C 185-pound title.

Five North interior linemen also excelled in wrestling and list qualifying for the state mat tournament as one of their top sports thrills.

They are Lincoln Northeast guard Steve Singleton, Creighton Prep guard Dave Koford, Randolph guard Roger Fuchs, Bridgeport tackle Paul Vasquez and Scribner tackle John Havekost.

North at Fremont

The North team will train at Midland College in Fremont.

Following a press day at both camps Monday, the teams will begin workouts in preparation for the 17th annual Shrine Bowl Classic Aug. 9 at Lincoln's Memorial Stadium.

Major events during the training camps are next weekend when the players visit the Shrine Hospital for Crippled and Burned Children in Minneapolis Saturday and hold game-like scrimmages next Sunday.

The line rosters for both Shrine teams include:

Goit, Fillaus Come Up With Back-to-Back 300's

By Bob Moyer

For Ron Goit it was a first. For Bob Fillaus it wasn't a first, but it was the most nerve-racking.

They recorded 300 games within 24 hours of each other Thursday and Friday.

Goit, a 17-year-old junior at Southeast High School bowling at Parkway Lanes became the first junior bowler to ever accomplish the feat in Lincoln, while Fillaus' perfect game was his third, but first at Plaza.

"I wasn't actually shaking or anything," said Goit, a left-handed bowler. "But I was pretty nervous."

Extra Pressure

"There was a lot of pressure," he added, "but several guys kept people around me away while I finished out. I threw my 11th shot pretty light on the picket, so on my last shot I threw the ball a little harder and turned it more."

Goit said he didn't feel any different bowling Thursday. "The pins just fell," he noted. "I didn't really concentrate on any one thing on my last shot — I just went up and bowled and hoped for a strike."

Fillaus, who has recorded perfect games at Parkway and Henry's Bowl in Beatrice, said the one Friday was "my luckiest one. I tripped two four pins from behind."

"Each one (300 game) has gotten harder," added Fillaus, who runs the bar at Arnold Heights Bowl. "I was more nervous for this one than any other. When I realized I'd have a chance, I just started shaking."

Go and Hope

Fillaus, a right-handed kegler, said his only strategy on his last shot was "take a deep breath and go up their and hope." Fillaus emphasized the luck factor in getting a 300 game.

"Of course, you've got to be able to bowl well to get a 300," he said, "but there are 35 or 40 guys in tow capable of doing it."

"There are so many 279 games shot that were better than my 300 game," he added. "I've always thought it was just a wuestion of when your number comes up. Today mine came up."

Fillaus recorded a 714 series with his 300, which was his first game as was Goit's 300. After getting the 300 Fillaus had a 238 and a 176.

"After the 300 I could hardly pick up a ball," he noted. "I was just drained."

Goit managed games of 210 and 224 for a personal best series of 734.

Evans Tops Women

In other action this past week, Lettie Evans recorded the high women's game and series for the week, shooting 285 and 822, both at Plaza.

Max Jensen had the high men's series with a 763 total while three bowlers at Plaza, Jim Esser (708), Guy Wimberly (717) and Randy Lang (719) had their first 700 series. For Lang it was not actually his first 700 ever, but his first in men's leagues. He previously had a 700 at Parkway Lanes in junior leagues.

Judds Moved in Legion Meet

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

If Bill Fagler wonders where's the justice in American Legion baseball tournaments, it's understandable.

Fagler, coach for Lincoln Judds Brothers, thought his team would be seeking its third straight Area 4 Junior Legion baseball championship this week in the Capital City.

So, what happens on the heels of Judds Brothers' winning the Eastern Division championship in the Cornhusker Legion Baseball League?

It gets moved out of the Lincoln district and into Area 6 qualifying action at Hastings.

Some reward, mutters Fagler, adding "we have to live with it, of course. But it sure makes you wonder about the planning process."

Tourney Changed

According to Fagler, the inauguration of a Class C state Legion tournament this year moved former Class B teams into C and, accordingly, former Class A teams down to B.

"They had a shortage of A

Bill Fagler

teams," explains Fagler. "Hastings and Columbus ended up in a district by themselves, so they sent Beatrice out there and drew out of a hat to see which of the five Lincoln teams would travel."

Judds not only suffered in terms of travel. The team, comprised of Lincoln Northeast athletes, also drew Columbus in opening-round competition Thursday at 5:30 p.m.

Columbus, one of the state's hottest Class A Legion outfits, is the Western Division champion of the Cornhusker Legion League.

With Judds out of Area 4 competition, the favorite's role falls to Lincoln First National Bank (Southeast), runnerup to Judds in the Eastern division standings.

Price Captures Beatrice Race

Beatrice — A spectacular crash, and a hard-fought finish highlighted the A Feature before the largest crowd of the year at Beatrice Speedways Saturday night.

In the evening's 25-lap finale, Ray Lipsey in car 45x appeared to be on the verge of breaking away from the pack on the 17th lap, when his car swung wide on the turn, jumped over the guard rail, and landed off the track.

Lipsey was unhurt but his car was out of the race, and in the following restart Bruce Price of Lincoln quickly took the lead.

First Heat

1 Rex Nun, Lincoln, 2 Bob Hansen, Greenwood, 3 Ray Lipsey, Lincoln, 4 Les Schaffer, Garland

Second Heat — 1 Ken Parde, Beatrice; 2 Jerry Lehnert, Carlton, 3 Ray Buss, Beatrice; 4 Stan Miller, Fairbury

Don Maxwell and his son, John check one of the fuel injector stacks on the Service Development sprint car.

Engine Rebuilt Overnight

Extra Effort Helps Maxwell

By Ken Hambleton

Lincolnite Don Maxwell and partner Tony Porto would like to keep the sport of sprint car racing alive.

But last week their major concern was keeping their car alive.

Maxwell, the driver and part owner of the Service Development sprint car, took his car to race at Knoxville, Ia., last Saturday for the weekly races at the Marion County Fairgrounds.

Maxwell won his heat nipping fellow Lincoln driver Gary Dunkle, but finished fourth in the main event behind Dunkle, former Lincolnite Roger Rager and winner Eddie Leavitt.

Pleased with the finish in the race, but not so with the performance with the car, Porto and Maxwell decided to check the car over before heading back to Lincoln and the Sunday races at Eagle Raceway.

"We found that we broke a rocker arm stud and a lifter on the cam shaft," said Maxwell. "But what tipped us off was that one of the injector stacks was full of fuel."

Worked Till 5:30 a.m.

"So when we got back to Lincoln, about 3:30 a.m. we took off the top of the motor and worked on the thing until about 5:30 a.m.," Maxwell said.

The sprint car building veteran and Porto got back to work about noon and rebuilt the engine by 6 p.m. Sunday night.

"We got done and drove out to Eagle and were running our hot laps by 7 p.m.," Maxwell said. "Then we just got lucky I guess and won the race at Eagle."

Maxwell led the race from start to finish edging out Dunkle and Lincolnite Doug Wolfgang, who finished second and third respectively.

"I don't think there is anything that fast about our work though," said Maxwell. "I've seen guys at the nationals (to be held Aug. 6-9 at Knoxville, Ia.) change their engine at the track in between races. Or even between the qualifying and the heat races."

Consuming Hobby

Maxwell, Porto and others work on the car about 30 hours a week during spare time. Porto runs his own car service center in Lincoln and Maxwell builds sprint cars during the week.

"Usually all we have to do is tune the motor, change the tires and adjust a few things, but this past week we had to spend a little more time," Maxwell added.

After an initial success last week, another full slate of sprint car races will start at 8 p.m. Sunday at Eagle Raceway. About 17 cars and 1,000 spectators turned out for the races last week.

Hastings Open Set This Week

Hastings — The second annual Hastings Open Tennis Tournament will be held next Saturday and Sunday at the Hastings Tennis Club.

This year's tourney has been expanded to include a women's division, mixed doubles and a junior division.

Heyer Waived

Latrobe, Pa. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers placed nine players on waivers including defensive tackle Kirk Heyer a draftee from Kearney State.

Lincoln Closed Tennis Slated

All residents of Lincoln and full-time students residing in Lincoln during the summer are eligible for the Lincoln Closed Tennis Tournament sponsored by the Lincoln Tennis Association to be held Aug. 7-10 at the Woods Tennis Center.

Play will begin 8 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 7, with most of the junior matches to be played by Friday. More specific information will be released at a later date.

Competition will be offered in 42 different categories.

Speed, Grace in Skate Meet

By Dave Sittler

Speed and grace — roller skating style — will dominate Pershing Auditorium for the next two weeks.

With more than 1700 skaters competing in the speed and artistic events, 75 champions will be crowned during the events which starts Monday and continues through Aug. 9.

Marie Walker of Groton, Conn., President of the U.S. skating confederation noted, "this is the largest field in the history of the championships."

The skaters, who qualified for the championships through eliminations involving 20,000 competitive skaters, will range in age from 5 to 65 years old.

The youngsters will compete in the Tiny Tot division, while the older skaters will be in the Esquire division, as the Capital City hosts the championships for a record-setting ninth time.

Speed skaters, who open the program Monday, will be trying to match last years record performance at Pershing when an astonishing 42 speed marks were set.

Leading the speed contestants will be Chris Snyder of Springfield, Mo., the 1974 senior men's champion.

"Winning is great, it's the reason for competing," said the 19-year-old Snyder, who upset defending champion Danny Snyder of Thousand Oaks, Calif., in last years meet.

Artistic Skating

Artistic skating will take over Pershing Friday, with the senior contestants shooting for spots on the American team which will travel to Brisbane, Australia for the International Championships in September.

Highlighting the artistic events will be Natalie Dunn of Bakersfield, Calif., last year's International Style senior ladies champion.

"My ambition is to make the United States World Team," said the ambitious Dunn. "But, after I achieve this I have set a higher goal for myself and this is to become a World Champion."

On Aug. 4, the Roller Skating Queen will be crowned. Vying for the title will be Terri Champion of Fremont.

Stan's Clinches AAA Title

Consecutive losses by Falstaff on Thursday and Friday nights have clinched the Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball League's championship for Stan's Lounge.

Stan's now has a 20-3 mark in league play out of a 27-game schedule. Falstaff, in second place, is 16-8 and can do no better than 19 wins with the remainder of its schedule.

Mel Knopp of Misty Lounge has passed Stan's Roger Kaltenberger in the league batting chase.

Knopp raised his mark to .450,

13 points higher than Kaltenberger's .437 clip.

John Jackson of Stan's and Lefty Sheary of Falstaff remain the loop's leading moundsmen with 10-1 records.

It's All Outdoors

Youngster's Clinic

Several comments from concerned hunters have drifted across my desk lately. That concern is over the new dove hunting season for Nebraskans this fall.

Beginning Sept. 1, Nebraskans will get a chance at America's No. 1 game bird, something this state hasn't permitted in some 20 years. Now hunters are concerned some would-be doves won't be knowledgeable enough to take proper precautions with their new season.

There are several things to help take the worry out of the situation. No. 1 is keep tabs on our outdoor news. We'll have an in-depth dove hunting profile before the season. No. 2 is hunt with a veteran dove hunter, and there are plenty of Kansas dove hunters in Nebraska.

No. 3 is read "The Dove Shooter's Handbook," by Dan M. Russell, a Winchester Press selection not long off the presses. And No. 4, probably the best bet of all for Lincoln area hunters, is attend the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Lincoln Izaak Walton League second annual Young Hunters Clinic Aug. 30 at the Ikes grounds.

At the Young Hunters Clinic, we'll have some of the top dove hunting authorities we can round up. Ken Johnson, chief of wildlife for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, promises a first-class instructor for dove hunting prospects attending the clinic.

First Try Successful

For those youngsters and parents attending last year's first clinic, we'll have more of the same. For those who couldn't make it, you missed a worthwhile day of hunting education and training.

Again this year, six stations will be set up for the day-long event. The first station will be an introduction to hunting with game laws and hunter/landowner relations explained by state conservation officers.

The second stop will be archery and big game hunting know-how with the Lincoln Prairie Bowmen giving the tips. Waterfowl calling, decoy sets and hunting tips with Tekamah's Ralph Kohler hold down the third station. Kohler is considered one of the state's top waterfowl experts, having been a professional hunter for years.

Station four will enlighten hunters on upland game hunting, dove hunting and the benefits of hunting dogs. This was the favorite of youngsters a year ago, watching different dog breeds working on planted birds.

Station five has the Commission's Carl Wolfe instructing hunter safety, and station six will be the live fire range with youngsters learning how to handle rifles and sight them with 24 new Daisy air rifles.

Added Attractions

In addition to the station stops, the youngsters and parents will be treated to instruction on reloading shotgun and rifle shells with Pacific's Bill White.

Area firearm representatives will be there to help with shooting tips and how to pick a proper fitting shotgun or rifle.

There will be a trapshooting demonstration, demonstrations on different hunting rifles and displays of related hunting nature.

There will be free handout materials, entertaining movies and door prizes for giveaway, including. Old Game Calls for ducks and geese and others.

The clinic isn't just for kids, by the way. There is no age limit, although youngsters under 10 years of age must be accompanied by at least one adult.

The clinic begins at 8 a.m. Aug. 30 and ends at 5 p.m. Lunch will be available on the grounds or bring your own. If you want to learn about hunting, this is the one-day stop you should keep in mind.

Gun Rack, Gals Take Lead

Nobody Can Keep Good Women Down

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

The little old lady was in a high rage because some whippersnapper at the receiving desk had insisted that she be transported to her hospital room in a wheel chair.

There was nothing wrong with her, she complained indignantly, that it required she be driven around in a wheel chair. She was not, she said, an invalid and she didn't want to be treated as one.

Her son nodded with the resigned air of a man who had been through all this before. When they disappeared around the corner his wife sat wearily into one of the chairs in the lobby.

"That woman is going to drive me to a rubber suit yet," she said. "She is 82 years old, and you'd think she'd be content to stay home and knit. Am I boring you with any of this?"

There's Still More
Not yet, I'll let you know if you do. Besides, I'm not going any place right now.

"I've four kids," she said. "They're so brittle they're liable to break an arm just going to the bathroom. But all four together don't give me as much trouble as she does. She is a fishing nut." That explained a lot. They're the worst kind.

"Now, I don't mind if she fishes a little from the bank, with one of us watching," she said. "But she sneaks off on her own. But she's worse than an alcoholic. I try to hide the tackle on her, but she's got the stuff hid in every dark corner in the house."

This, it turned out, was not the first time that fishing had brought grandmother to the hospital. She was, in fact, a regular customer at the hospital.

"She insists in filleting everything she catches," the daughter-in-law said. "It's a wonder she has any fingers left. Do do know what she did last month?"

No, but it might be fascinating to hear.

"She caught a catfish," the daughter-in-law said. "A pretty good-sized catfish. But the beast swallowed the fish hook. Naturally, she went in to the fish's gullet after the hook. A lousy nekel fish hook."

Down The Pipe

"Now a catfish that big has teeth like fangs. And it does not take kindly to anyone sticking a fist down its throat."

"It scraped off half the skin from the back of her hand and then jammed the hook clear through her thumb. Imagine the sight of that, if you can."

They managed to pry grandmother's hand out of the fish's mouth, but they couldn't do much about the fish hook in her thumb. They had to bring her to the hospital for that.

"You'd think she would learn something from that," the daughter-in-law said. "But, oh no. They didn't even have the bandages off, and the stitches out before she was back at it again."

"This last one was the topper. You wouldn't believe what she did this time."

Oh yes, I would. Don't leave me hanging out there in suspense.

"Well, she sneaked off again," the daughter-in-law said. "And this time she really tore it. She ran out of fish worms. Instead of getting up and coming home, she went over to an old fence, ripped out a board and started digging for worms. You ready for the crusher?"

I can hardly wait. Let her rip. "She got herself a hernia, that's what happened," the daughter-in-law said. "But she kept right on fishing until we retrieved her. I swear I don't know what we're going to do with her."

No Hurts Nor Worries When Planes Crack-Up

By Tom Vint

Outdoor Writer
The small single-engine plane circled lazily in the air. Suddenly it took a nose-dive into the asphalt runway below.

The plane was shattered and so was the pilot, but nobody cried. Nobody was hurt. A little five-minute epoxy glue saved the day and the model plane was restored.

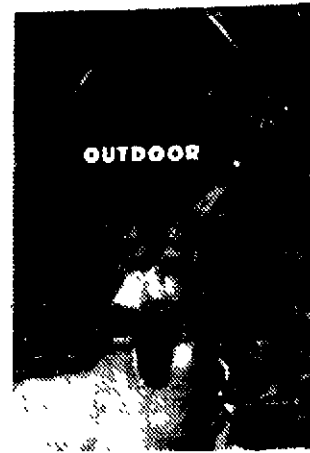

The Lincoln Aero-Design Flying Club had a number of spills last Sunday. Club members were demonstrating the art of flying U-controlled model planes for youngsters at the Gateway Shopping Center, part of a promotion for a hobbycraft shop in the Mall.

"I'll bet we had about 100 kids out there," Dave Reiber said, "and probably twice that many spectators. It was a family-type outing and we had a lot of fun."

The planes might not have agreed all was fun. The two trial models had more than their share of parking lot pulverizing.

Keep 'Em Airborne

"Of course, the object of the game is to keep them (the planes) up in the air but when you're learning they seem to come down a lot," Reiber chuckled. "We taught everybody to fly who came up. I suppose each of the planes we had to demonstrate with crashed about five times. They're made out of balsam wood so it wasn't too much work to put a little five-minute epoxy on them so we could fly them again."

Reiber is contest director for the club's annual flying derby coming up Aug. 17. Co-sponsoring the event with the Lincoln Park and Recreation Dept., the Lincoln club draws model plane flyers from South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas to the contest at the Humane Society Park.

Contest categories include combat, Navy carrier, two racing competitions and the balloon bust.

In the combat class, two planes are in the air at the same time, trying to clip a section of crepe paper stream off the tail section of the opponent for the "kill."

"When you take an airplane into a combat match, you have to figure your plane is expendable," Reiber said. He added this competition often results in spectacular crack-ups and use of plenty of five-minute epoxy, in addition to lots of balsam.

Navy Carrier Test

The Navy carrier class tests a pilot's reflexes, says the contest director. An aircraft carrier deck is set up and participants take off and land from the deck with as much speed as is possible. If the flyer misses the deck, the plane is "drowned."

The balloon bust simulates strafing and bombing missions for the model plane flyers. Balloons are set up on three-foot stands with poles between. The object is to fly over the pole, then dive to break the balloon and pull up before crashing.

The racing classes feature Goodyear Racers, small-engine scale models, and Rat Racers.

The club, numbering just under 40 members strong, demonstrated all facets of the competition for the Gateway crowds.

"We gave all the kids a try, young and old," Reiber said. "It was a lot of fun and I think some of the people found out it's not as easy as it looks."

But then again, nobody gets hurt in these air crashes.

$4 Million to Ducks

The international conservation group, Ducks Unlimited, contributed $4 million in 1975 to the waterfowl of North America, the club announced. The money will go to waterfowl research and habitat purchase, development and maintenance in Canada where over 70 per cent of the continent's waterfowl is raised.

Lincoln's Dave Reiber glues "wounded" balsam airplane back together after one of four accidents during demonstration flights with youngsters last Sunday in the Gateway Mall.

Schedule Conflict

Before Lincoln East attempts to defend its state Class A football championship this fall, a basic problem must be resolved. As powerful as the Spartans are expected to be, they can't be in two places at the same time for the season opener Sept. 5.

Due to a scheduling conflict, East is contracted to play at North Platte and in Lincoln against Omaha Gross that first Friday night of '75 prep season.

East definitely will play North Platte, a Trans-Nebraska Conference rival, but the Spartans are looking for a way out of the Gross game. If they can't find one, however, they'll fulfill both obligations by playing three games in the first two weeks, according to East athletic director Phil Sprague.

Gross Needs East Game

Gross might not press to keep East to its contract under ordinary circumstances. But the Class A Omaha Metro League member would drop to a 7-game schedule without East on the slate.

The only Class A school which could provide a solution is Beatrice. It has an open date that first weekend of the season. The extra week would be valuable time though for first-year head coach Ernie Stark, who in two years has leaped from the Class D coaching ranks at Harrison to the Class A Beatrice job following a 10-0 record last year at Class C St. Edward.

Apparently, the change in coaching is the major source of Beatrice reluctance. Beatrice also has a scheduling peculiarity. The Orangemen are slated to play at Ralston on Thursday, Nov. 6. The state playoffs are to begin the afternoon of Nov. 7.

If either Beatrice or Ralston qualified for the playoffs, the regular season finale would probably be scrapped. But somehow it's hard to see through such handwriting on the wall.

Possible Iowa Opponent

East officials are checking one other possibility to resolve the opening-weekend conflict. They're trying to line up an Iowa opponent for Gross, if Beatrice doesn't come to the rescue.

Should all systems fail, East will revamp accordingly. Tentative alterations call for playing at North Platte on Thursday, Sept. 4, hosting Gross the following Tuesday and moving a home game with Grand Island from Friday (Sept. 12) to Saturday, switching places with the Lincoln Southeast-Fremont game.

Sprague was hoping last spring's Nebraska School Activities Association (NSAA) referendum, asking for a 12-week instead of an 11-week prep season, would clear the mess.

But the referendum was voted down on the strength of small school dissent. Sprague went to the NSAA office to investigate how Class A schools voted on the referendum.

He found that 27 Class A schools favored the 12-week season. Only one vote against it. To many, the outcome represents another example of NSAA structure problems. Just like in the NCAA, big school NSAA problems seldom resemble small school problems.

Class A athletic problems aren't likely to let up any time soon. It's rumored that Millard will compete for the last time this school year in the Apollo Conference.

Prefers Eastern I-80

The Omaha suburban school doesn't want to belong to two conferences and prefers the travel convenience afforded in the Eastern I-80 with Ralston, Papillion and the four Lincoln Class A schools.

Millard's departure from the Apollo undoubtedly would signal an end to the league, which includes Norfolk, Columbus, Beatrice, South Sioux City and the three Omaha suburban schools.

There could be a couple other interesting developments this fall in Class A. Omaha Tech expects to return to Class A status after a year in Class B. Enforcement of integration procedures could even advance Omaha Holy Name from longtime Class B status into the Class A ranks.

Early indications show York returning to Class B after a one-year stay in Class A. Alliance is another major classification shift possibility.

The state's largest Class B school last year is experiencing healthy growth and easily might advance to Class A unless schools such as Tech and Holy Name show bigger enrollment increases.

LA Rams Gain Chiefs' Carlson Surber Garners Handicap Win

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs announced Saturday they had traded quarterback Dean Carlson to the Los Angeles Rams for a future undisclosed draft choice.

Carlson, a four-year veteran from Iowa State, had seen very limited duty with the Chiefs.

He was the second quarterback to be traded by Kansas City this week. On Friday David Jaynes went to the Atlanta Falcons for wide receiver Tom Gerredine.

Announcement of the Carlson trade came after a 60-play scrimmage at the Chiefs' training site at William Jewell College in Liberty.

In accordance with LB 325, 84th Legislature 1st Session (1975), a public meeting of the State Water Plan Advisory Team to the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission will be held on Wednesday, August 6, 1975 at 9:00 a.m. in the Commission's offices on the seventh floor of the Terminal Building, 10th & "O" Streets, Lincoln, Nebraska. An agenda of the matters to be considered at such date, time, and place is kept continually current and is available for public inspection during normal business hours at the said Commission offices.

Halted Traffic

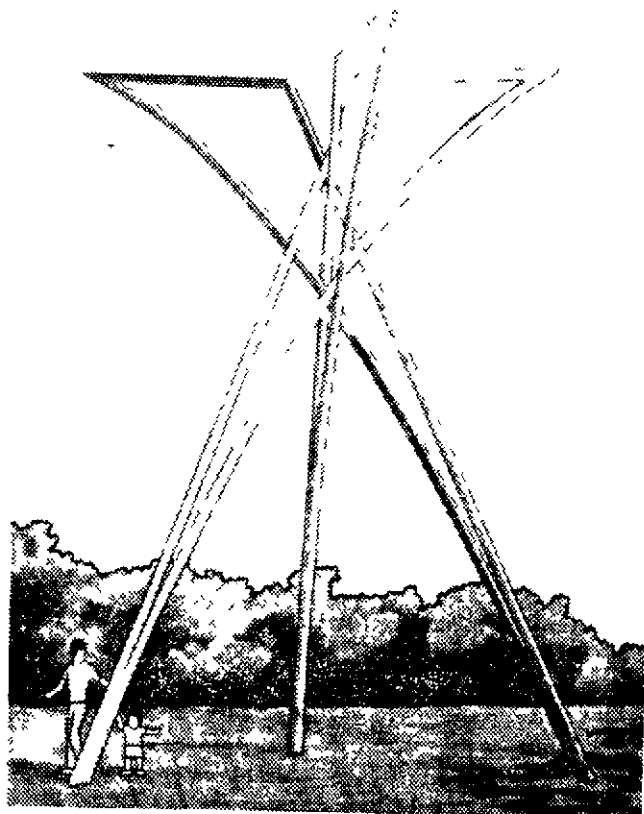

I have noticed garbage haulers think nothing of blocking off streets while they fill their trucks. Recently on So. 42nd, a garbage truck stopped in the center of the street between two parked cars while emptying cans at the curb. Traffic was blocked. The truck could have easily pulled up a short distance, closer to the curb and let one lane through. Are there any laws about blocking the street?

—B.S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The problem of large trucks blocking traffic is a common one, according to Police Inspector Dean Leitner. "Our main concern is the danger" he said. "Although I realize it is a real inconvenience also." He said when you think a vehicle is interfering with the lawful use of a street call the police department. In the case of the garbage truck, generally a route is taken at about the same time every day. Police will send an officer to the area to observe. If blocking occurs, the driver will be contacted by the officer. He said another alternative would be to take down the name of the company and the license number and contact the police.

Selection Process

Who chose the bicentennial sculptures that will grace I-80?
—Art Lover, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Selection began with a national announcement asking for artists to submit designs, according to Art Thompson, director of the Nebraska I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project. The 120 responses included 13 Nebraskans. A committee narrowed the group to about 46, and the designs then were viewed by three art experts from various parts of the country and a group of townspeople from each of the selected communities. The town representatives' top choices were matched against the experts' opinions. "Surprisingly they coincided in many ways," Thompson said. "In each case the town's committee got one of the choices on their list of favorites. Their opinions were a vital part of the final selection." He said public meetings had taken place at six centrally located towns across the state to give townspeople an idea of what the art would look like. Slides were shown of three-fourths of the entries, and it was made clear they would be modern sculptures.

Sidewalk Addition

About four years ago I purchased a home from C.G. Smith Construction Co. Last month I learned I had extra footage on my property which had no sidewalk. I contacted the company and asked them to fulfill their contract and complete the sidewalk and seed the remaining yard. Nothing has been done so far, can you speed up the process?

—Ernest Lundquist, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Peter Johnson, vice president of Westwood Homes and C.G. Smith's Lincoln office, said the house was inspected by you when it was completed and you seemed satisfied that specifications were met. He said since the sidewalk was overlooked at that time by the builder and you, they would complete it. However, Johnson said, the yard will not be seeded.

Ambulance Firms Want Council To Help Pay Bills for Services

By Steve Kadel
They don't like to call it a subsidy, but that's what owners of Lincoln's two private ambulance companies will request during Monday's City Council meeting. Shurtleff and Eastern ambulance companies say they're losing money every day and if Lincolnites want continued ambulance service they'll have to pay for it.

Don Shurtleff Jr. says his company lost $4,800 during the first three months of 1975. Marty Miller, co-owner of Eastern Ambulance Co., cites similar figures.

No Refusals
By city ordinance, emergency calls from public sources — such as Fire and Police depts. — can't be refused, whether the injured person can pay for ambulance service or not. And all rate increases must be approved by the City Council.

Therefore, owners say it is also the Council's duty to guarantee ambulance companies enough money to break even.

"It's not an attempt to fix prices, it's an attempt to survive," Shurtleff says. "I could not afford to ride one of my own ambulances."

The companies' rates range from $41 for a nonemergency call during the day to $52 for night emergencies.

Shurtleff estimates 20% of their calls go unpaid. Miller says Eastern has made 40 runs involving members of one Lincoln family during the past eight years, although none have been paid for.

Keeping a Crew
But Shurtleff says the real expense is in keeping a crew and equipment available around the clock.

Both companies are required to keep two full crews on duty during the day and one at night. Still, there have been nights that both companies were occupied when a third emergency call came in.

For that reason, Miller says Eastern would like to add one full crew day and night. And an extra location is "needed badly," he said.

Owners will ask city lawmakers for a lump sum payment, instead of reimbursing them for each call. Neither would say just how much money will be requested.

However, Miller estimates the operating cost for one ambulance and crew at $125,000 annually.

Eastern already has discontinued some services because of financial losses. Although refusing to mention specific cutbacks, Miller says:

"I don't think our system is acceptable now. It used to be. We simply can't cut back any farther. We can't take all the calls coming in the way we're operating now."

Miller considers raising rates again as the only alternative to a city subsidy. He claims that would send costs higher than people could pay.

"Paying for availability is the city's responsibility," Shurtleff says.

Increase Salaries

The first thing Shurtleff would do with a subsidy is increase staff salaries, which now run between $2 and $2.30 an hour.

Eastern's salaries are comparable, and Miller agrees they must be raised.

"Turnover is a real problem," Miller said. "People we'd like to keep take other jobs so we're undermanned all the time," Miller says.

Both companies rely heavily on student help.

Financial crises aren't new for Eastern, which opened in 1967. Seven years ago Miller complained that, unless reimbursed for unpaid city runs, the company would refuse them.

Asked how he has managed to keep going without the subsidy, Miller replied: "We've had to tailor service to our income."

100 Hours Weekly

Shurtleff, who purchased the former Tiernan Ambulance franchise two years ago, said he has managed by working 100 hours a week for $35.

Some suggest the Fire Dept. provide ambulance service. Lincoln Fire Chief Dallas Johnson says they probably could provide quicker service, considering the numerous fire station locations throughout the city. But he isn't anxious to assume that responsibility.

"If we handle emergency ambulance service it would require some additional staffing, but in terms of money it wouldn't be as much as (Eastern and Shurtleff) are asking," Johnson said. "I guess the real question is whether we should be subsidizing private enterprise."

Trooper Enters Missouri To Apprehend Fugitive

Oregon, Mo. (AP) — Missouri authorities filed armed robbery charges Saturday against an Arkansas convict who was caught after an intense three-day search in the northwest corner of the state.

James Lawrence Cloer, 32, serving a life sentence for murder, and Susan Cannady, 26, variously described as Cloer's hostage or former girlfriend, were surprised Saturday morning by a Nebraska state trooper who drove across the Missouri River bridge from Rulo, Neb., into Missouri's Holt County.

Sheriff Wayne Hutton said Trooper Robert Strickland was driving close behind a big truck and Cloer apparently did not see the cruiser in time to hide again.

Cloer escaped a week ago Saturday from a prison work detail at Arkansas State Police headquarters in Little Rock. A pickup truck he was believed to have stolen in Arkansas was found Tuesday at a rock quarry at Amazonia, Mo., just northwest of St. Joseph.

The armed robbery charge against Cloer stems from the hijacking of a two-ton truck Thursday afternoon from Mrs. Max Markt as she was driving on a highway about 2½ miles east of Oregon. She reported the stickup man had a rifle.

Arrivederci, Francesco!
Genoa, Italy (UPI) — Francesco di Sieno, 34, used to go back every now and then to say hello to doctors and nurses at the mental hospital where he was recently treated for drug addiction.

Police arrested him Friday on charges of selling heroin to patients.

Concerning Resignation 7th Step's Baird Wrote of Pressure

By Jon Sweet
Omaha (UPI) — Two Douglas County commissioners apparently were aware early last month of alleged political pressures being placed upon a former administrator of Omaha's 7th Step Foundation Inc.

UPI has obtained memos written by James Baird, former Commission's Corrections Division, Baird alleges that in a meeting June 2 State Crime Commissioner Mike Jackson of Omaha told him "it would be in my best interests to get off Dave Marrero's project as an adviser."

Marrero is director of the criminal diversion and outreach project in which the AFL-CIO attempts to obtain jobs for criminal offenders in hopes that their sentences will be reduced once their trials are completed.

In addition to Jackson, Baird said among those present at the meeting were Lofgreen, Jack Jackson, Mike's cousin who is executive director of the Region I Crime Commission and Bob Harrison, also a Region I Commission administrator.

Representing 7th Step were Board President Dan Corcoran, executive director John Sevean and J. Patrick Brennan, 7th Step prison project coordinator who has since been placed on suspension without pay by the foundation.

Baird alleges that during the conversations with the two Jacksons and Harrison he was told "there was not enough money to fund both our projects (7th Step) and the criminal outreach and diversionary project run by the public defenders office and the AFL-CIO by Dave Marrero."

"The comment was made that the choice was mine," Baird said. "Get off the project (Marrero's) or see the funding request for 7th Step turned down."

Letters Mailed

Baird sent his letter of resignation to Marrero and reportedly sent Bugiewicz and Albert copies. All three letters, dated June 3, had memorandums attached.

In his memo to Albert, Baird said, "I hope you realize this action and my resignation from the corrections advisory committee were under duress. Please keep this confidential."

To Bugiewicz, Baird said, "I told Mike Jackson, Jack Jackson and Bob Harrison I would cease my support of Dave (Marrero). I meant what I said and I will keep my word."

In his memo to Marrero, Baird said: "Jackson, Jackson and Harrison left me no choice except to see 7th Step go down the tube. I personally couldn't let that happen. But I do have a long memory."

Baird has since resigned from the Omaha foundation to accept a position with 7th Step of Iowa at Fort Madison.

Harris Owens, state crime commission executive director, told the commission Friday information received concerning alleged activities of Mike Jackson as a commission member has been turned over to the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the state attorney general's office.

The police spokesman said the security camera in the office was functioning and police obtained pictures of the suspects involved.

Exon to Attend 10-State Meet

Denver, Colo. (AP) — The staff director of the Western Governors' Regional Energy Policy Office here says governors from the 10 member states will meet Monday and Tuesday in Santa Fe, N.M.

Governors expected to attend the two-day meeting include Nebraska's J. James Exon, Colorado's Richard Lamm, Paul Castro of Arizona, Thomas Judge of Montana, Arthur Link of North Dakota, Ed Hershler of Wyoming, Richard Kneip of South Dakota, Calvin Rampton of Utah and Mike O'Callaghan of Nevada.

Unlike Madonna, Tabitha does not have certified Medicare beds. But it takes more than its share of Medicaid (welfare-assisted) bed patients. That helps keep occupancy around 99% most days.

It is in the profit-making homes with high moderate and skilled nursing care level beds where a person can encounter an encouraging or discouraging word—depending upon how many patients were discharged that day.

Americana
Saturday, for example, Americana Health Care Center could have placed several new patients in its 67-bed program. Ordinarily, no one is turned down.

Eastmont Towers, on the other hand, had all its 48 beds filled. This included reservations for two or three Eastmont residents expected to return from hospitals. This is part of the Home's lifetime residential program guarantee.

Milder Manor, with 143 beds, keeps full but has a constant turnover. Two new patients came in Saturday. A nursing home can't afford to sit still with empty beds if it's not to go broke. Holmes Lake Manor, with 120 beds, ran out of empty ones Saturday. Nursing service director Diane Lyon agrees "there are peaks and valleys. This can happen when residents are 80 and 90 years old."

Village Manor had many of its 50 beds vacant three years ago when it opened. There were two available Saturday.

Homestead Nursing Home placed 30 of its 100 beds under Medicare certification this spring.

Full This Weekend
It's full this weekend, with two open and two individuals interested in them, says nursing service director Genevieve Robb.

Sonja Moul's smile grew bigger in reaction to Lancaster Manor's popularity with Lincoln citizenry generally.

In turn, she says, the 30-bed Medicare opening at Homestead has made it easier for Lancaster Manor when skilled nursing care is needed for residents. The manor, with 250 beds, does not offer 24-hour nursing skilled care.

Enough Beds
Most agree there are enough beds — it fluctuates around 1,050 — of various care levels in Lincoln. They claim it is a matter of complex issue currently under Lancaster County Helath Planning Council study.

It is hoped more action such as the discharge planning operation may eventually eliminate most if not all problems.

Meanwhile, take heart if you get nowhere on Tuesday. Try again Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

And figure it's going to cost at least $20 a day.

Families Find Nursing Home Beds Scarce, Costly

By Bess Jenkins
It can be hell for a family one day. Heaven for another the next. All face the same problem. They are in need of a nursing home bed for a family member, usually an aging one who is being discharged from a hospital.

Less Care
These sick folks usually need a bed with round the clock nursing available, but less care than in a costly hospital.

They aren't ready to go home yet, not even with the help of a growing system of home health care services available.

Hospital-to-nursing home transfers can be a heart breaking problem for the elderly and their families.

With dollar-conscious Washington watching the hospital and physician, medical facilities use discharge-planning coordinators to help the sick and their families find that bed when it is needed. Before that a review committee determines patient ability to leave the hospital.

All local health providers know it helps the Medicare-eligible patient and his family to get into a facility certified for federal reimbursement. That reimbursement isn't available for long, though. About 100 days maximum, more like an average of three weeks.

We Have Next
After that, sick and family pick up the total bill. When that dries up, welfare is the next step.

Federal Medicaid (not Medicare) help cover those costs to Nebraska and county welfare. Mrs. X, who works and has a family of her own, said this weekend it is difficult to understand why her mother can't get into the same home where her father-in-law has been for two years.

The mother, in her 80s, has been hospitalized after several strokes. But she had to be out of the hospital by this weekend, according to a review committee that based their decision on regulations set up for Medicare patients.

Lincoln hospital administrators Friday made it clear that they would never put out a patient on a day there isn't a skilled nursing care bed available.

On the other hand, the longer this patient stays in the hospital the less likely is full coverage. That means the paying patient might have to absorb part of the cost of the delay.

Lancaster Manor
Like any number of other Lincoln families facing this problem, Mrs. X "wishes we could get mother into Lancaster Manor (the county-operated home). We even offered to pay for her but the manor can't accept anyone but welfare patients. Everyone says it is such a wonderful place.

"Well, mother will be there sooner or later. All our money at $600 a month will run out. She will have to turn to welfare."

Another daughter helping Lincoln General's planner select a place for her 80-year-old father says the family doctor recommended "Lancaster Manor, Madonna or Tabitha."

None can take her father. Madonna and Tabitha have waiting lists. Without what Madonna calls quick patient turnover beds, the full rehabilitation center would not have as many skilled nursing care beds available as it does.

Continued Rauling Dogs

43 Miles an Hour

By Mark Gordon

North Sioux City, S.D. — Whoever said dogs are only household pets has certainly never been to Sodrac Park.

Here, just a few miles north of Sioux City, Ia. is one of the two dog tracks in South Dakota (the other is out west near Rapid City) and South Dakota is just one of nine states that allow dog racing. Nevertheless, promoters note that greyhound racing is the seventh largest spectator sport in the country.

So what's the fascination with seeing eight greyhounds scamper around the Sodrac track trying to catch a mechanical bunny?

For one thing, there are 12 races each night at Sodrac compared to nine (or eight) at Nebraska's five thoroughbred horse tracks. That makes for more action in just about the same amount of time.

There are eight dogs in each race with names just as imaginative as the thoroughbreds. Consider Tuffie Leonard, A J's Zippy Missy, Acampo Red Wing, Wassilissa, Cruline, and Castle's Sioux.

Betting? The problem is trying to decide not only which dog (or dogs) to bet, but how.

There is a daily double on the first two races. There is also the usual win, place and show betting. There is also exacta wagering on most races identical to the exactas at the Nebraska horse tracks.

But there is quinella wagering. In the quinella, the bettor must pick the dogs that will finish in the first two positions, in either order. For instance, if dog No. 1 wins and No. 8 is second you still win if you have an 8-1 ticket as well as with the 1-8 ticket.

In past years, Sodrac has been noted for the "Big Perfecta." But last year Sodrac and its neighboring horse track, Park Jefferson, were sold by Jerry Collins to Joe Linsey and the new owners disbanded the Big P.

$3,000 Twin Quin

They replaced it with a Twin Quin. These tickets are bought before the 10th race. The first trick is to get the winning quinella on the tenth race.

If the bettor hits that, he exchanges his "live" ticket for a new ticket trying to select the quinella on the 11th race.

The new owners apparently wanted to spread the money around with the Twin Quin rather than the Big P. Big P payoffs reached as high as $14,570.70 at Sodrac. There has been a $3,000 Twin Quin this season.

Money is still the name of the game. Last year, the two South Dakota dog tracks returned $19,176,168 to the public of the total $23,176,168 bet. Sodrac bettors put $19.8 million through the windows while Rapid City fans bet $3.2 million.

Fans from Nebraska

And don't think South Dakotans are the only ones wagering on the puppies.

A quick glance in the Sodrac parking lot reveals numerous Nebraska license plates with Douglas County (Omaha) making up the majority of the Cornhusker state fans.

In fact, commercial buses run each night from Omaha to Sodrac. You can buy the night's dog racing program at numerous newstands and drug stores in Omaha. Radio station KFAB in Omaha broadcasts the dog results each racing night at midnight.

Each year, it seems there are more Lancaster County (Lincoln) cars in the parking lot. Sodrac is about a three-hour drive from Lincoln.

Four-Year Career

Now let's take a closer look at the greyhound.

Racing at speeds of 43 miles-per-hour, the greyhounds are usually ready to race at 15 months and can compete for about four years.

"All of these dogs are schooled until broken of bad habits," explains Mac McCurdy, a trainer and owner at Rapid City. "Some dogs will never run."

According to South Dakota rules of racing, dogs must be weighed two hours before race time and just before the race. The weight can vary only 1½ pounds or the judges will order that dog scratched from the race.

Identifying Marks

The dogs are checked by toenail colors, tatoos in the ears and distinguishing marks. An identification card for each dog gives the tattoo reading and indicates a scar or white spot that separates the dog from the rest and insures that the right dog runs in the right position in the right race.

Before the dogs run in scheduled races, they are "schooled." That is, prepared and taught how to run.

The track's racing secretary then divides all the dogs into one of four grades — A, B, C or D. with A being the highest.

Sodrac's usual distance for races is either 5/16th of a mile or 3/8ths mile. The races are over in less than 40 seconds.

Each night's program contains each dog, his owner, and past record. It's just like the Daily Racing Form that is sold at the horse tracks.

In fact, dog racing is generally just a miniature version of horse racing. While skeptics say dogs are more honest than horses since there is no jockey to "play tricks" with the horse, unusual things do occur in dog racing.

In horse racing, if a horse is bumped or hit by another one, one of his connections can file an objection and the stewards may reverse the two horses. Not so in dog racing.

If two dogs shove each other, the greyhounds can't file objections. If a dog falls round the turn, that's too bad.

There are special rules for dogs. For instance, dogs can't bolt the course and run in the opposite direction. The lure (bunny) must be in advance of all greyhounds and if at any time any dog or dogs touch or overtake the lure, the judges shall declare the race "no contest" and all wagers are refunded.

116-Day Season

This season, Sodrac is racing 116 days, from May 1-Sept. 15 with no races on Tuesdays. Nine matinees were held in May. Post time is 8 p.m.

If you have never seen the dog races, it's an enjoyable night. It may not be profitable, but it certainly is as entertaining as the horse races.

The attendance at Sodrac certainly indicates that Nebraskans, shall we say, "are going to the dogs."

Waiting to weigh in.

Trap Protested With Music

The American Automobile Assn. defines a "traffic trap" as an area where there is arbitrary or unwarranted enforcement of motor vehicle laws for monetary gain.

In 1965, one group of motorists developed a novel way to protest such a trap.

According to AAA, during the first Glidden Tour a "traffic trap" was laid at Leicester, Mass., by constables who

Hackman's Keen 'Connection'

By Holly Spence

The French Connection II, now showing at the Douglas 2, is about a human bait who almost ends up a dead fish in the frying pan.

Gene Hackman plays Popeye Doyle, a New York cop who nearly cracked one drug ring at home and is sent to France to bring the big drug underworld head out of hiding. Hackman, the bait, is captured by the pushers, junked up with heroin and left to die.

I had almost forgotten the details of French Connection I except for the chase scenes, so this was a relatively new story. However, Hackman does have a chance to delve into the character with more zeal this second time around.

In New York as a narc detective Doyle felt comfortable in his surroundings. In Marseilles, he does not know the territory or the language and is left in a state of total frustration.

When the "H" smugglers fill

Hackman with junk, the needles, needles, needles are more than the squeamish can tolerate. The constant use of heroin by these demented criminals reintroduces the treacherous perils of drug-use.

When Hackman goes "cold turkey" the withdrawal scenes are packed with terrifying realism. Hackman is known for keenly honed dramatic performances and this is certainly one of his finer efforts.

His interpretation of getting hooked on heroin and the nauseous agony of subsequent withdrawal make a loud and clear statement about the social and medical evils of hard drugs.

Comparison of the two Connections is difficult. The first was in the adventure-chase category whereas the second changes course to develop the original character.

Hackman's portrayal might put him in the running for an Oscar nomination again.

Although the lessons in the drug scene may be well worth teen-age time, be warned that the language is extremely rough, even by today's standards. R.

How New Star Got Started

Stockard Channing, the marvelous new star in Jack Nicholson's and Warren Beatty's The Fortune, did a read-through of the part before Mike Nichols "just to help the boys out." She was so good Nichols invited her to audition. That was January and testing didn't happen until May. "Those months were like going through open heart surgery with a local anesthetic. But he finally called and said the role was mine." Now Stockard's working on All American Girl about a female car thief, directed by Jerry Schatzberg (Puzzle of a Downfall Child, Panic in Needle Park and Scarecrow).

Vocal, Tuba Soloists With Munny Band Tonight Star Trek

The Lincoln Municipal Band presents another free public concert at 7:30 tonight in the Antelope Park bandshell near 32nd and Sumner. John Shaldneck directs a program that features Virginia Parker singing Love Is a Many Splendored Thing and selections from Jumbo. Keith Heckman will play a tuba solo on Carnival of Venice.

The band program includes Carrollton March, the overture to Offenbach's Orpheus, Porter's I Get a Kick Out of You, Sundown Sketch, Wright-Forest Medley, Liszt Showcase and Ponderoso.

This summer concert season is made possible by the City of Lincoln and the American Federation of Musicians.

'Acting Is a Lie;' Lie Is Way $11 Million For Actor to Become Director Summer For Mick

By Holly Spence

Bill Glover's theater direction beginnings were a pack of lies.

In 1971 I decided to become a director and I had no credits as a director," said the British-born veteran actor. "So I invented a whole lot of places — I lied like mad — they believe everything on paper."

But the fictitious credits paid off and the lies have now been transformed into prestigious directing credits for Glover, who is with the University of Nebraska Summer Repertory Company as a visiting director for Noel Coward's Private Lives. The production opens Aug. 8 in Howell Theater.

Glover is no stranger to this Coward play for he was part of the recent Broadway revival with Tammy Grimes.

Although acting has been a part of his life for 30 years, he writes 100 letters a year requesting directing positions with professional and semi-professional theater groups.

Directors Scarce

The switch from acting to directing was prompted by the presence of "so few" good directors, Glover said.

"In 30 years, I've only worked with two directors I feel good about," he commented. "And I never had any formal training — I ran away from home and became an actor."

As director, he hopes to give actors what he feels the traditional director does not provide — freedom.

"Directors are conductors, like master teachers," he added, and should not "superimpose their designs on actors."

That only leads to "sterile efficiency" on the part of the actors, he noted. Glover's idea of ideal theater is "collective theater — everybody's theater."

Chicago — Mick Jagger and his Rolling Stones grossed $500,000 for their three SRO nights in Chicago Stadium. And their total gross for the summer-long tour of the U.S. (June 1-Aug. 8) is expected to reach a whopping $11 million. Mick and the Stones realize 65% of the gross, or $7 million-plus. That should keep 'em in smokes for a while.

Reconciliation

Moviemaker Richard Brooks, whose latest is Bite the Bullet, bit the bullet and flew to London to effect a reconciliation with wife Jean Simmons. She's starring over there in A Little Night Music.

Bond Rehabilitated

Moviemaker Cubby Broccoli, producer of the James Bond series, brings news of more easing of restrictions of the Soviet Union. The James Bond movies, for example, never have been permitted over there. Broccoli and his wife Dana were in Moscow recently and inquired of the Soviet's top film commissar if the Russians ever would see Agent 007 in action. "Very soon" was the surprise reply. "We're ready to make a deal for your films."

"What caused this change of attitude?" asked Broccoli.

The Russians hemmed and hawed for a few seconds, then responded, "Well, we no longer consider James Bond a dirty fascist."

'Portraits' On Friday

The University of Nebraska Summer Repertory Theater has revised its schedule to make an extra performance of Portraits available Friday night.

Portraits is the popular musical that toured the state on the chautauqua circuit last month. The repertory troupe will present it at Howell Theater, 12th and R, at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The Friday performance of Portraits eliminates a scheduled performance of All's Well That Ends Well. The latter play will be seen Monday only this week. Scheduled Tuesday and Thursday nights is Steambath.

Friday's Portraits performance replaces an earlier one that was cancelled because of an illness in the cast.

Opera Huckster Title Enjoyed By Ex-Omahan

By Helen Haggie

Glynn Ross

"I was called an opera huckster in an article in the Wall Street Journal several years ago, and I'm tickled to death the name stuck."

So said former Nebraskans Glynn Ross, general director of the Seattle Opera Company. He not only is the general director but often is called the driving force of that company.

Today the company is presenting the last performance of what Robert Lindsey of the New York Times describes as "one of the most ambitious operatic projects ever undertaken in the United States."

German and English

On July 15, the company opened for a six-day performance in the original German of the four operas of Richard Wagner's Der Ring Des Nibelungen and last Tuesday it began the repeat of Der Ring, but this time in English. It is the first company in the world to offer the work of 15 hours of music in less than a week, in German and in English in tandem.

Many critics have rated some performances by the company on a par with those of San Francisco, Chicago and New York.

How did Ross earn the name opera huckster?

By using all sorts of advertising gimmicks — bumper stickers, humorous commercials, buttons, etc. — to sell tickets.

Native of Omaha

Ross talked on the telephone about the varied activities of his life.

"I was born (in 1914) in the packing house area in Omaha and went to South High. When I was a senior, I weighted only 95 pounds. So football and other crunching types of athletics were out of my class. Instead, I became a Golden Gloves boxer."

The opera director, graduated from high school in 1932, said, "I know all about the depression, the drought, the grasshoppers, the red rain of dust — all the miseries of those years."

"I spent one year at the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) camp at Ft. Robinson. Many were the times we went from the camp to Scottsbluff for dances."

My father died in 1936, after being ill a long time with cancer and I had to take over the farm. When I got the mortgage paid, I hitched a ride in the caboose of a cattle train, to Pittsburgh and took a bus to Boston. When I arrived at the Power School of Music there I had $7 and the same pair of socks I had worn when I left Omaha."

Haymarket Western Show Has Work by Six Artists

A Western Art show opens next Sunday at the Haymarket Art Gallery, 119 So. 9th. Six artists will have work on display until Sept. 1.

Four Nebraskans represented are Devon Adams of Peru, Harry Brunk of Maxwell, Hans Burchardt of Lincoln and Herb Mignery of Hastings.

The out-of-staters are Carol Barthold of Kansas City and Bill Towning of Helena, Mont.

Ms. Adams is well known as a Nebraska landscape painter, and recently she has entered the field of Western art. Her acrylic paintings will be on display. Burchardt is a horticulturist and woodcarver of outdoor life. He will exhibit wood sculpture.

Brunk, who says he has been strongly influenced by his ranch country surroundings and by study of Charles Russell, will exhibit paintings.

Cowboy paintings and cartoons will be exhibited by Mignery, who portrays the serious and beautiful as well as the lighter side of the cowboy scene in his cartoons.

Ms. Barthold has exhibited widely in the Midwest. She will exhibit landscapes and portraits. Browning, a writer and photographer recently turned painter, will exhibit cowboy paintings and cartoons.

A reception at the gallery from 2 to 4 p.m. next Sunday will open the exhibition.

Star Trek

The thousands of Star Trek loyalists (that TV show still has a tremendous following even though it's been in reruns for several years) assemble at Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel Aug. 22-24 for the Star Trek Science Fiction Spectacular. Original cast members including Leonard Nimoy are expected.

Show's Close Also Ends The Printmaker's Career

Around and about, there's good news and some that's sad. An example of the sad is that when the present show, Thirty More Photographs closes at The Printmaker, 134 No. 14th, the gallery also will close.

Barbara Kendrick and Rosemary Kuehn opened the gallery and printmaking studio last October amid good wishes and high hopes that the gallery would become a center for area artists in the printmaking business. It seems it is not to be.

Week To Go

This is the last week to see the Hopper exhibit at the Sheldon Art Gallery on the University of Nebraska campus.

"Though the exhibition has not scored the record for the largest exhibition attendance, there has been a steady stream of persons coming to the gallery to enjoy the paintings," says Jon Nelson, gallery assistant director.

Gateway Exhibit

The Lincoln Artists Guild will have its annual Gateway sidewalk exhibit and sale Aug. 7-9. Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The exhibition will be held in both the Garden and Gallery malls. Exhibitors must be members of the guild. Hilda Larson is membership chairman.

The August show will include only original work by Lincoln area artists. In some past shows as many as 70 exhibitors participated.

An Artist's Note

A note to Tom Yates, a member of the I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project board, says in part:

"I think the courage and imagination that you put forth in launching the world's greatest and longest sculpture garden to date could have been fostered from the dreams that brought man along the Oregon Trail...."

"I fell that Nebraska is opening new frontiers far beyond what anyone may see today and anything that I can do to spread the word and bring the project the attention it deserves is what I committed myself to...."

"I feel like a new citizen in your state and with that thought in mind entitled my work, Arrival...."

Cordially,

Paul Von Ringelheim

Arrival is the piece to be erected at the Seward/Milford rest stop.

Collector Discovers History of World Through Her Dolls

By Jay Fussell
Special Contributor

When the drumroll of history sounds throughout 732 West Lakeshore Drive, Marjorie Seidel calls the roll of her special family:

"Philadelphia Abernathy . . .

"Bethia Hubbard . . .

"Jemima Tullikins . . ."

All names are heavy with the winters of yesterday. Jemima Tullikins, for example, was the wife of Gen. Cornwallis.

Then out of the mists of history they come: resplendent in the dress of their day, 195 little people, mostly adopted ancestors, and all . . . dolls.

They come from different lands, from different times, from different life styles.

When the muster is complete, they report to the Doll Lady, Marjorie Seidel, president of the United Federation of Doll Clubs Inc., an organization that boasts 296 clubs and 7,500 members throughout the United States.

Moving toward the conclusion of her two-year term, Marjorie looks back over 16 years of doll collecting to 1959 when she bought her first doll, sight unseen, from a catalog.

No second guesses enter her mind. She remains sold on her hobby — which has been called the third largest hobby in the nation (behind the collecting of stamps and coins).

Hooked on History

At 6 years old, living the good life in Springfield, Ne., and burdened with no more weighty problems than the average 6-year-old, Marjorie chanced to meet a Civil War veteran who told her he had been in Pickett's Charge.

Little did she know at the time that Pickett's Charge occurred on the third day of the famous Battle of Gettysburg. But the allure of history had found a home.

The more she conjured with the notion, the more interesting it became. In fact, she now traces her lifelong concern for history back to that moment.

But it was not until she met Philadelphia Abernathy, her first papier-mache doll, that her concern for history found its natural channel in doll collecting.

Many of her dolls who started as acquaintances have since turned into relatives, for Marjorie names all her dolls, many with the names of her ancestors identified from a family album over a century old.

From Gutta-percha to Bisque

Marjorie specializes in papier-mache dolls, but she also is interested in bisque dolls. Her bisques number fewer than a dozen, yet each is a collector's item.

She identifies the bisque dolls as her real luxury pieces, all quite expensive, especially the French bisque.

As she talks about bisque dolls, this calm and efficient history buff momentarily loses the no-nonsense attitude she takes toward her work and her doll collecting alike, developing a somewhat dreamy look as she speaks of Jumeau and Bru dolls, the most sought-after of all French bisques, whose prices range from $1,800 to $2,000 apiece.

The dolls in her collection are made of a variety of substances: paper-mache, bisque, rags, cloth, wood, wax, china, rubber, plastic, gutta-percha — and the head of one from an orange.

She has won a several ribbons for her papier-mache dolls in the federation's national exhibits.

"Don't Go Overboard"

You shouldn't become too enthusiastic about your hobby, Marjorie believes, adding, "I once heard of a lady who punched air holes in a box used to send a doll through the mail."

The slogan she has adopted for her term of office is "Doll Power," a theme she develops in her many talks to regional meetings all over the country.

Her post is an unpaid position, but she feels richly rewarded by the contacts she has made over the last 16 years.

Working with large blocks of time is nothing new for Marjorie Seidel. As assistant to the directors of the Conservation and Survey Division, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, she finds herself dealing with geologic time calculated in the hundreds of millions of years.

But her personal interest remains firmly fixed in the more recent period of recorded history, where dolls are found.

The oldest doll in her collection is an Egyptian grave doll dating back to 1200 B.C. Most of her collection, however, dates back to the last two centuries.

Staying Power of Doll Power

Her hobby can lift her spirits, sustain her in moments of trial and refresh her mentally and emotionally.

Commenting on this theme in her president's letter in Doll News, she wrote:

"At times I have pondered why this should be so. Perhaps it is because there is a great deal of yesterday in today's dolls.

"They bind us with chords of love to yesterday's memories; they bridge the gap of time and compress tomorrow and yesterday into today; they store in bodies more permanent than ours the links to our associations with those we have known in other circumstances.

Like finely cut prisms that bend the rays of light, they bend the time lines of history and the hope lines of the future, concentrating all past, present, and possible values into one eternal now.

"For such relatively permanent friends in a fragile world of human impermanence, we can be truly grateful."

Female Chauvinism?

Are there any men who are Federation members?

"Oh, yes," she answered. "About 10% of the members at last year's convention were men. Some of the clubs in the federation have men as their presidents. And the number of men in the membership is increasing."

Although there is a nondiscrimination policy in the federation, Marjorie wonders whether men might be discriminated against slightly, perhaps even unconsciously, in the competitive exhibits.

"I have a French bridal couple," she explains. "I took the wife to a convention and won a blue ribbon with her. The next year I took the husband. He didn't get anything.

"The heads of these two dolls are identical; the only difference is that one is dressed as a boy and one as a girl. I think the only reason he didn't get a ribbon was because he is a man."

Know How To Explain You're Ill

Most travel experts agree that a successful vacation depends on the amount of planning done in advance. However, planning for the possibility of sickness or injury during one's travels, particularly in foreign countries, is often overlooked.

The Blue Cross Assn. has prepared a pocket-size foreign language guide that permits Americans traveling in foreign nations to describe a health problem in native languages.

The booklet has English, French, German, Italian and Spanish sentences and phrases describing symptoms of person who are feeling ill or have had an accident.

For quick reference, phrases are grouped in such categories as "at the doctor's," "at the dentist's," "at the hospital" and "at the drugstore." Phrases are shown first in English followed by translations and phonetic pronunciation in the four foreign languages.

Listed are the various parts of the body, the most commonly-used drugs as well as the standard physician phrases such as "stick out your tongue," "exhale" and "who is your next of kin?"

Travelers may obtain a free copy of "The Foreign Language Guide to Health Care" from offices of the various Blue Cross plans throughout the nation.

Our Little Town Special Sounds In Summer Air

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

Irrigation pumps chug life-giving water to the fields nearby. Green corn whispers a symphony of growth and prosperity for the farmer and his creditors. Whirring mowers cut the blossoming alfalfa, accompanied by the flurried rising of quail and pheasant and rabbits routed from their nests.

The trilogy of birdsong, rooster crowing and farm trucks rattling ushers in the dawn. Century-old cottonwood trees rustle their leaves, imitating the rush of water on far distant shores.

Locusts, cicadas, crickets and grasshoppers set up their incensent chatter. Humming honey bees travel from blossom to blossom. Frogs, caught in the bottomless mud of the stock ponds, croak in bass.

The wind, carrying a nameless loneliness, adds its eerie voice to the patter of rain. Paradoxically it scolds and comforts, seeking our very souls. The noise of fast gathering storms adds a touch of drama to the tranquility of summer.

Bicycles whiz, lawn mowers purr and hammers pound.

Trucks on the highway give vocal testimony that the wheels of commerce are ever turning. Squealing tires of the souped-up cars of our young screech acknowledgement of services rendered.

And then the sun, like a big orange wafer slips below the horizon, and all life gathers in.

Jeweled fireflies usher in the evening — softly and in cadence with nature.

The laughter of happy children "playing out" mingles with the barking of a playful puppy. Neighbors call to their children and wander over for a bit of visiting.

A porchswing rhythmically squeaks; a TV sends forth a haunting melody; coyotes plaintively call one to another; the church choir is practicing a new anthem for Sunday, giving a blessing to our world.

These are some sounds of summer . . . moments to remember.

Wheels of Progress Ambushed

9F

Lincoln, Neb., Sunday Journal and Star, July 27, 1975

The Great Train Robbery. By Michael Crichton; Knopf.

Great? What's so great about a train robbery with a haul of only 12,000 British pounds' worth of gold bullion? Especially after a year of planning so meticulous that the day before the theft, only one of the many people involved knows what is to be stolen? And they got caught, too!

Well, the key is not what happened, but when and where. It was in England of 1855, about two decades into the Victorian era and not much longer than that in the country's transformation into the world's first urbanized, industrialized society.

Living conditions were improving for all classes of Englishmen. The average lifespan was increasing rapidly. And standing strikingly and visibly above all the proofs of progress and promise of the future were the railroads.

Before 1830 there were none. By 1854 they had helped alter every aspect of English life and commerce. To the Victorian mind, such progress meant moral as well as material advancement.

So, you see, a train robbery was an attack on all that was good in society. It meant that "the criminal class" had found a way to prey upon progress.

However, although moral attitudes dictated that crime was to be feared, despised and condemned, an outstanding criminal exploit was also secretly to be admired. This is why the Great Train Robbery of 1855 "was not only shocking and appalling, but also daring, audacious and masterful."

Michael Crichton has done much, much more than just write an economic study of Victorian England. With the same fine eye for detail and plausibility that he brought to his earlier thrillers The Andromeda Strain and The Terminal Man, he has written a captivating historical whodunit. Or, to be more accurate, a howdunit (which, incidentally, is also a first-rate lesson in Victorian English criminal slang).

After studying voluminous courtroom testimony by the three major participants in the robbery, along with newspaper accounts of the day. Crichton constructed a narrative with just enough current events of the 1850s to show why the things that happened could only have happened then.

For example, the ringleader (or the putter-up, if you will): Edward Pierce, a tall, handsome man in his early 30s, sporting a full red beard, a gentleman in speech, manner and dress, with a house at No. 12 Harrow Road in a fashionable part of London. Well born? Most assuredly. He himself said he attended Winchester and Cambridge, didn't he? Certainly not of the criminal class. His acceptance by the aristocracy also was made easier by the Victorian view of what constituted crime.

Henry Mayhew, observer, reformer and classifier of Victorian society, once listed the types of criminals in England. There were 5 major categories, 20 subheadings and more than 100 separate entries. Nowhere on the list was what is today called a white-collar criminal.

Pierce, therefore, was indeed above reproach.

Why else could it only have happened as it did then?

Combination locks had not yet been invented. A chemist named Nobel was just beginning his career, so there would be no dynamite for another decade. All safes opened with keys. And the two safes aboard the South Eastern Railway train carrying gold for shipment to the Crimea, where British troops were waiting to be paid, opened with two keys each. Pierce not only had to find out where the four keys were kept, he then had to arrange to have them lifted, copied and returned, with no one the wiser.

It took months and required the services of a screwsman, a snakesman, and Newgate Prison, from which no one had ever escaped. And of course you needed a swell, the best being Teddy Burke, a dipper who worked with a stickman at his side and two stalls, one front and one back.

Who and what are all these people? What happened to them? What happened to the gold? Whatever are you talking about?

It's only for lack of space, not enthusiasm, that I don't answer all these questions for you — a coopered ken, one might say.

But to do so would be to spoil what certainly is going to be some of the best hammock reading you'll have this summer.

—David E. Jones

Stamp of Disapproval

The Coming Collapse, of The Post Office. By Robert J. Myers; Prentice Hall.

Anyone who remembers the three cent stamp will read this condemnation of the Post Office with relish. The Post Office comes right after the phone and utilities companies as organizations the public loves to hate.

But the purpose of the author, who is the publisher of the New Republic Magazine, is not only out to explore the agency's expensive blundering. He is pushing for some radical surgery before the inevitable collapse. He admits that the recent postal reorganization made some progress but contends that new solutions must be sought. He has some suggestions.

At present, he writes, the Post Office is busily becoming a classic white elephant with its large investment in unneeded buildings and inappropriate machinery, expensive labor force and vast top management bureaucracy.

His conclusion: Its chances for survival in its present form are zero.

Myers says the agency has a history of corruption such as: Direct payoffs for favorable legislation and delaying congressional hearings called to investigate its operations. Nepotism, cronyism and the awarding of contracts on a non-competitive basis are common, he says.

Many observers feel that one of the most serious blows to the U.S. public wreaked by Post Office policy has been its reversal of the traditional low rates for magazines and newspapers. The result has been fewer and fewer publications available to the public.

Hawaii's Sen. Hiram Fong said the single most serious deficiency in the Postal Service is "The main problem is that the Postmaster General does not have his money invested in it."

Sunny Memories

Ernie. By Madelaine Hemingway Miller;

Ernie, of course, is Ernest Hemingway. The author of this meandering memoir is his younger sister, Sunny, fourth-born of the six Hemingway children.

Although he was six years older than his adoring sister, the relationship between Ernie and Sunny was a close one, both in childhood and in later life. There were many shared moments between the two and Mrs. Miller recalls as many of them as she can.

She tells of the family's early days, living in a big house in Oak Park, Ill., presided over by a doctor father and an artistically inclined mother, and of the long, pleasant summers the family spent in its summer home at Walloon Lake in Michigan.

Although these recollections are pleasant enough, it is what Mrs. Miller remembers and tells of her famous brother that is the main thing and there just isn't enough here. It's moderately interesting to learn that Hemingway practiced boxing before a large mirror "on the first landing up the stairs from the living room" and that when he returned from the war in Italy in 1919, he brought his sister a silver necklace, but all this is not terribly important to grasping Hemingway as writer.

Nevertheless, the text is readable enough and the many photographs taken from the family album are interesting as mirrors of a very personal past.

Fisherman's Summer. By Roderick L. Haig-Brown; Crown.

Roderick Haig-Brown is a name to conjure with among fisherman.

Himself a resident of British Columbia, he has fished his home stream, the Campbell River, and other rivers of the Canadian Northwest to produce some of the best writing on the subject in our day.

His books, now being reissued in updated editions, reflect the timelessness of angling, which in essence hasn't changed much since Izaak Walton's time.

This volume, first published in 1959 and now reprinted with a new introduction by the author, centers mostly on the rivers of Vancouver Island. It is rich in evocative writing, sound advice, and infectious pleasure in the joys of angling.

'B. Free' Cancellation

A philatelic cancellation which reproduces a franking technique used by Benjamin Franklin is available to collectors. It was first used Saturday, July 26 was the date in 1775 when Franklin was appointed postmaster general by the Continental Congress.

The cancellation, as well as a souvenir envelope, is being offered in connection with the opening of the B. Free Franklin Post Office in Philadelphia as a part of the Franklin Court Complex. The cancellation is reproduced with this story.

As far as can be determined, the use of the word "Free" between the first initial and the surname was uniquely a Benjamin Franklin technique, the U.S. Postal Service says.

Collectors desiring the cancellation may send stamped, self-addressed envelopes to "B.

Benjamin Franklin

1975 Philadelphia, PA

Free Franklin Cancel, Postmaster, Philadelphia, PA 19101."

Souvenir envelopes offered in connection with the Franklin Court opening feature a pen and ink drawing of Benjamin Franklin on a 10-cent Liberty Bell stamped envelope, and canceled with the B. Free Franklin postmark. These envelopes are 35¢ each or three for $1, as long as the supply lasts.

A stamped envelope with return address should accompany each order, which should be addressed to "Franklin Souvenir Envelope, Postmaster, Philadelphia, PA 19101."

Short History Has Long Title

A color slide program, A Short History of the American Revolution as Shown by U. S. First Day Covers, 1925-74, has been produced for distribution by the American First Day Cover Society. Author of the program is Joe D. Hough of Washington, D.C., the society's Bicentennial historian.

The program, shown first at the AFDCS' annual convention in May, tells the story of the American Revolution with appropriate first day covers of regular and commemorative postal issues and other postal material.

The story identified pertinent battles, events and individuals in chronological order, and it is designed to interest students, teachers and Bicentennial enthusiasts, in addition to philatelists.

Inquiries about the slide program should be made by writing William P. Duffy, AFDCS, 83 Ridgcrest Drive, Westfield, Mass. 01085.

Haitian Coin Commemorates '76 Olympiad

By Joe Planas, Special Writer
Women and sports — two good subjects to combine on a coin.
That coin, the $100 gold coin of the Republic of Haiti, commemorates the 1976 Olympic Games. A companion silver coin will also be issued.

Vignettes of a skier on one side and runners on the other flank the likeness of a youthful female bearing a torch used to light the Olympic flame.

The cities Innsbruck (Austria) and Montreal (Canada) are listed on each side of the five Olympic rings. The word "Olympiade" is inscribed above the Olympic rings. The winter games are set for Innsbruck, and the summer games for Montreal.

The 21 and 2 3 karat gold piece has a reverse showing the flag, cannon and palm seal of Haiti against the ocean for a background. The 25 mm gold coin weighs 6.5 grams and carries the denomination 500 gourdes. At the official exchange rate of five gourdes to the dollar, the coin's value is $100.

Additional information may be obtained from Haitian Olympic Coins, c/o Italcambio 1470 NE 129th St., North Miami, Fla., 33161.

American Tourists Scarce As Dollar's European Value

By Richard C. Longworth

Brussels (UPI) — It was Saturday night in Vienna and the American bar at the Bristol Hotel contained not one American.

"We don't see many Americans any more," said the bartender as he poured one reason why — a shot of whisky costing 55 schillings ($3.40).

All over Europe, the American tourist — beset by recession at home, a falling dollar overseas and inflation everywhere — is a rare bird compared to earlier years.

Most European nations report fewer American tourists this summer than last year — and 1974, the year of the energy crisis, was a disaster for tourism in Europe.

What's more, these Americans who are coming to Europe are abandoning their old free-spending ways. Instead, they are coming in package tours or groups, staying in second-rate hotels and watching their pennies.

"We used to go everywhere by cab and now we have to think twice," said Charlene Torla of Lowell, Mass. Mrs. Torla, her husband and daughters were in Rome for the first time since 1968 and found prices "way up" — to the point that families can only travel on all-expenses-paid package tours, "fully paid before you leave so you know what you are getting into."

Partly, it's the air fares — up 25% or more since 1973.

Partly, it's the fall in the dollar's value by 10% or more since early 1973. Many Americans are shunning Europe for places like Hawaii where the dollar still is, more or less, a dollar.

Finally, it's inflation — 15% of it or more per year in most European countries. The two countries where the dollar's value has not fallen — Britain and Italy — have had the worst inflation, so the American tourist, once the king of the continent, is stuck wherever he goes.

The hotels that once catered to yanks are out of reach of most Americans now. A double with bath costs $70 at Vienna's Sacher, $58 at Brussels' Hilton, $97 at Paris' Crillon. Breakfast is not included — that's $3 to $4 more for rolls and coffee.

Those atmospheric European restaurants survive on expense account diners. Dinner for two with wine in non-luxury restaurants runs to $35 in Helsinki, $25 and up in London, $40 in Copenhagen. The continent's best food, in restaurants boasting stars from Michelin, can cost $80 to $100 for two.

But it's the little extras that really add up.

"A tourist who has to pay $12 from the airport, then is charged $2.50 to cash his traveler's checks, is going to be really steaming by the time he reaches his $70 hotel room," a Belgian tour official said.

Penny-pinchers in Paris who do their own laundry must pay $4 to $5 for two machineloads of clothes washed and dried — but not ironed — in left bank self-service laundromats.

A hair cut and shampoo cost $7 at the barber shop in the Vienna Intercontinental. The barber expects a 60-cent tip, but complains he's not seeing many American heads this year.

"I think they get their hair cut before they leave home," he said.

A hot dog from the vendor outside the tower of London costs 95 cents. A pot of coffee in a Danish cafe costs $2. Guests in first-class hotels in Helsinki pay $8 to get a man's suit dry-cleaned.

And it costs 60 cents or more to read the baseball scores in the International Herald Tribune.

What can the poor tourist do?

In Paris, one of 11 European cities now considered more expensive than New York, it's hard to go cheap. Even the Europe-on-$5-a-day crowd will find that a student-type hotel in Paris, without bath or showers, costs $7 a night.

But tourists in London can buy ice cream at 15 cents in stores, instead of paying 35 cents from street vendors.

Students under 21 can still travel all over Europe for a month on special $80 train tickets.

Two American girls in Stockholm said they are living on $5 a day by staying at youth hostels and eating only fruit and cheese and drinking tea or milk. Finnish universities rent dormitory rooms to tourists during the summer, at $25 for a double.

More pertinently, you can save money by coming in package tours, which are increasingly becoming the meal ticket for even top-category hotels.

"We're taking a lot of tours this year," an official at the Brussels Hilton said. "Without them, we wouldn't have so many Americans."

Or you can go to Spain, where a double room and three meals a day in a modest and decent seaside hotel can cost as little as $10 a day per person, a glass of wine still cost 25 cents and pack of cigarettes (local brand) 18 cents. Nothing elegant, and you have to know where to go — but it's possible.

Rome is sky-high but an excellent second category hotel near the scenic ruins of Paestum near Naples is only $17.45 a day for room and full board. You can pay top-dollar in a famous Roman restaurant, or get a reasonable meal in a clean and friendly Trattoria for $4 to $5.

Or you can do like Marie Denton of Alberta, Canada, who paid $12 dollars for a double room with bath, including breakfast, at a small Athens hotel.

"Eating at the small tavernas of the plaka (Athens' night-life district) costs us about $4 per person, including local wine, and the food is excellent," she said. "A friend we met stays at a youth hostel for $1.50 a day and eats a lunch of souvlaki (grilled meat in bread) and tomato salad for $1."

Woman's Touch Enlivens Ford's

Washington (UPI) — "Everyone who ever wrote a play about a president sends it to me," Frankie Hewitt mused. "Most of them are horrible."

Mrs. Hewitt gets a lot of unsolicited plays about presidents because she is executive producer of historic Ford's Theater, where Abraham Lincoln was assassinated the night of April 14, 1865.

About 10 years ago, she was in New York to see a play and ran into then Interior Secretary Stewart Udall.

"He mentioned that Ford's Theater was being restored. I asked if it was going to be used for plays and when he said 'No,' I expressed an outraged opinion about restoring the site of an assassination as a museum," she recalled.

"At that time, my only experience with the theater was buying a ticket and going in."

Ford's was closed after Lincoln's death until the 1930s, when the ground floor was turned into a Lincoln museum. In the 1950s, Congress voted money for an historically authentic restoration of the building, but work did not begin in earnest until the mid-1960s.

Under Mrs. Hewitt, who started as a fund raiser for the nonprofit Ford's Theater Society before she became executive producer, Ford's has sought to become a national theater showcase and a living, lively monument.

But because of its unusual character — a private theater organization operating in a public building controlled by the Interior Dept.'s National Park Service — the new Ford's has felt its share of tension.

From the start, Park Service officials made it clear they would have preferred a quiet, somnolent museum instead of a memorial theater tenanted by unpredictable show people.

The hostility reached a climax when government bureaucrats tried to censor Ford's production of An Unpleasant Evening With H. J. Mencken, she said.

Censorship, she said, "is not a little thing. The time to say 'No' to them is the first time."

Mrs. Hewitt not only won the battle but the war. She was given complete autonomy in Ford's Theater productions, "and now even the bureaucrats love us," she said.

At Ford's, she aims for a diversity of theater that embraces the classics and spotlights good new talent.

"One of the things I feel strongly about is having a broad audience," she said. "We try to create an atmosphere that allows people to drop in, like going to the movies."

A recent outstanding hit was James Whitmore's portrayal of Harry Truman in the one-man show, Give 'em Hell, Harry! which played to capacity audiences throughout its three-week run and was featured on CBS television's 60 Minutes.

President Ford saw the Truman show, the first chief executive to attend a performance at Ford's since Lincoln was shot.

Mrs. Hewitt recalled: "As we were working out details of the visit with the Secret Service, one of the agents asked, 'How do you usually do this?'"

"We just laughed and said, 'We don't usually have a President dropping in every day.'"

"Who was the last President here?" he asked. And then it began to dawn on him.

Lincoln, of course, haunts Ford's.

"We've never done a Lincoln play," she said. "Someday I want to do one."

Agreed: Burns Is a Jerk

Hollywood (UPI) — Larry Linville is every bit as square as Maj. Frank Burns, the humorless fathead he portrays in the M-A-S-H television series, but that is the only common characteristic the two share.

Major Burns, although married to a girl back in the states, has a passionate crush in Hotlips Hoolihan in the series.

Linville, on the other hand, is a devoted husband to his wife of 12 years, actress Kate Geer. She is the daughter of actor Will Geer, the garrulous grandfather in The Waltons series.

Until M-A-S-H came along Linville's prospects weren't too bright. Their house was one of many in a middle class development in the San Fernando Valley. There are no real luxuries nor could he afford servants.

Larry has converted one of the three bedrooms of his home to an office-workshop. Principal reason for the office is a typewriter where Larry spends a good deal of time writing scripts.

He has sold a movie screenplay to Disney titled Grandpa's Fantastic Flying Ragging Machine. It's about an antique airplane and an old man who keeps it in his barn.

From time to time Larry, Kate and daughter Kelly troop over to Will Geer's house for family dinners — usually attended by 20 or more relatives, in-laws and old friends. Often that is the extent of the Linvilles' social activities.

They have a small ritual on Saturdays. Kate parks Kelly at the home of a neighbor — who has a houseful of children — and the Linvilles go to an afternoon movie. Thereafter they have a candlelight dinner at a good restaurant. Then they go home to watch M-A-S-H.

Both are fascinated by the CBS series and delighted with its popularity.

But Larry does have reservations about the character he plays: "Frank Burns is a jerk. I couldn't stand being in the same room with him. He's pathetic because he can't relate to people."

Larry Linville as humorless Maj. Burns in M-A-S-H.

Live 'Saturday Night' Gives Producer Nightmares Already

New York (AP) — Lorne Michaels was just 5 years old when Broadway Open House, NBC-TV's first late-night entertainment show, premiered in 1950. Now he's going to produce NBC's latest venture in that arena.

He'll run Saturday Night, a 90-minute comedy-variety effort set to start Oct. 11 at 10:30 p.m. It'll appear three Saturday nights each month, broadcast live from an obscure hamlet called New York.

For Michaels, who says he was weaned on the live TV shows of Sid Caesar and Milton Berle in the early 1950s, the new show may be just as nerve-wracking as it was for producers in the live old days of TV.

"I'm already starting to have these recurring nightmares where the set falls over the first night, hundreds of people are killed live on the air and people are chasing me," he said, only partly in jest.

He said his previous network efforts always were on film or tape and admitted that "I'm the type of producer who was always running out and saying, 'Let's do it again.' You get used to that."

"But I like the idea of a live, show. Performers get a certain 'edge' when they know 'this is it.' People have told me that the audience at home can't tell the difference between a live and taped show.

"I believe they will, if only because of the embarrassment that'll happen when things don't go right."

Michaels, a Toronto native, says he started in TV as a comedy writer for Canadian shows after graduating from the University of Toronto in 1966.

After a brief fling as gagwriter for some comedians in New York, he went to Los Angeles and stayed there until late 1969, writing for various shows, including NBC's "Laugh-In."

He said he then went back to Canada with a colleague, Hart Pomerantz, and for almost four years they wrote, produced and appeared in several comedy specials for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Then he returned to Los Angeles in 1973 to write for an ABC summer comedy series and while doing that met comedienne Lily Tomlin, whom he calls "the best of all the people I've ever worked with or for."

His writing for one Tomlin special on CBS last year earned him an Emmy award. He may earn another one this year as co-producer — with Jane Wagner — of Miss Tomlin's first comedy special for ABC.

Although Michaels' reputation largely was made in Los Angeles, NBC has been loudly crowing about the fact his Saturday Night series will come from New York, home of NBC's Tonight show until 1972.

But Michaels says he was among those advocating Saturday Night for Fun City, rather than what he calls "the Coast," because Los Angeles lacks Manhattan's particular kind of "rubbing together and friction from which comedy generally comes."

He also said New York's pool of young comics — from which the new show will draw — has greatly increased compared to five years ago, when it seemed most young performers here toiled in music, not laughter.

"Maybe the film Lennie helped a little bit," he said of the movie about the late comedian, Lennie Bruce. "But I think mostly the times did it. People are just more willing to laugh now."

PROGRAM GUIDE COMMENTARY

New Show for Arness

United Press International

James Arness, star of the cancelled Gunsmoke, has a new western in the works called The MacAheens. Eva Marie Saint stars with Jim in the TV movie, which could turn into another hit series for the actor who played Matt Dillon for 20 years.

McLean Stevenson, Col. Blake in M-A-S-H, wanted out of that popular series so he could host a TV variety series. After the producers obliged Stevenson by "killing" him off in a teary episode of M-A-S-H, the actor found the variety show plans scrapped. But he will get his chance to sing and dance in an autumn special, and if fans approve he'll have that variety series after all.

Valerie Harper settled her Rhoda series salary dispute with Mary Tyler Moore's production company. Mary will pay her former costar a reported $17,500 per episode.

The Tom and Jerry cartoons, which won seven Academy Awards, will become a television series next fall. They are produced by Hanna-Barbera.

Former NFL star Tony King (Buffalo Bills) will costar in Jack Palance's new series, Bronk, starting next season.

William Phipps plays Theodore Roosevelt in the four-hour ABC-TV production of Eleanor and Franklin.

Rob Reiner, the son-in-law in All in the Family, turns to dramatic acting in a guest role on The Rockford Files.

ABC-TV announces that next year's Bing Crosby national pro-amateur golf tournament will be telecast Jan. 24-25.

Long-time classical actor Maurice Evans will play a guest role next fall in an episode of The Streets of San Francisco.

Victory Has High Price For Melissa

(c) 1975 Chicago Daily News
Los Angeles — Melissa Gilbert, one of the tiny stars of Little House on the Prairie, is a real competitor. Take her bike race with the boy next door. "I saw he was going to beat me if I didn't get a move on," reports Melissa, 11. "So I really pumped like crazy. I beat him. But I was going so fast I couldn't stop and slammed right into a big old parked car." She suffered a dislocated kneecap and had to be carried on and off the set for a week. Her advice from series star Michael Landon: "The next time you race that guy, let him win."

Troubled by Smarts

Roberta Flack, beautiful, black and brainy, has a master's degree in music and is working on a doctorate in language logistics. But her smarts sometimes give her trouble. "If I flex a little mental muscle, a lot of people put their defenses up," Miss Flack told an interviewer. "Some people think that if you're a performer you're dumb, or if you're a woman you're dumb, or particularly if you're a black woman you're dumb. I have to deal with these reactions a lot and I'm really fed up with it."

Cloris Mother of 5

Triple Emmy and Oscar winner Cloris Leachman, moving from the Mary Tyler Moore show to her own series, Phyllis, in the fall, is the mother of five, from 9 to 24, and has some mixed reactions about it. "I wasn't aware enough to question whether to have children or not," she says, but adds, "I've been deeply satisfied with the experience of having children." But again: "Women's lib is right about how this feeling that they must have children can stunt the lives of women."

He Likes Truckers

Claude Akins, star of NBC's Movin' On series, renewed for fall, meets truckers all across the country as the show moves from town to town, filming on the spot. "I haven't met a trucker yet I didn't like," grins the rugged, 6 foot 2 actor. "One guy at the Jubitz Truck Stop in Portland even offered me a job as a swamper (helper). I had to decline. Even though Frank Converse (his co-star) and I do almost all the driving in the show, I still have problems backing up."

An Osmond Debut

Marie Osmond, 15, made her singing debut with her singing brothers just two years ago in Caesar's Palace. Now she admits: "It was a terrifying experience. All I kept thinking was what if I goof or do something to embarrass them. I'd never been so scared in my life." Comments oldest brother Alan: "She was a real trouper. When we began if we made a mistake there were few people around to see it. Marie had to break in before huge audiences. And she was fantastic."

Sedaka Confident

Neil Sedaka, making a U.S. comeback after eight years, is full of confidence. "I have never had my hand off the musical pulse. I have written all the way through and I've been aware of what people are buying. My lyrics are long and go into more depth, but generally my songs have developed and grown." He adds: "One thing I refuse to do are those rock and roll shows. I want to be seen as a contemporary artist, not some ghost from the past."

'Any Fat Actor'

Somebody asked roly-poly James Coco if he'd ever been mistaken for Ernest Borgnine. "Oh yes," said Jimmy. "I used to be asked for his autograph. But I could never spell his name. Borgnine, Zero Mostel, Lou Costello. They'd mistake me for any fat actor and I used to say 'yes' to anything they called me."

Evans Replaces Evans on Show

Los Angeles (AP) — There will be a new Evans in The Jeffersons' household this fall.

Damon Evans, a 23-year-old actor and singer, has been selected to take over Michael Evans' role as Lionel Jefferson. They are not related.

Damon is a Baltimore native who has studied singing at the Boston Conservatory of Music and the Manhattan School of Music. He has appeared in such New York musicals as Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope and The Me Nobody Knows. He also did a 20-week stint on the CBS soap opera Love of Live as Lamar Chisolm. Michael Evans, who helped create the TV series Good Times, is leaving The Jeffersons' for personal reasons.

Some Prize Winning Color Snaps

Color pictures are gaining popularity. In the past, color film usually was saved for that extra special occasion. Now color photos are almost the norm. That popularity is seen in this year's Sunday Journal and Star/Kodak International Snapshot Awards contest where about three-fourths of all entries for the first three weeks were color prints or transparencies.

Six color winners were chosen during the first three weeks of the contest. They were Ms. Mike Holmes, Bruce Peterson, Carl Wolfe, Ralf Holmes and Sara Stevenson, all of Lincoln, and Martin N. Maca of Pleasant Dale.

Not all the color winners are printed in color, however. Some pictures are harder to reproduce with the color process newspapers use. Therefore, two of the photos editors and judges felt would reproduce best have been published in color.

Publication today does not signify that these pictures have been accorded any advantage over other weekly winners in the color division of the Sunday Journal and Star-KINSA final standings.

All of these weekly winners have been awarded $5 prizes in The Sunday Journal and Star's local contest and all of them have equal status in competition for the newspaper's local grand prize and for selection to be among the four color pictures eligible for KINSA competition and prizes.

Color winners from the last three weeks of the contest will be published similarly in a future issue.

Contest's Final Deadline Is Tuesday

It's your last chance.

Tuesday is the last deadline for The Sunday Journal and Star/Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards contest of 1975.

Snapshots taken since July 1, 1974, by amateur photographers are eligible. All subjects from family snapshots to still lifes qualify.

So far, pets and children top the list of subjects in contest entries.

Fourth week black and white winners are Judy Ahrens and Florence Madsen, both of Lincoln.

Mrs. Lightle's winning photo is of a sailboat in the Sea of Galilee. A brown striped cat basking in sunlight is the subject of Ms. Rueb's pleasant prize-winning color photo.

Hinshaw's Ives Program on PBS and ETV Net 7TV

Most of the programs on KUON and the Nebraska Educational Television Network that feature Nebraskans are produced by Nebraska ETV.

An exception is the hour-long special to be aired at 7 p.m. Monday. It's Charles Ives — an American Original, featuring pianist Prof. Harvey Hinshaw of the University of Nebraska School of Music faculty. It was taped for national release by the Public Broadcasting Service by WPBT in Miami, Fla. Last October Hinshaw performed in two Ives centennial festivals — one in New York City's Alice Tully Hall and the other in Miami. It is the latter program that will be televised on PBS across the country Monday night.

During the program William Hindman reads from Ives' revealing notes about his sonatas and their portrayal of the Concord Transcendentalists (Emerson, Alcott, Thoreau and Hawthorne) as Hinshaw plays Ives' Sonata No. 2, known as the Concord Sonata.

A preview of the program brings out several things to watch and listen for. The cinematography is excellent — particularly parts showing Hinshaw's deft hands on the keyboard. Some beautiful Concord area scenes are pictured

At present the Monday airing is the only one scheduled on KUON and the Nebraska ETV stations.

Those who have heard Hinshaw play in recitals at Kimball Hall or in other places will be interested in the difference of the sound heard from the television set and that heard within a recital hall. Even though music on television is less than perfect, the program is a fine one.

The narration helps those who find Ives' music difficult to listen to, and the excellent performance by Hinshaw is faithfully recorded. — HJH

Carpets Need Cleaning?

Then
Let's Get Acquainted!

And to get acquainted with you, Alpine will give you 20% off the regular price of cleaning your living room carpet, or 20% off the regular price of cleaning your sofa, with either of their fine cleaning methods

If your carpets or furniture need cleaning, we would just love to get acquainted with you. We have over 15 years experience in the cleaning business, guarantee our work, and have delighted tens-of-thousands of customers. I'm sure you'll be pleased with the quality of the work we perform, the low prices we charge and the conscientious efforts of the professionals we employ.

At Alpine we have two great cleaning methods — MAGIK-FOAM Shampoo, or JET STREAM Extraction cleaning. Our FOAM Shampoo is a specially developed, residue-free cleaning method that leaves your carpets looking feeling and smelling fresh and clean. Our Jet Stream process, although slightly more costly, is suggested when your carpets have been cleaned several times with the do-it-yourself products, which leave an oily residue on carpet fibers. This will rinse off the residue to prevent further rapid re-soiling.

We are volume carpet cleaning specialists so we can offer "down-to-earth" prices. We believe in satisfying each and every customer. So be assured we will do everything possible to gain and maintain your confidence. Just call us for the friendliest estimate in town. We'll help you economize with our expert service and advice.

And if you call us this week, we'll help you get acquainted with 20% off the regular price of cleaning your living room carpet, with either of our cleaning methods, or 20% off the regular price of cleaning your sofa. So let's get acquainted!

Sincerely,
Ken Grossman

HEARING HELP, HELP!

Soon, a neighbor, collection can in hand, will knock at your door for a donation to help conquer some dread disease, just as another did last month and still another the month before.

Yet, did you know that they estimate 20,000,000 hearing impairment cases, one of the largest groups of all the various types of physical and mental impairment disabilities. Yet, did you know that the government and all the other various voluntary collection agencies spend far less and collect far less than any of the other disability groups.

Write or phone me for a booklet showing all the various types of hearing aids that are on the market today. 415 Sharp Bldg., Lincoln. Phone 432-8597.

No. 446 in a Series In NEBRASKA Who? Where? What? When?

Improvement of portions of this road has been a recent issue.

Last Week's Picture

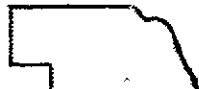

In 1912 the Woodruff Press issued a booklet, Beautiful Lincoln, that included these pictures of Capitol Beach, an amusement park west of the city. The park attracted as many as 150,000 visitors in its best season. Recreational facilities at one time included not only the salt water lake and big beach, but also picnic areas, carnival-like booths and rides (including an elevated roller coaster).

Development had begun in 1895 when a dike was built to make the lake, a 50-passenger steamboat operated on it for a while. The place was known as Burlington Beach in its first few seasons.

By about 1930 many of the facilities had worn out and were being removed; the lakefront beach was replaced by a large swimming pool (still featuring the tingling salt water as supplied by wells). A new King's Ballroom helped keep the area popular, but following World War II decline set in and by 1963 the entire recreational park had been replaced by a residential development that featured a refurbished lake.

Old NEBRASKA

1867: Several hundred Mormons were in Omaha en route to the Latter Day Saints' settlements in and near Salt Lake City, Utah.

100 1875: The salt basin near Lincoln was under six feet of water and, therefore, the processing of salt for domestic and commercial purposes was discontinued.

Work was begun extending the Union Block at the northeast corner of 10th and O east to the alley.

90 1885: Directors of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) bought two lots at the northeast corner of K and 14th from George P. Tucker for $4,500. The Christian Church later undertook construction of a house of worship at the site, but sold the incomplete structure to the Roman Catholics. The building was finished as St. Mary of the Immaculate Conception Cathedral.

80 1895: Secretary of War Lamont assured Omaha representatives that the Army headquarters there would not be moved away for the present.

70 1905: The Farmers Association of Nebraska appropriated $10,000 to assist in the fight against what was then called the grain trust.

Lancaster County protested against assessment of merchandise made in other counties of the state.

60 1915: About 100 sections of land near North Platte were to be opened for homesteading under the Kinkaid Homestead Act.

To relieve the water shortage and provide the best possible fire fighting, some Lincolniters advocated that an entirely new system of mains be constructed to be fed by salt water and used only for fire protection. This proposal never was adopted.

50 1925: William Jennings Bryan, three times presidential nominee of the Democratic party and known the world over for his eloquence, died at Dayton, Tenn., where he had helped the prosecution in trying a landmark case against a teacher who was alleged to have endorsed the theory that man evolved from a lower form of life.

40 1935: "Lost, strayed, or stolen" $100,000 check to the State of Nebraska for a road work fund was to be replaced with a duplicate check after two years.

A municipal windmill, Old Dutch in architecture, was being constructed at Antelope Park to supply park maintenance water.

30 1945: An ordinance prohibiting theaters from operating between the hours of 11:55 p.m. and 7 a.m. was proposed to the City Council. The theory was that late hours contributed to juvenile delinquency and also created a police problem.

Removal of the Army's ordinance service command shops at Omaha and return of the grounds and buildings to Ak-Sar-Ben was approved by the War Dept.

20 1955: Consumers Public Power District received unofficial approval of its application for a 75,000 kw atomic power plant to be built south of Lincoln, pending final action on the budget request. The plant was to be a joint effort of consumers and the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

The Gavins Point Dam, stretching 8,700 feet across the Missouri River, was formally closed, stopping the flow of water below Fort Randall Dam.

10 1965: Nebraska's 200 miles of Interstate-80 along the Platte River was held out by Federal Highway Administrator Rex M. Whitton as "an outstanding example" of highway planning.

The public power consolidation bill, LB764, calling for consolidation of Consumers, Loup and Platte Valley Public Power Districts by July 1, 1966, was passed by the Legislature, 38-7.

The City Council hiked the mayor's wage $1,500 for the next fiscal year, bringing the mayor's salary to $16,500.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Is there any chance that the Justice Department will prosecute Richard Helms and other CIA officials for the crimes that the Central Intelligence Agency committed or for the laws the agency violated like intercepting and opening the mail?—Ken Carver, Philadelphia

A. Practically no chance.

KATHLEEN AND DAVID TOWNSEND

Q. What's happened to Kathleen Kennedy, daughter of Ethel and Bob Kennedy—she married a guy named Townsend a year or so ago and seemed to have disappeared?—Maude Davis, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend lives in Sante Fe, N.M., where her husband teaches Greek at St. John's College. Mrs. Townsend has been accepted by the University of New Mexico law school in Albuquerque.

Q. Why is it that the Henry Kissingers always make it a point to invite the Robert McNamaras to their dinner parties?—Slim Myers, McLean, Va.

A. Kissinger feels strongly that the McNamaras have been treated like pariahs in Washington, D.C., ever since McNamara's involvement in the ill-fated Vietnamese war. The Secretary of State has a sympathetic nature and a sense of social justice.

Q. Rabbi Baruch Korff who helped raise thousands to pay Richard Nixon's legal fees—was he ever ordained a rabbi? If so, where and when? Also is he married and does he have any children?—G.F., Taunton, Mass

A. Baruch Korff, born in the Ukraine, claims to have been ordained in 1936 in Poland. He is the married father of three children, has resigned from the Nixon legal-funds-raising organization.

Q. I have been told many times that the richest men in the world are the Swiss, and that they hate publicity, which is why few Americans have ever heard of them. Can you reveal their identities or tell me where one can find out about them?—Max Eigel, Santa Monica, Cal.

A. Among the wealthiest families in Switzerland are the Schmidheyns (cement), the Ballys (shoes), the Nestles (food), the Geigys (chemicals), the Abeggs (banks). The most authoritative book on the Swiss millionaires was written recently by a 30-year-old Swiss economist, Carl Holliger. It's been published in Germany under the title, "Die Reichen und die Superreichen in der Schweiz" (The Rich and the Super-Rich in Switzerland). You are right about the wealthy Swiss detesting publicity. They want no one to know the extent of their fortunes or how well they live. Not one is a member of the international jet set.

Q. Ryan O'Neal, the great Hollywood lover—has he conquered the heart of Anouk Aimee, married to actor Albert Finney?—L. F., Malibu, Cal.

A. Let us say they have become close friends.

ANOUK AIMEE, RYAN O'NEAL AND HIS SON GRIFFIN

Q. Has Mao Tse-tung's health deteriorated to the point where he is on his deathbed?—Ron Lee, Oakland, Cal.

A. Chairman Mao is extremely deaf, suffers from poor eyesight, tends to dribble from the mouth, suffered a stroke last year, and a series of smaller ones this year. At 81 he is fading rapidly.

Q. I understand that Jackie Kennedy has accepted $1 million to play herself in a film based on the life of her late husband Aristotle Onassis. Is this so?—Nick Janos, Los Angeles, Cal.

A. A Greek film producer, Nikos Mastorakis, claims he has offered Jacqueline Onassis $1 million to play herself in a production he is planning on her late shipping magnate husband. Mastorakis claims that he has asked one of the scriptwriters on the film, Clem Wood, to explain to Mrs. Onassis that if she accepts the role, she will star opposite Anthony Quinn who is scheduled to play Onassis. Chances of the script going into production are slim. Jacqueline, unlike her sister Lee, has no acting ambitions.

Q. There have been at least 11 men who were the Librarians of the Library of Congress. Why has a woman never been nominated for that position?—B.L.S., Washington, D.C.

A. One lady, Page Ackerman, head librarian of UCLA (University of California at Los Angeles) was recently nominated for the Congressional Library job. She turned it down.

Q. The most brilliant intelligence coup of World War II was engineered by the British who intercepted and deciphered top secret German orders. The cryptographers were based in Bletchley Park, Buckinghamshire, and they have been written about in "The Ultra Secret" by F. W. Winterbotham. My questions concern the Americans in that ace intelligence outfit who were not mentioned in the book. How many and who were they?—Albert Kahn, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. There were about 100 Americans in the "Ultra" intelligence group, among them Al Friendly of The Washington Post, Telford Taylor of Columbia University, Frederick Hilles of Yale, Samuel McKee, William Bundy, Landis Gores, Curt Zimansky, Adolph Rosengarten, David Blair, many others who were divided between the intelligence and technical fields. The Americans played a significant role and made a significant contribution in the "Ultra" operation, and why Englishman Winterbotham excluded them from his book is a puzzling question.

B Great Britain will do a gross gambling business this year of approximately $7 billion, adding bets on everything from horses to bingo. A large share has already been wagered by the rich sheiks from the Middle East. In fact, London's gaming clubs have never seen anything like it. There is one croupier: "The Arabs are exhibitionists. They spend as if there were no tomorrows. I saw one the other evening who had bet half a million dollars in less than two hours. The girl he was betting on was going into a state of shock, but the Arab took it all in stride." The generations are rife, the employees at Crockers, the Clermont Club, the Playboy Club, the Curzon and other London gaming centers gossip for about the Arabs and astronomical sums. "One night," one man told Intelligence, "most of the people gambling at our tables were no English. They came from Saudi Arabia or Libya or Iran, and they seem almost compulsive in their style. The bet of petrodollars and a wager simply staggers my imagination. I am told one Arab minister bet half his nation's treasury in two weeks. True, I'm sure. These Arabs," he concluded, "don't use $100,000, either. When they bet a roulette table with $1000 oblongs, they've been around a long time. Jaded you might say. But this high-stakes gambling takes a toll of breath away." Gambling Arabs not like London where they own property but in Carlo where they've lived for years and usually to have a lot of blondes in tow.

IS BLACK SEXY? According to market analyst Louis Cheskin, a woman's underwear is a good indicator of her character.

Women who favor pastel-colored lingerie, Cheskin asserts, want to attract masculine attention. Emancipated women on the other hand, wear beige or white.

Cheskin claims also to have corroborated the old story that black undergarments make a woman more sexy or at least make her think so. He says 90% of the women he polled are firmly convinced of that.

Cheskin also maintains that older women prefer white because it is the traditional color of innocence, a stage to which they return in old age.

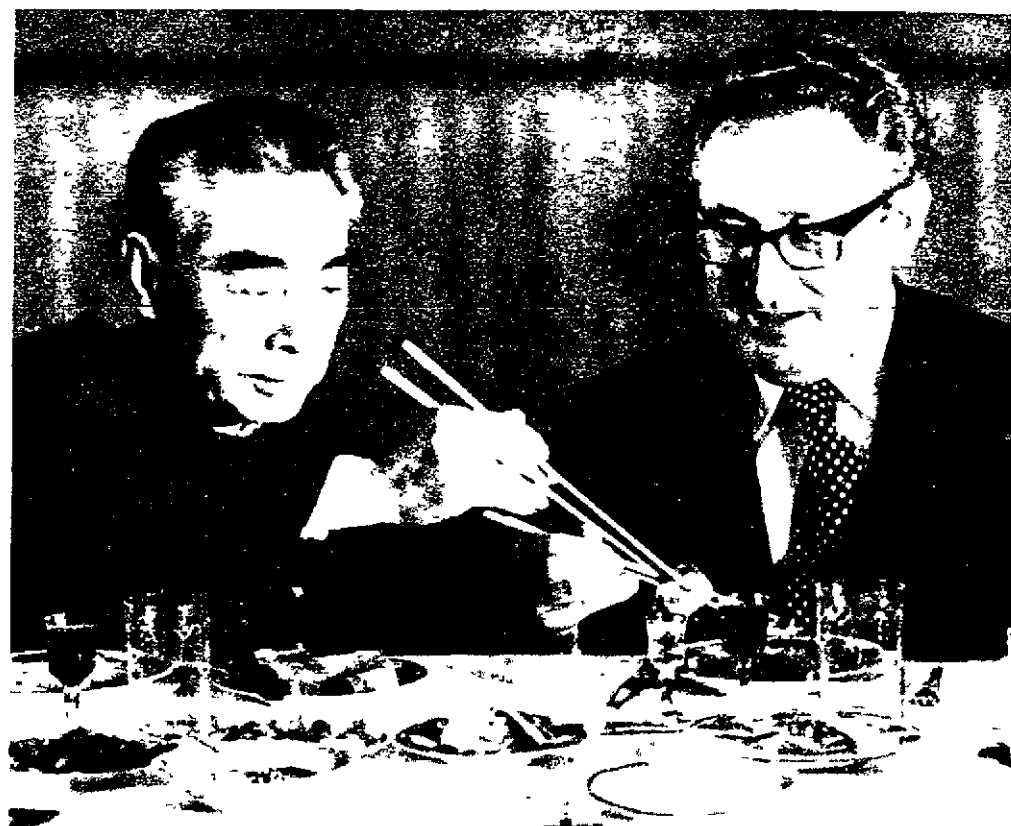

WORKING WOMEN About 94 million women live in the nine nations which make up the European Economic Community. Of this total, more than one-third are employed.

Denmark has the largest number of employed women, 41.2%, because it has the greatest number of all-day schools, kindergartens and mothers who care for working mothers' children.

The Netherlands has the lowest percentage, 25.9% of working women, because Dutch women prefer to devote themselves to family and children.

Denmark	41.2%
Great Britain	37.2
France	36.9
West Germany	36.9
Belgium	34.5
Italy	27.8
Luxembourg	26.9
Ireland	26.0

CHOU EN-LAI HOSTS HENRY KISSINGER AT PEKING BANQUET.

CHINESE BANQUET The People's Republic of China is the world's largest Communist country, but banquet nights in Peking are conducted on a level that not even absolute monarchy can touch.

For state banquets, the Chinese employ a cast of thousands who work ceaselessly for two-and-a-half hours during which they serve a nine-course meal punctuated by dozens of toasts and speeches.

They also employ a hundred or so technicians whose job it is to control the lighting and spots on the various speakers and interpreters. While the hundreds of waiters thread their way between the circular tables, the People's Liberation Army band, dressed in khaki, gives out with music.

Banquets in Peking start early, always at 7 p.m. Dress is informal--no gowns or dinner jackets--and the hosts always wear Mao suits. The guest list runs into four figures, and a large Chinese flag hangs next to the national flag of the guest-of-honor.

Until his recent illness, Premier Chou En-lai was host at all state banquets. That job has now been taken over by Teng Hsiao-ping, the senior vice premier and China's No. 3 man.

Each table seats 10; there are three basic menus at state banquets; and unless you know how to use chopsticks deftly, you'll find that you miss several courses since the plates are put down and whisked away faster than most Americans are accustomed to eat.

The food, of course, is exotic, beginning with long pan, a series of cold hors d'oeuvres containing green bean noodles, then 50-year-old eggs followed by a succession of hot courses and a Chinese white wine potent enough for "passing out" purposes.

A state banquet represents the pinnacle in Chinese gastronomy.

POINT OF RECORD Some weeks ago the Internal Revenue Service released its Statistics of Income Report on Estate Tax Returns for 1972, the latest year for which data is available.

According to the 1972 figures, 93 individuals with gross estates of $1 million or more, died and paid no federal estate tax. Two hundred and three individuals with gross estates between $500,000 and $1 million also died, and paid no federal estate tax.

"It appears that these millionaires and near millionaires were able to avoid federal estate taxes through a careful planning of marital deductions, charitable bequests, and the paying off of debts and mortgages," according to Rep. Charles Vanik (D., Ohio).

GREEK EXILES The evacuation earlier this year of 30,000 Vietnamese children and adults to the United States has a precedent few Americans know anything about.

In 1949 when the Greek Communist partisans lost the Civil War in their own country, 65,000 of them fled into Bulgaria and Albania, both Communist countries. Among them were 8,000 children who were supposed to be trained into rabid Communist cadres for future struggles.

For years these Greek children were moved from one Balkan country to another where they were either reunited with exiled relatives or assigned to various exile communities.

Since 1949 every Greek government has refused to repatriate these exiled Greeks, fearing contamination from the Communist virus.

Premier Caramanlis, however, has now legalized the Greek Communist party and restored citizenship to 2230 emigrants of the 4,000 Greeks living abroad who were deprived of it by the military junta from 1968 to 1974.

This has raised hopes among the Greek exiles of 1949 now scattered throughout Eastern European countries. But Caramanlis wants carefully to control the influx of these exiled Greeks. He's afraid of a strong Communist party in his own country spurred on by a group of well-trained fanatics. Besides, Greek workers are returning from Western Europe who need jobs and housing. As for the Greeks of 1949, they may well end up as men without a country.

DOLLAR VS. RUBLE Not that there's very much in the way of souvenirs for the American tourist to buy in the Soviet Union--onyx jewelry, watches, cameras, winter hats--but just for the record, the Soviets are now charging $1.45 American for one Russian ruble.

The rate, artificially set by the Soviets, has not been so unfavorable to the dollar since August, 1973, when it was pegged at an all-time low of $1.46 for one ruble.

In Switzerland, on the free market, the true rate of the ruble is about four or five to the dollar. The Soviets, of course, won't let you bring any of those rubles in, and you'd better not try. Currency violations are punished by stiff jail sentences.

GO EASY ON MARRIAGES Bangladesh with 75 million people is the most densely populated country in the world. To avoid the inevitable starvation of millions, Bangladesh's health officials in Dacca have proposed that marriages in their country be allowed only every two years, a measure they hope will stop the population explosion.

NEW SPY PLANE Some time this year the U.S. Air Force is going to decide whether or not to develop an unmanned high-flying spy plane, currently code-named "Compass Cope."

"Compass Cope," if it comes into being, will be a remotely piloted, high-altitude, long-enduring drone, designed to gather intelligence.

A few weeks ago one of LONG HAIR -5% LESS Yugoslavia, most liberal of Communist countries, offers socialism without Moscow's iron hand and Mao's tight restrictions. A recent report from Serbia, one of Yugoslavia's principal states, reveals that Titoland is not the liberal paradise many socialists imagined. In Serbia, long-haired workers are paid 5% lower wages for the same job. Individualism has its price.

A WALL STREET BUST ATTRACTS A LUNCHTIME CROWD.

BREAST SIZE American men and women have long been obsessed with the size of female breasts, frequently equating size with sex appeal. As a result more and more women are having their breasts increased or decreased through plastic surgery.

According to the California Medical Association, the best candidates for breast augmentation surgery are "young women whose development during adolescence stopped short of breast enlargement."

The surgical procedure involves either the use of a bag containing silicone gel or inflatable silicone bags, which are implanted under the breasts.

Women who submit to this surgery and later become pregnant may be able to

Silicone injections into the breasts in order to enlarge them are unsafe and are prohibited. Women who have gone to Mexico, Paris, and Tokyo for a series of such injections, later live to regret them as the silicone is sometimes impure, causing lesions, infections, and on occasion, cancer.

Women with oversized breasts should consider breast reduction as a viable surgical procedure. Such women frequently suffer from backaches, headaches, shoulder and neck pains, which disappear after surgery. Breast reduction calls for reconstruction and reshaping of the breasts after the elimination of excess fatty tissue.

Gerald Ford's son Steve, 19, learns to ride the range—something his father did as a teen-ager. Like all the President's children, Steve doesn't hesitate to express his own opinions, even when they differ with Dad's.

The Ford Children: One Year in the Limelight

by Charles Peterson

RAMONA, CAL.

In 13 days the Ford children will mark their first anniversary as members of America's First Family. Under careful scrutiny by press and public for one year, the four Fords have remained remarkably unspoiled, informal, humorous, well-mannered, straightforward, in fact downright normal.

Mike, 25; Jack, 23; Steve, 19, and Susan, 18, present a sharp contrast to the two Nixon girls. With the possible exception of Susan Ford, who has understandably succumbed at times to Washington's social hurly-burly, the Ford kids eschew any role in the so-called "Imperial Presidency". They are as down-to-earth as their father, a man who has no airs except friendly ones.

Take Steve Ford, who is spending this summer riding the range in Montana and Utah, as his father once did in Wyoming when he was a teen-ager.

"I like to stay out of politics," explains Steve, who has yet to vote, but nevertheless keeps abreast of public issues.

"For example," he says, "I kind of differ with my dad about strip mining. The land's got to be returned to its natural state, which some of the mine owners are not doing. I'd like to see that wherever strip mining is done in this country the land is returned to its natural state. A lot of environmental regulations are being overlooked, and in 15 years people are going to regret it."

Following his graduation from T.C. Williams High School in Alexandria, Va., last year, Steve took a year off, a decision which did not meet with overwhelming parental approval. But this fall, Steve plans to attend Utah State University at Logan from where his brother Jack recently graduated.

Steve's girl friend

Steven has a 17-year-old girlfriend, Frances "Dee-Dee" Jarvis of Alexandria, Va., who describes him as "a natural, easygoing, nice-to-be-with young man." In the collegiate years to come Dee-Dee won't be too far away from Steve. She's enrolled as a freshman in the University of Northern Colorado.

Steve says he hopes to make wildlife science his occupation. "It's kind of like game management, wildlife management," he points out. "Politics is not for me. That's my old man's game. Right now I'm into being a cowboy, and it's been working out pretty well for me. A few weeks ago I spent a couple of days in Ramona under Casey Tibbs—he's a rodeo champion—learning how to ride a bronco, wrestle a steer, and rope a calf.

"And I must say," he adds, "that being a cowboy, working for somebody, on someone else's ranch—that sort of life appeals to me, because there's a lot of freedom, a lot of happiness in it. At this stage in my life, money doesn't mean very much to me. I figure that so long as you're doing what you want to do, money is not a concern. My mother has second thoughts about my cowboy-in', but that's the way all mothers are."

How does his father, the President, feel about his cowboy ambitions? "He lets me do what I want to," Steve confirms. "He's open-minded about it. So long as he figures I'm headed in the right direction, it's okay with him. He'll let me know if he thinks I'm going wrong, but he gives me the opportunity to get out on my own and do what I think is right."

Parents set curfew

Betty and Gerald Ford reared their children to learn by doing. Jack Ford, 23, who is spending the summer in Washington before hitting the campaign trail for his father this fall, has worked as a hotel bellhop, deckhand on a freighter, forest ranger, and U.S. Senate page.

He recalls that his parents, especially his mother, were never over-permissive and that when the children began dating, they had curfew hours to meet. If they broke them, they were punished.

Michael, 25, the eldest and the only married child, is completing his final year at the Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in South Hamilton, Mass.

Has their First Family status changed the Ford children very much?

According to friends, only Susan has been considerably affected by the White House environment.

Her ex-boyfriend, Gardner Britt, who is attending Virginia Polytechnic Institute this summer to improve his grades, says, "Susan bears the brunt of it because she's living at home. I think if she were a little older she wouldn't be so affected by all the Presidential trappings."

"We broke up, you know, because Susan said she wanted to be free in order to take advantage of being the President's daughter, meeting all those society people."

Britt, who was introduced to Susan on a blind date, says, "I understand it, and I still think she's a super girl."

'Really grooves'

As for the other young Fords, "Jack dabbles in Washington society as a lark," a friend explains. "He's not taken in by it. And Mike and Steven couldn't care less. But Susan is impressionable and she really grooves on it."

The Ford kids and their friends acknowledge that they've reaped some benefits from the Ford Presidency. Jack has brought Ravi Shankar, and rock stars George Harrison, and Billy Preston to the White House. He's been spotted in Manhattan with Bianca Jagger, wife of Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones. Friends of Susan and Jack have summer

How many times have you decided to give up smoking?

Nobody these days is telling you not to give up smoking.

But if you've given it up more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it too much to want to give it up at all.

If you're like a lot of smokers these days, it probably isn't smoking that you want to give up. It's some of that 'tar' and nicotine you've been hearing about.

So you tried cigarettes which were low in 'tar' and you found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which drove you right back to your regular brand.

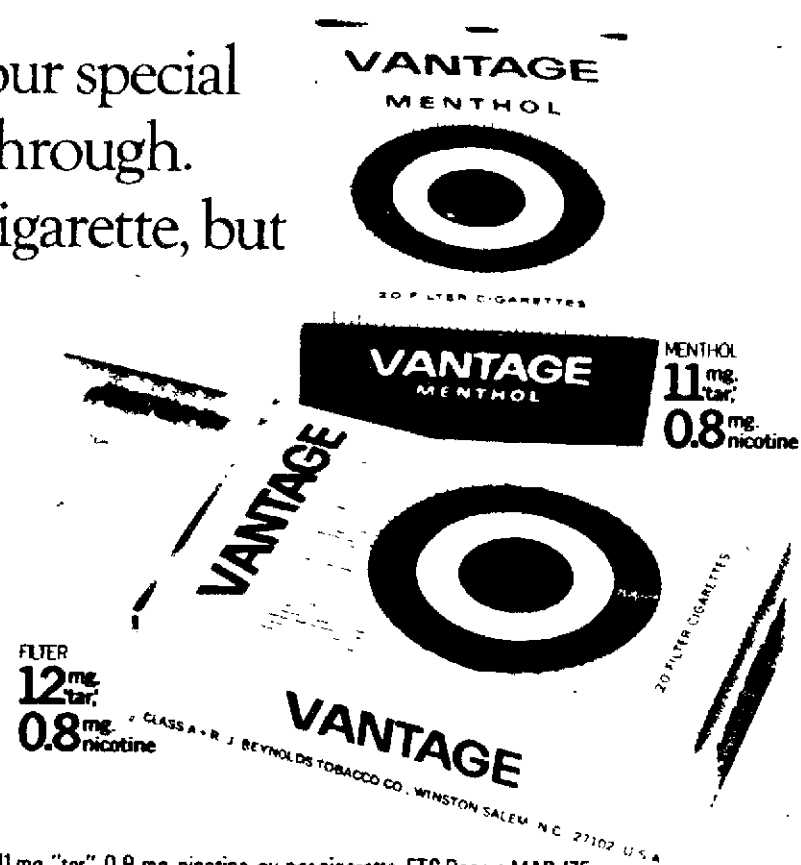

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage cigarettes, either filter or menthol, deliver considerably less 'tar' and less nicotine than most cigarettes.

But what really makes Vantage special is our special filter which allows the tobacco flavor to come through.

Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette, but it sure is the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

And that's what makes all the difference.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Filter: 12 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine, Menthol: 11 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, FTC Report MAR. '75.

Free-spirited Jack Ford, 23, is the most independent of the Ford children, also the most politically conscious and ecology-minded.

jobs at the White House, where the latest movies are available. The Presidential yacht Sequoia is also available for sailings down the Potomac.

The Ford children, however, have something substantial to contribute to their father, and that's the viewpoint of American youth.

"I honestly believe," says Kevin Kennedy, a friend of Steve Ford, "that the Ford kids keep Mr. Ford in accurate touch with the nation's youth. They experienced what most kids in this country did during the late 1960's and early 1970's, and they can express a point of view with an honesty and frankness that perhaps the President can't get elsewhere.

Time to speak out

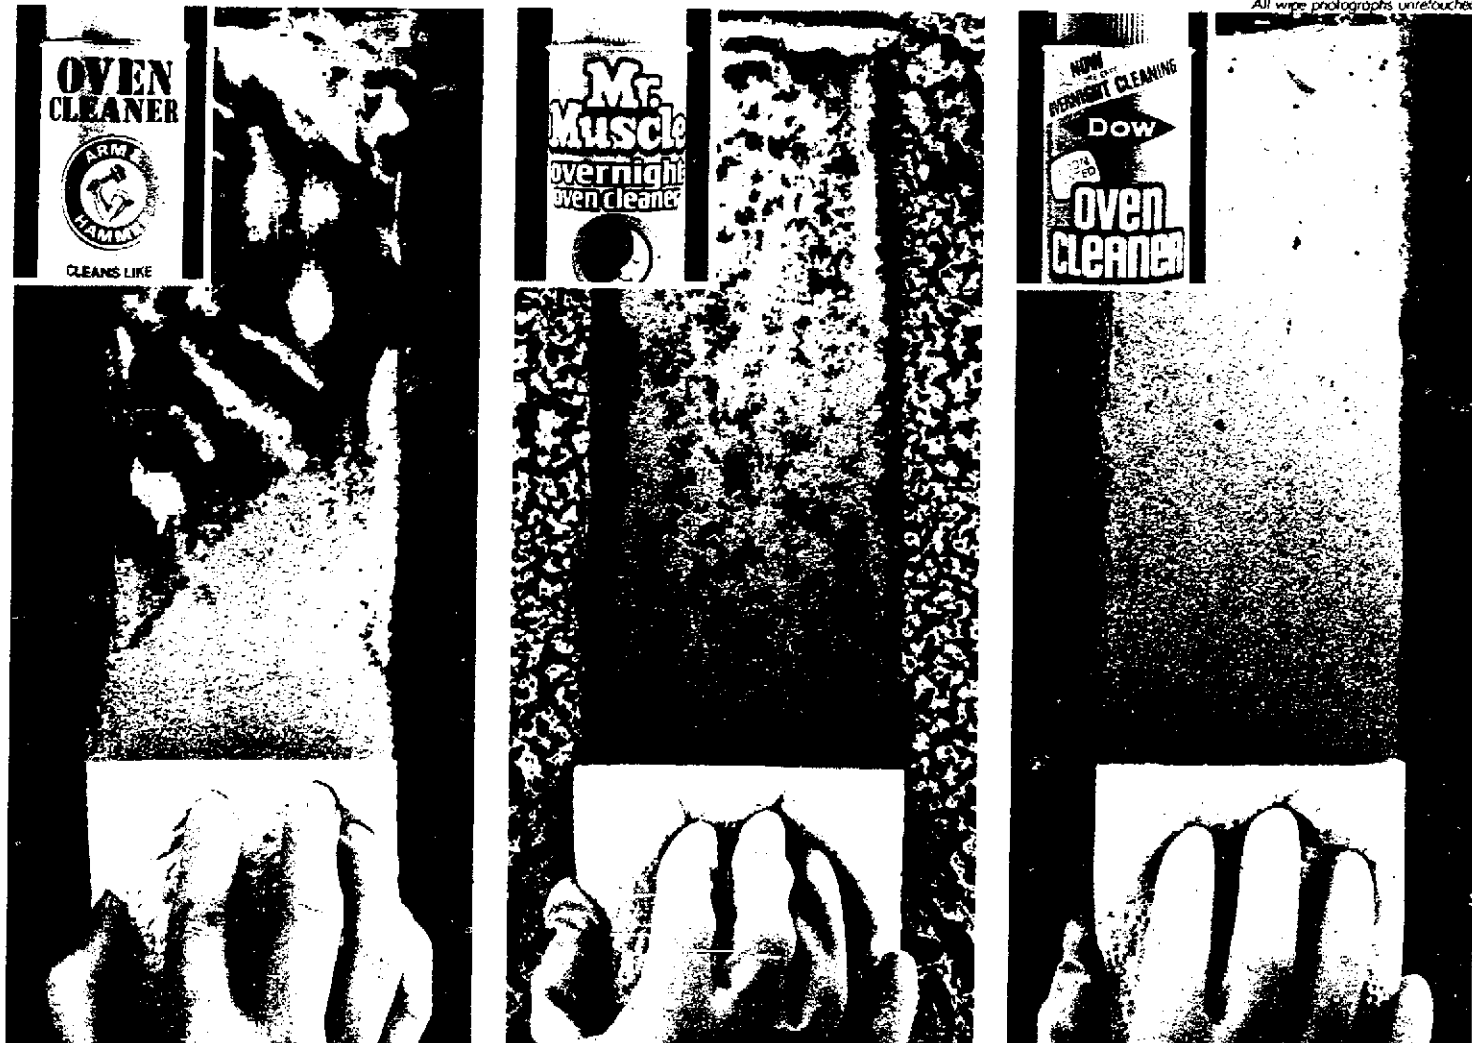

"We'll be upstairs in the White House," he points out, "and the President will have finished a speech on TV. He'll come upstairs and ask us kids what we thought of his talk. And all of us, especially his own kids will tell him the truth even if we disagree with him, which is frequently the case. Mrs. Ford and some of his advisers are more interested in how he looked and whether his tie was on straight and how he pronounced certain words. But the President doesn't care about that stuff. He's interested in the substance, and whether or not he got it across."

To date, the Ford kids are a credit to a patient, considerate father and a loving, industrious mother as well as to a former neighbor, Harriet Thorne, who looked after the Ford children all the many times their parents were out of town.

Michael Ford, 25, at a ski resort in Michigan with his wife Gayle, whom he married last July. The eldest child, he is introspective.

Women all over America said: DOW cleans better.

DOW preferred 7-1

over the cleaning performance of this new high temperature oven cleaner.*

DOW preferred 2-1

over the cleaning performance of this new overnight oven cleaner*

DOW: Overnight,

still the next best thing to a self-cleaning oven.

Recently, two groups of homemakers from all over the country tested well-known oven cleaners.

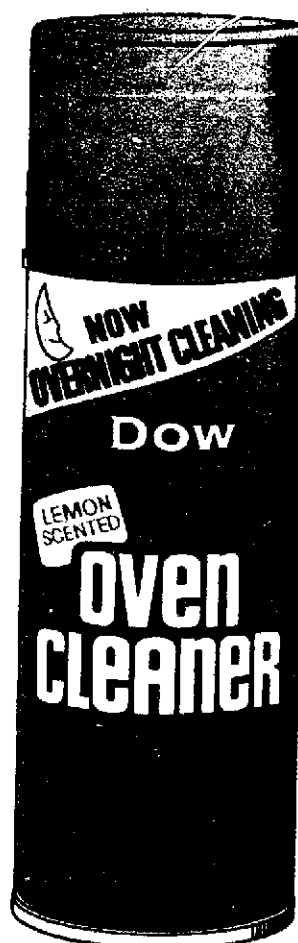

One group tested DOW Oven Cleaner overnight and the new high temperature cleaner in their own ovens. They were not told which was which.

Many preferred DOW because it didn't dry out, because it required less scrubbing and because it didn't need high heat.

And when it came down to cleaning power which, after all, is what oven cleaners are all about, it was seven to one in favor of DOW using the overnight method.

The second group tested DOW Oven Cleaner and the new overnight cleaner in their own ovens. They also were not told which brand was which.

Many said they preferred DOW because it dried out less and because it was easier to wipe out.

And when it came down to cleaning power this time, it was two to one in favor of DOW for overnight cleaning.

Use DOW in your oven for either daytime or overnight cleaning. Here is 20 cents just to try it.

DOW: Still the next best thing to a self-cleaning oven.

The girl who's warm and friendly and unworried

Some girls never seem to have any problems. They just stay lively and fun to be with all the time. Many girls like that depend on Tampax tampons. They give you more than enough menstrual protection for your normal needs to keep you worry-free.

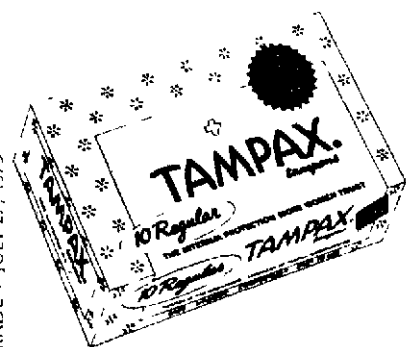

You're never concerned about odor either. Because when a tampon is in use embarrassing odor can't form. That's why we don't add a deodorant to Tampax tampons. Deodorants in a tampon are unnecessary and may be harmful to sensitive tissues.

And Tampax tampons are very soft. They're comfortable to wear. Never bulky. And nothing shows, so you don't have to be self-conscious even in the scantiest bikini.

You too can be unworried and life-loving every day of the month when you trust Tampax tampons.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Few people have been as adept as Phyllis Diller at making comedy out of appearance. Witness the bizarre clothing, and especially the hair, of which Phyllis says: "Last time I went to the hairdresser he teased my hair to the point where it wanted to attack him," adding dryly: "I have arthritis in my hair!"

And then, there's her character, husband Fang, a constant source of humor: "Fang is so cheap he didn't want to spend $2 for a marriage license until I convinced him it worked out to only two cents a pound."

Phyllis Diller is a star of television, nightclubs, movies, and a concert pianist. Here she is on herself, Fang, and the other troublesome influences in her life:

Fang has taken a terrible dislike to Howard Hughes. It all started when Mr. Hughes offered Fang a job.

Last week I sat in the waiting room at my doctor's office for so long I said to hell with it. I decided to go home and die a natural death.

When the Japanese tried to launch their first rocket into outer space it failed. Only the radio and camera worked.

To give you some idea of how unstable South American governments are—the last government I visited there was entirely staffed by Kelly girls.

Fang always has bad luck. He knocked on wood and a tree fell on him.

Fang's ancestors were all bronco busters, bear hunters, and lumberjacks, and the men were all bookkeepers.

Recently he crossed our canary with a carrier pigeon. Now it only sings songs with a message.

The closest I've ever come to suicide is marriage. On our honeymoon Fang swore he wouldn't drink while working and he hasn't touched a job since.

We do have a strange relationship. I always surprise Fang on our anniversary—I mention it. And he always asks for the same thing every Christmas—a divorce.

Fang is such a loser he was chased down the middle of the street by a bunch of hoodlums, and he was arrested for starting a parade without a license. At the station he was allowed one phone call—he called the police.

And Fang's brother—he's so stupid he opened a parking lot next to a drive-in restaurant. When that failed he opened up a matinee drive-in theater.

My parents hated me. When they took my baby pictures they put me on a live bear.

When I was a kid I had such a rotten voice I was singing in the tub and my rubber duck bit me.

I have vivid childhood memories. I remember one cold night my grandfather came home a bit juiced, fell over a frozen snake and said: "I gotta get a new cane, that one bites."

Last week I told Fang to spike the punch. The idiot dropped nails in the bowl.

Fang really has a split personality. When he goes into a restaurant alone he asks for separate checks.

A man got in the elevator with me last night and annoyed me all the way up. He kept trying to get out.

Illustrates virtually every nerve, organ, bone and muscle, 202 parts in all... Printed on Heavy-gauge, transparent acetate.

When illness threatens... can you recognize your body's "danger signals" before minor ailments become major medical bills?

NEVER BEFORE has there been a family medical book so practical to use... so easy to read and understand... so up-to-date as the Better Homes and Gardens FAMILY MEDICAL GUIDE. And now it has been revised and expanded to include a comprehensive illustrated Encyclopedia of

First Aid
Section Thumb-indexed for quick, fingertip reference.

Medical Terms Section... with 2,000 definitions to take the confusion out of hard-to-understand medical language. Yes, Better Homes and Gardens FAMILY MEDICAL GUIDE tells you how to give first aid, all about the problems of middle and old age, symptoms and treatment of stomach trouble, high blood pressure, menopause (and the seldom discussed "male menopause"), cancer, how to avoid infectious diseases (or recognize their symptoms in the earliest stages).

You are told about annoying allergies and hypersensitivities, crippling arthritis, nerves, strokes and heart attack, reproductive systems of male and female, operations, nutrition, liver, kidneys, intestinal disorders and urinary tract.

Clearly Illustrated throughout

Over 900 illustrations show you how your organs function, where they are located — and what happens when they fail to work properly.

Complete coverage, from children's diseases to health problems of old age
You get frank advice on female disorders, what to do about varicose veins, irregularities of the heartbeat (skipping a beat). You learn how to spot first signs of prostate trouble, scarlet fever, rheumatic fever, cancer of the breast, measles, appendicitis. You are given advice on special problems such as: pelvic disorders, congestive failures, ulcers, loss of vigor, even freckles. Plus special advice and information on arthritic conditions, skin problems, hearing difficulties, other health problems that affect older folks. Better Homes and Gardens FAMILY MEDICAL GUIDE has been prepared by 30 of America's most prominent physicians, surgeons, and specialists, doctors whose knowledge and opinions have earned them international recognition.

Updated with modern medical discoveries
Here is reliable information about medical advances that have captured newspaper headlines: new understandings of the causes and treatment of cancer; new progress in transplantation surgery; new facts about hepatitis, and mononucleosis. Plus facts every parent and young person will want to know about discoveries in heredity — will the baby be normal? — and vital information about drug abuse: what are the effects of narcotics, marijuana, the hallucinogens (mescaline, peyote, LSD), and many more topics of current concern.

You owe it to yourself and to your family to see this unique medical guide. Now you can examine it for 14 days FREE without obligation to buy it. If for any reason you return the book within this period, there is no charge; you pay nothing, owe nothing.

ADDED FEATURE!

Illustrated "Encyclopaedia of Medical Terms" Section makes everything crystal clear...

Do you know the difference between Arteriosclerosis and Atherosclerosis? (Both affect blood vessels and they are similar-sounding words, but they are not the same condition.)

Let's face it, doctors frequently assume their patients know what their professional diagnostic language means. But, more often than not, the layman is left "in the dark" wondering, and perhaps needlessly worried, by the frightening sounding terms the doctor uses. The Editors of Better Homes and Gardens feel there should be no mystery about any medical term, provided you have a clear, easy-to-understand explanation of what it means. And that is exactly what you get in your illustrated Encyclopedia of Medical Terms Section.

Here are 2,000 definitions to help you talk with ease and confidence to your physician... and understand exactly what his medical terminology means when he talks to you. Matters you may have hesitated to discuss — even with your doctor — no longer need be embarrassing, once you are able to describe them in clear, scientific language.

ERWIN KOSTEDDE IN ACTION

German Superstar

The most famous superstar in German football today—what we call soccer—is a wiry-haired, brown-eyed half-American of 28, Erwin Kostedde. His father is an unknown black G.I.

Kostedde—the German equivalent of our Joe Namath in skill and notoriety—is the star of the Offenbacher Kickers. When he was 20 he dropped out of big-time soccer for six months of wild living. "At the end of six months," he says, "I woke up without any money or friends."

Fortunately, a football manager took charge of Kostedde, talked some common sense into him, made him train rigorously. Today Kostedde is a member of the all-star German team, saves his money, will surely help defend the World Cup in 1977.

Kostedde is not particularly popular with the German football fans; they regularly insult him. He drives a $13,000 Mercedes, collects expensive oil paintings, and lives in a handsome apartment. "People who call me a black bastard," he says, "are just ignorant or jealous. I don't resent them. I just try harder to earn their respect by playing as well as I possibly can. My playboy days are over."

Skateboards Return

After lying dormant for 10 years, skateboarding is experiencing a dramatic comeback this summer. One reason being skateboards are safer today than they were a decade ago.

When skateboards were introduced in Southern California in 1965 they were equipped with Chicago clay wheels which did not take turns well, thus injuring many young people. Medical societies immediately denounced them as "children crippers." But skateboard technology has advanced and the boards are now being manufactured with urethane wheels, which take turns exceptionally well.

As more young people skateboard, sometimes known as sidewalk surfing, local communities are enacting ordinances to protect citizens on sidewalks and parking lots from "these road monsters."

Before communities kill off this sport, skateboard enthusiasts might consider asking their local governmental body to set aside areas specifically intended for skateboarding.

To date skateboarding is most popular on the West Coast and Florida.

Skateboards range in price from $8 to $60. The safest models are equipped with urethane wheels.

A New Breed of Governors Puts Zip Into State Government

by Robert Walters

In Wisconsin, Democratic Gov. Patrick J. Lucey recently told state agencies that they must operate on $4.5 million less during the coming year than they currently are spending. As part of his contribution to the economy drive, Lucey has moved from the governor's mansion into his own house, saving $50,000 a year.

In Iowa, Republican Gov. Robert D. Ray has slashed more than $300 million from this year's budget requests and has bluntly warned that government no longer can afford to spend extravagantly to cure society's ills:

"We must learn to say 'no.' Cause after cause has been presented to me—each one with a price tag on it. We cannot pay for all the government some of us would like to have. We must continuously ask: How much government can people afford?"

All across the country, governors are confronting a drastic financial squeeze fueled by inflation, a decline in tax revenues and pressure to maintain the tradition of generous government spending.

Until recently, many states had a comfortable surplus in their treasuries, in contrast to the federal government's growing debt. But according to one recent Congressional study, those surpluses will shrink this year to $3.9 billion from $6.5 billion.

That study, prepared by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, predicts that 17 states will be forced to levy increased taxes this year. In addition, 22 states will have to slash spending by $1.9 billion to keep their budgets in balance.

Gov. Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont

How critical the problem has become was pointed up at the recent National Governors' Conference in New Orleans. The discussions included repeated references to the financial straits of New York City and to the federal government's seemingly endless budget increases.

"We have a new breed of governors—people who are younger than in the past, who aren't afraid of hard work and who have developed a variety of innovative approaches to government," said Vermont Gov. Thomas P. Salmon, a Democrat. "But unlike the federal government, we cannot print money and, in many states, we cannot consciously program a deficit."

What is particularly striking is that many of the governors not only are talking about the problem but they are taking action to resolve it, often risking their reputations and political careers.

For example, when Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis moved into the Massachusetts Statehouse earlier this year he found that he had inherited a deficit of almost $500 million.

He also found a civil defense unit employing 90 people, including the wife of the agency's director. Most of that operation has now been dismantled and cut to 20 employees. An obscure bureau ostensibly created to check on fraudulent auto accident claims employed 52 people, most of them political appointees in make-work jobs. The bureau was abolished.

Dukakis stripped dozens of state officials of government cars and other expensive perquisites of office. The governor himself travels to work by subway, while Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III drives around Boston in a battered old Volkswagen.

In California, Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. surprised both liberals and conservatives by proposing a budget that calls for a growth rate in state spending half that of recent budgets by fiscally conservative Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Brown, who, like Wisconsin's Lucey, chose not to live in the governor's mansion, has reduced his office budget by $200,000 annually and is calling for drastic cuts in state programs.

This strong leadership is noteworthy because the nation's governors have generally been viewed as old-school politicians who did little more than serve as ceremonial leaders, appoint cronies to high-paying jobs and turn to Washington when they faced serious problems. But now there is a growing group of state executives providing high-caliber leadership.

The scope of their activities is demonstrated by these examples:

When the country faced a serious gasoline shortage during the winter of 1974, it was the governors—not the federal government—who ordered a 55-mph speed limit and alternate-day service at gas stations.

Similarly, Congress has enacted little of the legislation proposed to prevent future Watergates, but a number of governors have been pressing for legislation prohibiting conflicts of interest and requiring financial disclosure by public officials.

In Missouri, Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond pleaded with the state legislature to enact campaign reforms. Rebuffed three times, Bond joined a citizens' group in a drive to place the issue on the ballot through the petition process—and the measure was approved last autumn 4 to 1.

Until Republican James E. Holshouser Jr. took over as governor of North Carolina, the state relied upon a patronage system for highway construction and planning. The governor has ended that system.

Before, the highway commissioners frequently were major campaign contributors, and the way a county voted in the last election often determined whether it would get new or improved roads.

Gov. Daniel J. Evans of Washington

When governors and political reporters discuss state government, one name that inevitably crops up is that of Daniel J. Evans, a Republican from the state of Washington.

Evans' major accomplishments include effective and thoughtful leadership in environmental protection, fiscal reform, open government and assistance to minority groups.

Earlier this year, for example, when some governors wanted nothing to do with the Vietnamese refugees, Evans led the way in establishing the first statewide resettlement program, to provide assistance for as many as 500 refugees.

Like many other governors, Evans believes the federal government has become so bloated and bureaucratized that it no longer can effectively serve the needs of the people. He sees a shift in power, away from Washington's "enforced mediocrity" and back to state and local governments.

"We're getting more innovation, experimentation and risk-taking at the state level," echoes Wisconsin's Lucey. "It's certainly a lot cheaper and probably more efficient than having the federal government imposing untried programs on 200 million people."

Good Earth ALMANAC

MANY OF US are becoming more and more familiar with the old-time wild foods used by our ancestors, but one kind of wild food that is often overlooked is wild seeds. The Indians, and later the pioneers, learned to utilize many wild seeds for items ranging from flour to condiments such as the black mustard seed.

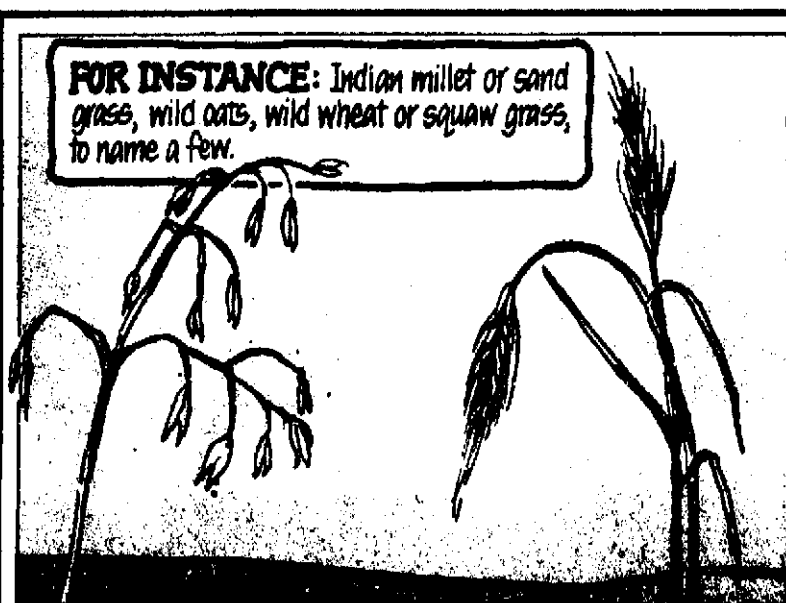

These are some of the seeds and their uses:

1. One of the most common plants is lamb's quarter. Usually thought of as only an excellent wild green, it also provides some great-tasting seeds. The tiny seeds can be gathered when ripe and used for an attractive "pumpnickel style" topping for biscuits and breads or for gruel and meal cakes. Gather as many seeds as you can and grind them using a rolling pin on a cutting board. Add water and boil to make a thick gruel. You can also prepare the seeds as above, then form into patties and bake over a slow fire for a great-tasting and unusual wild "bread." They have a taste somewhat like buckwheat.

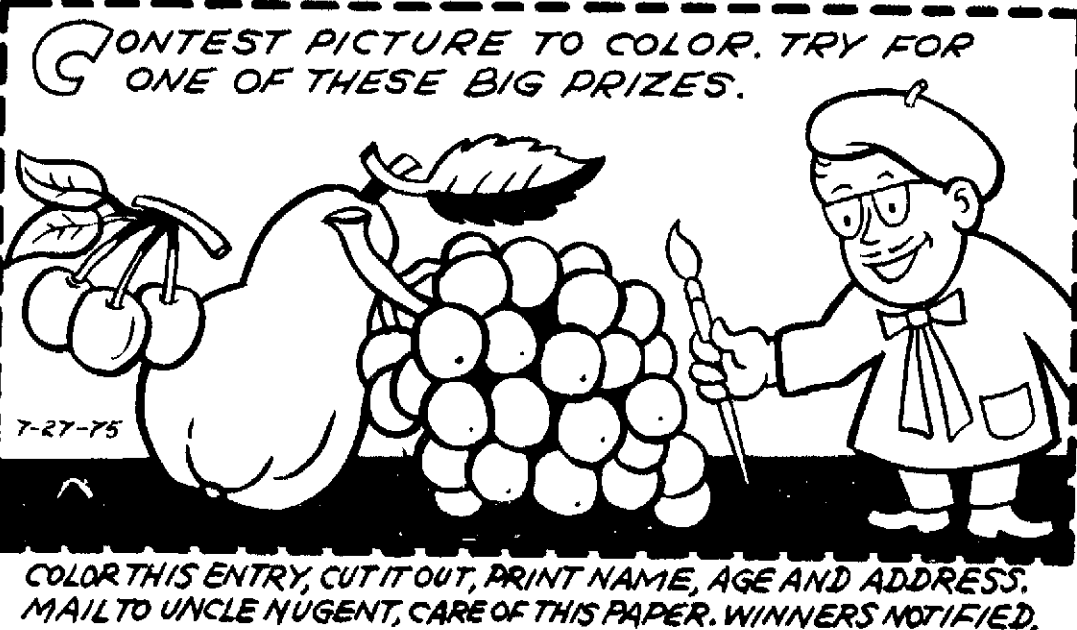

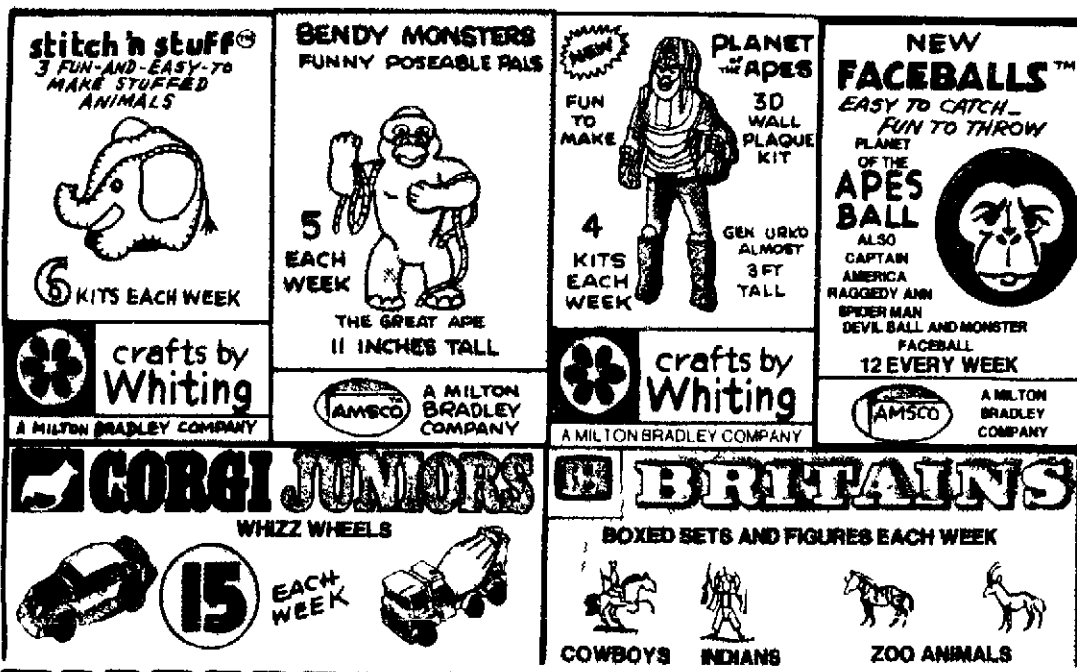

2. The green amaranth, also called pigweed, can be used in the same manner, and the tiny black seeds make an unusual gruel or cakes. If the flavor is too strong for your taste, mix the seeds with an equal amount of white flour.

3. One famous local plant is the chia, a form of sage plant often used by the Indians, which grows primarily in the Southwest. The seeds were collected and parched, then ground into meal.
